BATTLE AT MINE MACHINE GUNS MEET ATTACK

BARE $165,000 "LEAK" IN CITY GARBAGE DEALS

Who Reaps Profit? Not Chicago.

Between $165,000 and $200,000 profit has been scooped out of the garbage cans of Chicago during this last year of the Thompson administration.

This became known yesterday simultaneously with the discovery that the "garbage squeeze" has been under investigation by the state's attorney's office.

The profit did not go to the city. Chicago is the loser by a sum which may have been less than $165,000 and may easily mount into greater figures.

State's Attorney Maclay Hoyne wishes to know who got the money.

$15,000 a Month Lost to City.

Commissioner of Public Works Charles Francis has explained and indorsed the plan under which the "garbage squeeze" was operated. John T. Eberson has attempted to explain the profits. Among other things Mr. Eberson declared "Chicago's garbage isn't as good as that of other cities."

Francis, as commissioner of public works, sold the garbage. Eberson, who is an architect by profession, bought it. And Chicago has been losing something like $15,000 a month on its garbage products sales, though there is every symptom that the city treasury needs all the money it can get.

How the System Works.

According to investigators, the garbage scoop has been reduced to a system. The system is simple. Chicago collects its garbage at its own expense and transports it to the municipal reduction plant at Thirty-ninth and Iron streets. There, at its own expense, it extracts the grease and recovers the low grade fertilizer—thousands of dollars worth of highly valuable products.

The city's output of grease for the year ending July 1 was sold for $184,000. At the low market price it was worth $289,000. At the high market quotation it would total $346,000.

The city sold the grease $105,000 below the low market quotations and $161,000 below the high market quotations.

Eberson Biggest Buyer.

The buyer of this grease in most instances was Mr. Eberson. He has his architect's and garbage office in rooms 1-1-2 at 64 East Van Buren street. In the waiting rooms are pretty pictures of the Majestic theater in Dallas, Tex. the Strand theater in Chicago and the Victory hotel of Akron O. of which he was the designer.

Mr. Eberson gained his garbage experience as manager of the Chicago Reduction company a private corporation which disposed of the city's commercial wastes by the reduction process before the city decided to do it itself bought the company's plant and rebuilt it.

THE GREASE MINE

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

The hoisting of grease profits out of Chicago garbage cans did not get well under way until July, 1919. In the first two months of that year the city seems to have been making a diligent effort to get all of the grease in some possible, and it succeeded in a remarkable degree.

In January, 1919, the market quotation on garbage grease was 6 cents to 11 cents a pound. The city sold that month at 11.83 cents. Then the market slumped as low as 4½ cents, with a maximum of 6 cents, but the city during February sold at 11.91 cents. In March the city made no sales.

Then along came John Eberson, an architect. He says he was informed by a man in the public works department that the city was unable to dispose of its garbage products. He tendered his services, which were accepted and have been used almost exclusively ever since.

Prices Show Clash.

"The city was unable to dispose of its grease at any price and I bought the first lot at 4 cents," said Eberson. "I have been increasing the price ever since. I'm a price booster, not a price wrecker. I have reestablished the rep-

LEONARD BANKS ARRESTED AS $100,000 THIEF

Seek "Inside Man" in Mail Robbery.

Leonard Banks, burglar, safe blower, bank robber, and general all around criminal, was arrested last night in connection with the robbery of the mail pouch containing $100,000 Friday afternoon at the One Hundred and Eleventh street station of the Illinois Central railroad.

LEONARD BANKS.

Banks was found by the Cottage Grove avenue police. His picture was identified Friday night as that of one of the five robbers.

The police continued to hunt for Banks' known intimates — Edward "Spike" O'Donnell, his brother Walter, Egan Ranier, Willie and Eddie Touhy, owners of a machine believed to have been the one used in the robbery, and Frank "Beak" Bender, pal of "Spike" O'Donnell.

Seek "Inside Man."

The "inside" accomplice of the gang, who is believed to have told the robbers about the shipment of money and how easy it would be to steal it, is also being sought. The police say they have a clew to his identity.

Police announced that four men believed to be implicated in the robbery were held at stockyards station yesterday afternoon. Their names were withheld, but witnesses to the robbery were taken there to identify the men. The result was not given out.

Free Leo Murphy.

Leo Murphy, 1700 Park avenue, whose picture was partially identified as one of the robbers by William Muzynski and Frank Crawford, the two boys from whom the sack was stolen, turned up yesterday. He is a chauffeur now employed by the McKeown Transportation company. Police officials after questioning him released him. They do not believe he was implicated in any way.

The police and federal authorities were reënforced yesterday by private detectives in the employ of the St. Paul Fire and Marine Insurance company. The money shipment, it was said, was insured by this company under an open policy granted more than a year ago to the Merchants' Loan and Trust company. This policy, it is said, is in the form of a book of coupons. Whenever a shipment of money is made, a coupon is detached, filled out with the amount, and sent to the St. Paul home office.

Question Bank Employés.

Chief of Detectives James Mooney and Capt. Matthew Homer of the Kensington station declared themselves positive yesterday that the employés at the Illinois Central station, where the robbery took place, had no previous knowledge of the money shipment and were not implicated in any way in the crime.

They made a thorough check yesterday of all persons employed in the bank who had charge of making up the consignment and putting it in the mails, and planned to question everybody who knew that it was the custom for Chicago banks to send money to the Pullman bank by registered mail.

Policeman Shot Down as He Questions Two Men

Policeman William B. Cashman of the Hyde Park station sought to question two men last night at Forty-ninth street and Cottage Grove avenue. One of them shot him. At the Washington Park hospital physicians said that Cashmans wounds are serious.

Cashman, who lives at 8680 Vincennes avenue, has been a member of the department for fifteen years. Recently an order was issued to stop all suspicious characters and search them.

Cashman said before lapsing into unconsciousness that he met the two men about 11 o'clock, and that they offered no resistence when he called upon them to halt. He was nat satisfied with their stories. He began searching one of them. The other drew a revolver and shot him.

Neighbors heard the shot and telephoned the Hyde Park station. The flivver squad responded. Cashman was lying on the sidewalk, clutching his revolver.

"Go get them," he whispered, then told the story.

Search of the neighborhood had yielded no results early this morning.

POLES ENTRAP 90,000 REDS; TAKE SOLDAU

Soviet Force Fleeing Into Prussia.

BULLETIN.

WARSAW, Aug. 20.—(Delayed.)—(By the Associated Press.)—Eight German civilians who were alleged to have co-operated with the bolsheviki were shot by orders of the Polish military authorities.

BY GEORGE SELDES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[By Special Cable.]

BERLIN, Aug. 21.—The Danzig corridor is almost clear of Russians today.

The Russian retreat is on a big scale with the Red cavalry fleeing more before the Polish threat than from actual attacks.

Soldau is the most important city that has been observed. The German safety police are preparing to intern thousands of Russians who stepped over the border, north of Soldau.

Reports from the frontier, state it is possible that the bulk of the 90,000 Russian army strong, may be driven into internment. However, 30,000 Russian cavalry, escaping easily through the narrow door between the corridor and Ciechanow are using Mlawa as a base.

Many Poles Interned.

The Germans are worried because their only big internment camp already holes 3,000 Poles. They fear trouble may come when thousands of Russians arrive and are turn in among them. They are alarmed over Polish threats of revenge against Soldau, which is largely a German town, and over which was hoisted the German flag when the Russian General Rewa arrived and swore that the town would remain German. Polish aviators recently bombed the town and threw proclamations town, saying it would be wiped out because it welcomed the Russians.

The Poles now entering Soldau.

Terror is especially feared on account of the week's developments in Silesia where civil rather than international war is raging. Two thousand Poles marching into Kattowitz are said to be fighting the German police and killing many Germans. The German nation is aroused against the Poles.

Admit "French Victory."

German military experts agree that Poland has won a great victory which probably has saved the country. Full credit for the victorious strategy is given to the French. Reports from the East. Prussian border state that the Poles have captured Ciechanow and are besieging Mlawa.

Pomeranian troops have captured Strassburg in the Danzig corridor. It is also reported that the Russian forces have been cut in two, with their corridor wing surrounded by the Poles.

The new Polish offensive to the south has forced a crossing of the Bug river.

The most important development on the East Prussian front is the formation of the Pomeranian troops. This was begun independently last week when Warsaw practically was given up as lost. This action is compared with Gambetta's flight from Paris and formation of an army in South France in 1870. The Pomeranian forces threaten to destroy all Russian forces in the Danzig corridor wing.

"ENEMY IN DISORDER"

WARSAW, Aug. 20.—[By the Associated Press.]—A communication issued today says that Ciechanow, northwest of Warsaw, again is in Polish hands and the situation of bolshevik groups operating between the Vistula and the Prussian frontier is becoming more and more critical, with the Poles in pursuit of some of the enemy detachments which are retreating in disorder in the direction of Ostrow.

Brest-Litovsk has been occupied and the eastern forts garrisoned. Near Droniczyn the Poles captured the staff of the 17th bolshevik division, and also part of the staff and detachments of the 8th and 27th divisions.

Repel Lemberg Attacks.

On the southern front the bolshevik Gen. Budenny is attempting an encircling movement against Lemberg.

IF THE U. S. WERE IN THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS

(AS TOLD IN LONDON NEWS ITEMS.)

[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]

"The Hon. James J. Jiggitt, the American representative in the Council of the League of Nations, has arrived in London to attend the forthcoming sessions of the Council. He is accompanied by Mrs. Jiggitt and their daughter, Miss Edwina Jiggitt."

"The Hon. and Mrs. James J. Jiggitt dined last evening at Buckingham Palace with the King and Queen."

"Miss Edwina Jiggitt was presented at Court yesterday by the wife of the American ambassador. Miss Jiggitt is fast becoming a popular member in Mayfair and Belgravia society circles."

"One of the most charming young ladies to be seen at the polo matches at Hurlingham yesterday was the beautiful daughter of the Hon. James J. Jiggitt, America's representative on the League Council. Rumor is busy linking the name of the attractive young American with a certain young nobleman of the polo set."

"Lady Somersault's week end party at Ruthven House included many of the most brilliant members of younger society. It was expected that an interesting engagement would be announced, but the announcement has evidently been deferred."

"The question of American aid in men and money to protect British territory in Mesopotamia will come up before tomorrow's session of the Council of the League of Nations. The Council sessions will be held at Sunderland House. America's decision is awaited with interest."

STREET FIGHT FOLLOWS TALK AGAINST I. W. W.

A verbal attack upon bolshevism and the I. W. W.s made last night from an improvised platform in Washington Square provoked a fight and led to two riot calls being sent to the Chicago avenue police station. Order was restored only after several blows were struck and several participants suffered bloody noses or cut lips.

Robert Sawn, retired after eighteen years in the United States navy, was speaking for the United Americans, a patriotic organization that is conducting a crusade against bolshevism. Sam first attacked the bolshevists, then proceeded about the I. W. W.s

"The I. W. W.s are yellow dogs," he remarked. "If they are not contented with the present officials let them remove them by the use of the ballot."

As Sawn stepped from the platform several men rushed forward.

"What do you mean by talking about us that way. We are as good as the American Legion," shouted one.

In the altercation that followed some one struck Sawn in the face. Some of those in the crowd took his part, others sided with the I. W. W.s and about a dozen men were soon in a mixup.

Some one sent in a riot call and two patrol wagons arrived from the station nearby. The fighters fled.

"DYING FOR ERIN," SAYS M'SWEENEY

Starving Sinn Feiner Nears Great Divide.

BY JOHN BUTLER.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[By Special Cable.]

[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Aug. 21.—Determined to starve himself to death in Brixton prison, Terrence McSweeney, Sinn Fein mayor of Cork, received in his cell today the last sacraments of the Roman Catholic church. Prison authorities said tonight that his condition was critical.

The mayor's wife, who visited him in his cell this evening, says that her husband is dying and that he will not outlast the week. Mr. McSweeney, who was able to recognize his wife, soon lapsed into delirium, muttering over and over again, "Dying for Ireland."

Compared to St. Paul.

Mrs. McSweeney did not urge her husband to eat and thus save his life. Both she and the starving man's sister have refused steadfastly to do this.

Father Fitcher, the Roman Catholic chaplain, who administered the last sacraments, when asked whether he considered the mayor's act as suicide, replied:

"Yes, but a suicide of martyrdom, like that of St. Paul, who, as a hunger striker, died of starvation rather than eat bread from a pagan's hand. The martyrdom of St. Paul was for the sake of Christianity, but there are some political causes equally as exalted."

Mannix to Visit Cell.

This is the tenth day of this hunger strike, and the sinking condition of the sufferer is said to be due partly to weakness from pleurisy. The medical attendant says that even if his patient should partake of food now he would be too weak to escape tuberculosis. Archbishop Mannix of Australia intends to visit the starving man in his cell tomorrow to give him the pontifical blessing and to extend his personal sympathy.

RAID IRISH HOMES

DUBLIN, Aug. 21.—The homes of Arthur Griffith and other prominent Sinn Feiners were ransacked last night for private papers.

The executive committee of the Irish Labor party, in an appeal to British labor to stop the war with Ireland and holding them responsible if it continues, says: "The military governors whom you have placed over us calculate that the death of the lord mayor of Cork will lead to an uprising which can be suppressed only by wholesale slaughter."

West Virginia Strikers and Guards Clash

Charlestown, W. Va., Aug. 21.—A battle between striking miners and mine guards is in progress at Cirtsville, Raleigh county. Direct communication has been stopped by the cutting of telephone wires but other towns in the vicinity, some of them several miles away, report that the firing is plainly audible.

The last message which came out of Cirtsville was from Corp. Roads of the state constabulary, who reported to Col. Jackson Arnold, commander of the constabulary, that machine guns had been brought into play.

State Police Aid.

Corp. Roads, with one other member of the state police, is stationed at the scene of the trouble. In his report to the commander he said that striking miners of the Wierwood Coal company at Cirtsville were engaged in battle with the guards, and that miners of the Willis Branch Coal company had joined forces with the guards and were using machine guns. The corporal made no mention of casualties.

Several detachments of state troopers, including one at Beckley, have been ordered to proceed to Cirtsville at the earliest possible moment.

Dr. C. C. Lee, secretary of the Willis Branch Coal company at Glen Jean, told the Charleston Gazette by telephone at 10 o'clock tonight that the shooting could be heard in Glen Jean, ten miles from Cirtsville. He said that all efforts to get in touch with persons near Cirtsville had failed.

Wires Are Cut.

At 10:30 p. m. a representative of the Gazette talked with the Oak Hill Telephone company operator at Pax, two miles from the scene. She said it was "impossible to get any one at Cirtsville by telephone and it appears that the lines are down." She added that the shooting could be heard plainly at Pax.

There has been a strike of miners in progress in the New river district, including employés of the Weirwood operations, since last November. It is a part of district No. 23, United Mine Workers of America, with headquarters at Beckley, county seat of Raleigh county.

WINTER OVER BY TUESDAY, SAYS CLIMATE EXPERT

"Yes, take it all in all," said the local authority on climate last night, "it has been an ideal winter—I mean summer. Boy, close that darn window!"

The weather propagandist was speaking of the drop in temperature that made the citizens of the world's greatest summer resort dig out their raincoats and their sweaters and flannels.

The summer was going along nicely. Friday afternoon the thermometer was 89. Then came one inch and a quarter of rain, and the mercury started falling. In twenty-four hours it had fallen 25 degrees—and it was continuing the descent.

"It will be 60 or a little below tomorrow morning," said the climate expert, "but the sun will shine and the mercury will rise a little on Monday. By Tuesday the temperature will be normal again."

U. S. SOCIALISTS O. K. REDS, MINUS DICTATORSHIP

Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 21.—Indorsement of the third internationale, with certain reservations, by the Socialist party of the United States, was announced here today by the executive committee. A referendum under instructions of the national convention held in New York last May produced that result. It was also announced that the party, in another referendum, had declared against adoption of the "dictatorship of the proletariat," as practiced in Russia.

Missing Boys Tell of "Kidnaper" Adventures

Albert Deilke, 14, of 7227 South Paulina street, and his cousin, William Scheitler, 12, of 6752 South Aberdeen street, are home again. They had been missing a week. They were found yesterday in Interlochen, Mich., and told a thrilling tale of a kidnaper in a black automobile who took them to a farm and kept them prisoners.

FUGITIVE ANTIS AND INJUNCTION BALK SUFFRAGE

Solons in Alabama to Prevent Quorum

Nashville, Tenn., Aug. 21.—Although Tennessee's ratification of the federal woman suffrage amendment stood on the legislative record of the lower house of the legislature tonight as finally confirmed, a snarl of legal and legislative technicalities remained to be disposed of before the action can be certified.

Suffrage supporters, who had ridden roughshod in the house during the day over every obstacle thrown in their way, claimed full legislative triumph. They declared that only a temporary injunction secured by the antis prevented immediate certification to Secretary Colby at Washington.

On the other hand, Speaker Walker, leader of the opposition, and many of his lieutenants said the suffragists had ruined their cause and that even should the courts eventually hold ratification legal, litigation would so delay a final decision that the amendment would not figure in the November election unless some other state ratified it.

Members Flee to Alabama.

Meanwhile, twenty-five members of the house opposed to suffrage were in Decatur, Ala., evading service in the house for the avowed purpose of preventing any legislative action in the state until a new legislature shall have been elected in November. They hurried across the state line in a body early today before the house convened.

The restraining order, granted by Judge Langford of the chancery court, is returnable in five days. It was issued on an application contending that under the state constitution this legislature has no power to pass on the suffrage amendment.

Gov. Roberts and other officials were forbidden to certify to Washington that ratification had been completed and speakers of the senate and house restrained from taking any action toward ratification until the matter is heard by the court.

House Seven Short of Quorum.

When the house met this morning all the suffragists and a sprinkling of the opposition members were in their seats. A roll call showed fifty-nine members present, or seven short of a quorum. Speaker Walker declared a recess and ordered the sergeant at arms to arrest absentees. The official reported that none of the missing members appeared to be in the city.

T. K. Riddick, suffragist floor leader, declaring that action on the suffrage amendment was not a state but a federal matter, and that the state laws as regards a quorum of the house did not apply, moved that the Walker motion for reconsideration be called from the journal and acted upon. Speaker Walker requested him to put the motion in writing that it might be spread on the journal. It was done.

Puts Suffragist in Chair.

Walker ruled the motion out of order for lack of a quorum, and added that the injunction just served upon him also stood in the way. On an appeal the house failed to sustain the ruling and Walker called Representative Joe Odle, suffragist, to the chair.

Odle ordered a roll call on Riddick's motion for reconsideration. Walker made a point of order that there was no quorum, but was ignored and the suffragists defeated the motion to reconsider by a vote of 50 to 9.

Riddick then moved that the house transmit to the senate in the usual manner the senate joint resolution ratifying the amendment. Again Walker made a point of no quorum and also challenged the right of the speaker pro tem. to put any motion relating to the amendment in view of the "injunction restraining the speaker of the house."

Again Odle ignored Walker, ordered the roll call and the motion carried 50 to 0, the antis not voting. Adjournment until Monday afternoon then was taken.

34 Fugitives in Decatur.

Decatur, Ala., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—"We will remain in Decatur until the people of Tennessee have been given a chance to express their sentiments on suffrage. We feel that they have not yet voiced their opinion and we intend to see that they have an opportunity to do so."

TO WOMEN AND MEN, TOO: REGISTER! IF YOU ARE NOT ALREADY REGISTERED | ONLY REGISTRATION DAY BEFORE THE PRIMARIES WEDNESDAY, AUG. 25

This was the statement made this afternoon by F. S. Hall of Nashville, leader of the filibustering party of the Tennessee legislature, who arrived here today.

The members lounged about hotel lobbies, determined to "remain until the people of Tennessee have expressed themselves." Four are Republicans and the remainder Democrats. Each wears a red rose on his lapel, emblematic of his opposition to suffrage. Some of the roses were somewhat faded tonight.

URGED TO REGISTER

"Register Wednesday, you Illinois women, if you hope to vote in the most important election of 1920."

This is the warning that was shot out to the women of Chicago and Illinois last night from the headquarters of the National Republican party at 109 North Dearborn street.

Attorney General Edward J. Brundage sounded the call to arms.

"Women should not wait to see if they are granted full power to vote by the official proclamation of the adoption of the federal suffrage amendment," he said. "They should register Wednesday, because it is a substantial certainty that they will have equal voting power with the men by Sept. 15, the date of the primary. In any event women may vote for candidates in the September primary that makes it vitally important for them to register, even though some technical delay keeps them from full participation in primary rights."

Parties Vie in Attention.

Political organizations representing all of the factions and elements proceeded yesterday upon the theory that the women are to have every advantage in the legal preliminaries that are certain to reach determination before the polls open at the statewide primaries of Sept. 15. It looked like a horse race to show which political element might do the most for the fresh flock of voters.

Chief Clerk James F. Sullivan of the board of election commissioners said that the women will have every benefit of the doubt until Sept. 5. "We can wait until Sept. 5, if that delay is necessary, to prepare the ballots and arrange for women to participate fully and on equal terms with the men for the Sept. 15 primary. That is the instruction from County Judge Burns, and will be followed to the letetr by the board of election commissioners. We proceed upon the belief that the proper federal proclamation will be made by the secretary of state at Washington on or before Sept. 5. Of course, we will be prepared for any other emergency that may arise, legal or otherwise, delaying the proclamation."

Factions Are Busy.

The contesting Republican elements were in continuous session yesterday preparing for the women's registration of Wednesday. The city hall county committee had its members in a meeting, and the orders were to put on every available woman's vote when the books open Wednesday morning.

Anti-Thompson women are to hold a massmeeting at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning in the Francis I. room of the Congress hotel to inaugurate a thirty-six hour drive to register every woman who stands ready to vote for the candidates opposed to the city hall list.

During the day Attorney General Brundage sent to Secretary of State Emmerson a formal opinion that the proclamation of the suffrage amendment would automatically repeal Illinois laws in conflict with it. He mentioned particularly the law that provides the votes of men and women must be kept in separate ballot boxes. Enforcement of this statute, he held, would be unnecessary at the approaching primary and election and disregarding it would save the state considerable expense.

INDIANA WOMEN READY.

Indianapolis, Aug. 21.—No additional legislation is needed in Indiana to give approximately 750,000 Hoosier women the ballot next November. A special session of the legislature recently made all necessary provisions, even down to the appointment of extra precinct clerks.

To Tally New Voters.

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 21.—The city council is expected to appropriate $165,000 to assess and register women of voting age when it meets Monday. House to house assessment probably will start Wednesday.

Cleveland Adds 50 Precincts.

Cleveland, O., Aug. 21.—Fifty new voting precincts have been established and new booths are being built to accommodate new women voters. Approximately 50,000 women now have the right of franchise in Cleveland. The city expects to spend $30,000 for the extra election facilities required.

All Set in Oklahoma.

Oklahoma City, Okla., Aug. 21.—No additional steps are necessary to permit women of Oklahoma to vote next November, because the 1917 session of the legislature passed a state suffrage amendment.

WARSAW SINGS AS PRISONERS MARCH THROUGH

BY PARKE BROWN.

[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]

WARSAW, Aug. 18.—Where two days ago one saw only small groups of bolshevik captives marched through the streets of Warsaw, they now are pouring in by hundreds. Several columns containing about 500 each were seen today.

The effect of these sights and the continuation of good news from the front has been tremendous. The exodus from the capital has stopped, refugee wagons becoming infrequent sights. Some even are seen returning to the north. In a military way the effect produced is similar. While previously one could detect here and there a note of perfunctoriness in the almost constant singing of the soldiers marching toward the front, today there is a tone of confidence and combativeness in the voices both of veterans and of recruits.

There is only one expression of anxiety heard in Warsaw, but that is nothing like fear. On the Gallician front two Red divisions threaten a close approach to Lemberg, but regrouping of the Polish forces there now is taking place, which military experts feel confident will place the Reds in a pocket, as was the case with other Red units which outstripped their own communications.

'WOMAN JURY TO MAKE LIVES OF HUSBANDS SAFER'

Prepare Plans to Call New Electors.

Any Chicago woman who contemplates shooting her husband confident that a Criminal court jury would exonerate her should remember one fact—the juries of the near future will in all probability be comprised of men and women.

"And when women judge members of their own sex," remarks Judge Frank Johnston Jr., "it is a sure thing that no mere sentimentality will effect the prisoner's release. Women jurors will vote to convict a guilty woman every time."

The ratification of the suffrage amendment by the required number of states duly qualifies women as legal voters. The statute relative to the choice of jurors states that they shall be chosen from electors possessing necessary legal characteristics. The suffrage amendment places women on a legal par with masculine voters. They are electors.

Too Lenient Toward Men?

Chicago attorneys are practically unanimous in agreeing that women are now eligible to serve in the jury box.

"However," Judge Johnston says, "there are a great many difficulties in the way of having mixed juries and very likely the whole matter will have to be worked out by experimentation."

Then there is the question whether women are too inclined to permit their emotions to guide their decisions as to make them capable of meting out justice. Francis Walker, 5222 University avenue, prominent attorney, believes women would display leniency, especially toward men.

"I think women might well try civil cases if judges were careful to explain the points of law," he says, "but when it comes to criminal action I'm not so sure what the result would be."

Jury commissioners suggest that women might be impaneled to serve only in cases where members of their own sex were on trial.

Jury Commissioners Act.

The greatest difficulty now apparent is that incident to making up the list of feminine electors eligible for jury service. Present lists of the electors are obtained from the directories. An exceedingly small percentage of women voters, however, are now carried in the Cook county directories, it is said. Hence such lists would be inadequate. Another plan is to obtain the list from that taken at the polls. The objection is the same. Less than 75 per cent of the new electors will vote.

The matter will be thrashed out at the Monday meeting of the commissioners. It is not unlikely that they will decide women are eligible to jury service, but it may require several months to make out the list of those eligible.

ARMENIA CLEARS WAY TO TURKEY FOR RED TROOPS

BY JOHN CLAYTON.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[By Special Cable.]

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 21.—Through the force of necessity Armenia has finally given official consent to the passage of bolshevik troops through her territory into Turkey. Faced with a threat of military action from Baku, where the Reds now have 60,000 troops, they signed an agreement permitting Red troops to pass through the Arax valley to Nakitchevan and thence to Turkish territory.

Several detachments had entered Turkey before the agreement was signed. Immediately after its signing 800 cavalrymen took march and they have reached Bayazid, near Erzeroum.

The Turkish-bolshevik conference has just been concluded at Baku and promises of immediate military assistance have been given to Kemal. The Turkish Nationalists were represented by Halil Pasha, and Djenal Pasha, who had come from Berlin by way of Moscow.

While the definite terms of the agreement are unobtainable, it is understood that the Reds will undertake to supply Kemal with munitions as well as troops.

POLES TO PARADE LOOP TO WARN OF BOLSHEVISM

American citizens of Polish descent are arranging a gigantic demonstration to be held in the downtown district today. A parade will be held at 1:30 o'clock in which banners and signs warning the people against bolshevism and bolshevik propaganda will be displayed. Streamers containing statements that the cause of Poland is being misrepresented deliberately to deceive the American public will be carried.

The parade will proceed from Randolph and Halsted streets to Michigan avenue and Congress street. A mass meeting in the Auditorium will be held, and overflow meetings will be addressed in Grant park and in Congress street.

Judge Orrin N. Carter, Judge Frank Johnston Jr., Chief Justice Harry Olson, Archbishop George W. Mundelein, John F. Smulski, Judge Edmund K. Jarecki, Dr. Casimir Zurawski, and others will speak.

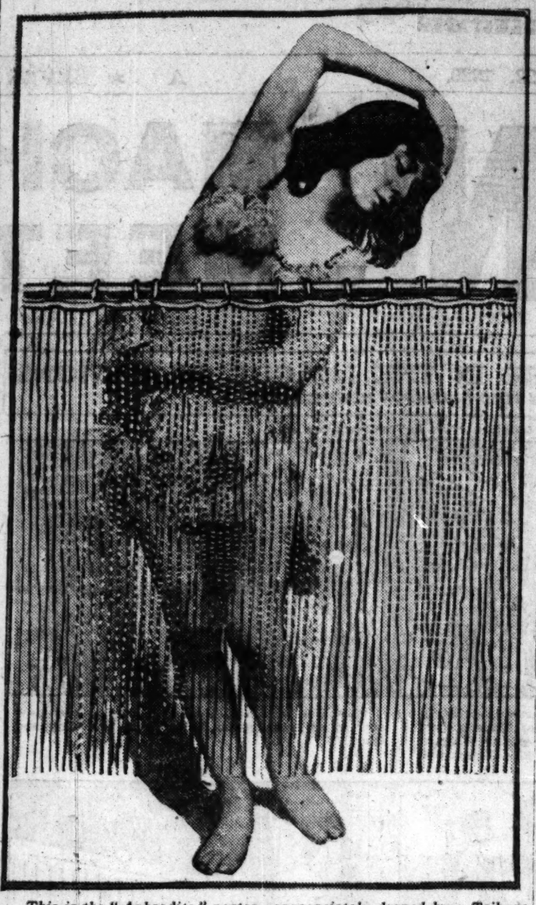
YANKS STRANDED IN MOSCOW SEE NO AID FROM U. S.

HELSINGFORS, Aug. 21.—Nothing can be done to rescue Americans stranded in Moscow, in the opinion of American diplomatic, military and Red Cross authorities here. They assert any attempts to help them probably would increase their difficulties. Red Cross workers in Finland and Baltic states extend their operations up to the boundaries of soviet Russia, and hope to get food into Moscow for the Americans, but there are many difficulties.

BRIGGS BREAKER BURNS.

Scranton, Pa., Aug. 21.—The Briggs breaker of the Scranton Coal company, controlled by the New York, Ontario and Western railroad, was burned today.

WARNING: SKIP THIS!



This is the "Aphrodite" poster—appropriately draped by a Tribune artist with a fitting sense of modesty—which a city censor yesterday barred from a loop window.

The press agent for the theatrical spectacle "Aphrodite," which will have its Chicago premiere Sept. 11, smiled contentedly and grabbed a telephone yesterday when Fred G. Hirsch, a city censor, put the ban on a water color painting advertising one of the big scenes of the show.

The picture, displayed in the window of the Tysen Theater Ticket service at 72 West Randolph street, caused the eyes of a citizen to bump against his shell rimmed spectacles. He hurried to Chief Censor Phillip Crippen, who sent Mr. Hirsch to investigate.

The water color Aphrodite, the citizen reported, would bring a blush to any cheek. The original Aphrodite was a staid old lady compared to the daughter of the paint brush, he insisted.

Although Mr. Hirsch pronounced the picture "not so awful bad," he nevertheless found it bad enough to order it out of the window.

"She has on some clothes, but not enough—a bit risque, a bit naughty, you know," was his description.

60 DAY CLAUSE SAVES FLAT AND RENT TO TENANT

City Lawyer Ends the Plight of Cop.

Patrolman David Ransfrod, Grand Crossing station, believes he has the laugh on his new landlord by reason of a bit of legal advice which Assistant Corporation Counsel Morton S. Cressy handed out yesterday.

Ransford has lived in an apartment at 5404 Maryland avenue for fourteen years. He has been paying $32.50 a month rent, the former owner of the building, John Schacht, refusing to accept the policeman's offer of $37.50 because Ransford did his own decorating.

New Owner Raises Rent.

But the building was purchased by Gilbert J. Baillargeon Jr. a few months ago and, according to Ransford, the rent was ordered raised to $52.50. Baillargeon added, the policeman says, that he planned to sell the building and the new owner would demand $60 a month.

On Aug. 19 a registered letter from Baillargeon gave the policeman formal notice that he must vacate the apartment Oct. 1. Ransford hurried to Mr. Cressy for advice.

"Your old lease has a clause which requires sixty days' notice to vacate," said Mr. Cressy after reading the lease. "You were given only forty-three days' notice. Sit tight and let the landlord do his worst. In my opinion you can hold the flat until Oct. 1, 1921, at a rental of $32.50 a month."

Read Over that Lease.

Mr. Cressy advises all tenants to read their leases carefully. Only a small percentage of tenants take the trouble to read them, he says, and often exorbitant rent-increases may be avoided by hiring an attorney to study leases.

Mr. Cressy is at work on a legal opinion to convince Gov. Lowden that a special session of the state legislature could give Chicago power to curb rent profiteers and that such a delegation of police power would be constitutional. The opinion will be ready early next week, Mr. Cressy said yesterday.

Divorced from One Tennis Star, Woman Weds Another

Speed is not lacking in the matrimonial service of Mrs. Margaret Burdick, divorced wife of Chicago tennis star, and herself an able player. On Aug. 3 Mrs. Burdick filed suit for divorce in the district court at Reno, Nev. Eight days later she obtained a decree after testifying that Ralph Burdick was unable to support her and spent all of his salary on tennis instead of his home.

Yesterday a marriage license was issued at Reno to Mrs. Burdick and Charles L. Johnson Jr. The latter is also a tennis player of national renown. Rumor had previously linked his and Mrs. Burdick's name together.

POLES ENSNARE 90,000 REDS; CAPTURE SOLDAU

Soviet Forces Flee Into Prussia.

The Poles defending Lemberg again have inflicted a serious defeat on Budenny's cavalry. The report says a battle is in progress to prevent the Reds from crossing the Dnieper at Mikolajow as part of the bolshevik maneuvers against Lemberg.

The communication further announces that since the offensive started more than 18,000 prisoners have been taken.

THE TRAP CLOSING

PARIS, Aug. 21.—[By the Associated Press.]—In the principal theater of operations on the Polish front the Poles are debouching from Demblin and advancing in the direction of Brest-Litovsk. They have reached the valley of the middle Bug. The prisoners taken by the Poles in the last few days aggregate 19,000. The large amount of war material has not been estimated. Many guns, with their carriages, have been abandoned in the forests.

The chief operations are going on the fork of the Narew and Bug rivers, from which the bolshevik troops, defeated before Warsaw, are retiring hastily. The Polish army advancing in the direction of Ostralenka has as its objective the cutting of communications between the bolshevik center and right. Thus it is between Ostralenka and Lomza, on the marshy land bathed by the Narew, that the enemy probably will make his last effort before the fate of the Red army in the north, the situation of which is extremely grave, is decided.

Follow Old Czar's Tactics.

In imitation of the maneuver executed in 1831 by Nicholas I., the bolsheviki have withdrawn a strong section of their forces to attack Thorn and Wloclawek, across the Vistula, and cut communications between Danzig and Warsaw. These troops have encountered a fresh Polish army formed in Posnania and Pomerania, which debouched from Graudenz and Thorn.

Meanwhile, another army, under direction of Gen. Billotte, advancing from Modlin, has attacked them from the south. Finally a third army, under Gen. Hikorski, is defending the Narew river, endeavoring to cut off these troops from their single road of retreat in the north.

Scattered over nearly one hundred miles along the frontier of East Prussia, between Strasbourg and Ostralenka, these Red forces seem condemned to annihilation unless they take refuge on Prussian territory.

Seek to Divert Pressure.

In order to diminish the pressure in the main theater of operations between the Narew and the Bug the bolsheviki have undertaken a demonstration on the Galician front, attacking the Polish and Ukrainian positions on the Stripa. Their cavalry has crossed the upper courses of the Bug and Cossack patrols are appearing some leagues before Lemberg. This operation, however, is considered in military quarters as too belated to effect any change in the situation on the middle Bug or to affect the issue of the battle now going on north of the Narew, in which the fate of the main bolshevik armies apparently is being decided.

The high Polish command is reported to be fully aware that the forces of the bolsheviki have taken precautions to prevent a surprise.

GERMANS WOULD PROFIT

BY WALTER DURANTY.

[Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.]

[Copyright: 1920.]

PARIS, Aug. 21.—The Germans are doing their utmost "to play up" the Red peril in Germany. Since the Polish victory the German hatred of France and Poland has adopted a subtler form that the triumphant proclamation of agreement between Germany and Russia which will soon make the Versailles treaty another "scrap of paper."

The German dispatches paint the situation in upper Silesia in the darkest terms. The fighting is said to be incessant at Kattowitz and phantom Polish armies are reported to be slaughtering German security police and civilians under the approving eyes of French troops. The French say they only preserve order.

Poles Offer Big Problem.

Some think the Poles themselves are likely to be carried away by the enthusiasm of victory. Liberte's correspondent, cabling on the 17th from the midst of the victorious Polish army at Novominsk, ends his dispatch:

"Who knows if this first stroke of Weygand's is not the first of a brief series that will lay low the bolshevik edifice?"

The extent to which France and Great Britain would agree on an aggressive Polish campaign is problematical in view of reports from London that Lloyd George is about to address a warning to the Poles not to cross the ethnographic frontier.

Russia Demands More.

LONDON, Aug. 21.—[United Press.]—Additional demands have been made upon Poland by Russia, according to the terms submitted Thursday at Minsk and made public here by M. Kameneff, bolshevik trade commissioner. These demands, which hitherto had not been made public, included:

Creation of a Polish "civic militia," composed of workers, to be armed with the surplus munitions demanded from Poland by Russia.

Poland shall not allow troops of any foreign state to enter or remain on Polish territory.

Poland shall return all rolling stock, cattle, and other materials removed from Russian territory.

The Poles read a declaration that they do not desire war, only occupying territory to give the people therein the opportunity for self-determination.

Lieut. J. S. Gilmore is in command of the boat now in Chicago, while Capt. E. E. Murphy is in charge of the mine laying operations.

New Slavic States Form Alliance for Defense

VIENNA, Aug. 20.—A new grouping of the Balkan states on a defensive basis is regarded as an accepted fact by the Vienna newspapers, which already have christened it "The little entente."

A treaty, described as principally defensive, was signed at Belgrade yesterday between Czecho-Slovakia and Jugo-Slavia. It is expected here that this treaty soon will be followed by Roumania's entrance into the circle, and the departure of the Bulgarian premier, Stambulowski, for Belgrade is believed to indicate that it is Bulgaria's intention to join the new combination.

FIRST RADIO TO CIRCLE WORLD IS RECEIVED IN U. S.

Gigantic French Station Is Tribute to Yankees.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 21.—The first wireless message "to be heard around the world" was received today by Secretary Daniels from the Lafayette radio station at Bordeaux, France.

The message was the first to be sent from the Lafayette station, the largest in the world, which has just been completed by the United States navy and is undergoing official test before being turned over to the French government for operation. The message received by Secretary Daniels follows:

"This is the first wireless message to be heard around the world, and marks a milestone on the road of scientific achievement."

Secretary Daniels Replies.

In a radio reply the secretary said: "Congratulations upon the successful completion of the gigantic radio station named for that distinguished Frenchman whom all Americans honor. Designed to serve a military purpose, it will now serve to bind closer the cordial relations which have always existed between France and the United States.

"On behalf of the United States navy I desire to express my pleasure upon the achievement of the Lafayette radio station in transmitting the first message to be heard around the world. We are happy to recognize in this powerful signal a symbol of that force and sympathetic understanding with which the voice of France shall be heard by its sister republic."

13 NORTH SIDE HOMES ROBBED BY TRINKET THIEF

Spurns All Rich Loot; Baffles Police.

Thirteen well known Chicagoans, among them John F. Hagey, vice president of the First National bank; Dr. Frank T. Andrews, Thomas Tagney, real estate operator; Sterling Morton, secretary of the Morton Salt company, and Dorr E. Felt, president of the Felt & Tarrant Manufacturing company, have been the victims within the last three weeks of a burglar who operates in the two square blocks bounded by Barry and Wellington avenues, Sheridan road and Broadway.

The value of the loot has not been great, the robber apparently being content to steal trinkets and small amounts of money, although thousands of dollars' worth of jewelry, silver, and furnishings were at hand.

List of Victims.

A partial list of his victims follows.

THOMAS TAGNEY, 426 Barry avenue: Burglar entered through a rear window two weeks ago and stole a rug of small value, a few dollars and some trinkets. Three other attempts have since been made, but Mr. Tagney has frightened the man away.

DR. FRANK T. ANDREWS, 448 Barry avenue: Two attempts made prior to last Monday night when the burglar entered by breaking in the front door. Stole a fountain pen and a roll of bandages. Mrs. Andrews was awakened and believing it to be her husband, called out and the robber fled. The Andrews family is now in New England.

J. F. HAGEY, 537 Barry avenue: Thief entered through a rear window last Wednesday night and stole a few dollars lying on a dresser in Mr. Hagey's room. Mr. Hagey awakened and the burglar fled.

Fails on Friday, the 13th.

STERLING MORTON, 528 Wellington avenue: Burglar frightened away by Mr. Morton before he could steal anything on Friday, Aug. 13. One attempt since to break in, but unsuccessful.

DORR E. FELT, 432 Wellington avenue: Two attempted robberies.

F. H. HERHOLD, president of the Herhold Furniture Co., 536 Barry avenue: Three attempts to break in frustrated by the awakening of some member of the family. Last attempt Friday night.

ALBERT O. FISHER, president of Albert O. Fisher & Co., 445 Barry avenue: Robber broke into garage at rear of Mr. Fisher's home last Sunday night and stole the spare tire on the machine and some accessories.

Frightened Away.

JOSEPH C. WEBB, 527 Barry avenue: On Sunday night, August 8, burglar broke into the house, but was frightened away.

HERMAN ARNOLD, 534 Wellington avenue: Three attempts but none successful.

HOME at 524 Barry avenue: Broken into during absence of family; every room ransacked, but little of value taken.

THE ROSS APARTMENTS, 523-525 Barry avenue: The flats of three tenants broken into and robbed of rugs, trinkets and small amounts of money within the last two weeks.

Burglar Seen Several Times.

The burglar has been seen many times. Janitors have seen him in the rear of their buildings. Pedestrians have glimpsed him as he merged into the shadows, the police have spied him vaulting over six-foot back fences, victims have chased him away. He is described as very tall and slim, youthful and agile.

Apparently he is an amateur. He passes by valuable plate to pick up a few dollars.

He rolls up and takes away cheaper rugs and leaves orientals. He takes worn suits of clothes, but spurns furs and elegant attire. He removes tires and accessories from automobiles but leaves the cars.

Lieut. James E. Doherty of the Sheffield avenue station has detailed six patrolmen to the district to aid the regular men in their hunt for the burglar. Two nightwatchmen of the Buena Park night patrol detective service are employed by the residents.

ALL IS NOT ORANGE JUICE THAT LOOKS YELLOW IN BOTTLES

Washington, D. C., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—Now comes the department of agriculture to take the joy out of life in these prohibition days with a warning to the public that all is not orange juice that is orange colored.

"Nor is it orange juice because it comes in a bottle with an attractive picture of that fruit on the label," says the bureau of chemistry in an official statement.

"The wise in this era of soft drinks read the label critically before they buy or drink the contents of a bottle," the advice of the federal food officials goes on.

"The juice of the orange is one of the most healthful of beverages. It contains organic acids of medicinal value and substances known as vitamines which are essential to health. But the trouble is that many of the so-called orange drinks which are on the market contain none of the real orange juice.

"These imitations are usually concocted of sweetened, artificially carbonated water, colored with a dye to imitate orange juice and flavored with a little oil from the peel of the orange. While they may not contain ingredients injurious to the health of adults, they are imitations which lack the medicinal qualities characteristic of fruit juices."

SAYS JAPAN IS DOPING CHINESE WITH U. S. DRUGS

BY JOHN POWELL.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PEKING, Aug. 21.—The International Anti-Opium society at Peking, composed of Americans, British, Chinese, French, Spanish, and Danish, has presented a strong indictment to the United States congressional party now in China against the practice of the United States government of permitting the manufacture and exportation of unlimited quantities of morphine and other opium derivatives. Memoranda showing that the Japanese import great quantites of habit forming drugs from America annually and sell them in China were also presented, with the claim that this procedure was in violation of the international agreement to stop sale of narcotics to the Chinese.

The society makes specific recommendations that American laws be revised to prevent the exportation of habit forming drugs to China and to prohibit also shipment of these drugs to other countries from which they might be transshipped to China.

ANGLO-GERMAN ALLIANCE URGED BY U. S. ENEMY

BERLIN, Aug. 21.—Alliance with Britain and not with Russian bolsheviki should be the "pivot of Germany's foreign policy," according to Arthur Von Kemnitz, Nationalist member of the reichstag. Kemnitz, who was author of the "Zimmermann note," in which Mexico was urged to join Japan to regain the land taken by the United States in the Mexican war, writes in the Taegliche Rundschau.

"I admit," he declares, "the very thought of an alliance with England is nauseating, but it is the only way open to us."

Kemnitz is opposed to "rushing into the arms of France," and declares that "as the United States has evidently concluded to dissociate itself from European affairs," Germany's future salvation is to be found in being the "continental base for English politics and a bulwark against bolshevism."

French Seize Tarsus and Hope for Yanks Revives

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 19.—[By the Associated Press.]—Advices to the French mission here report the capture of Tarsus, Asia Minor, Aug. 12, by French troops, and hope now is held out for the American relief workers besieged in Adana since June 20. Tarsus is half way between Mersina and Adana.

$100,000 CELLAR BARRED TO ALL BUT IMAGINATION

Even Peep at Griffin Liquor Denied.

A visit yesterday to the home of the late George Francis Griffin, 1519 Astor street, yielded illuminating facts. Succintly summarized, they are that the $100,000 wine cellar is locked. Visitors are barred.

However, there is solace for the public. One may revel unrestrainedly, if vicariously, in the bottled treasure trove by standing in the public thoroughfare and gazing at the exterior of the $100,000 three story brick mansion. It probably is the swellest top J. Barleycorn ever had.

In point of wealth per capita Astor is Chicago's premier street. The Griffin mansion is flanked on the south by the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. McDoel at number 1511; and on the north by the home of William A. Angell, 1529.

Introducing Mr. Burns.

Approaching it yesterday, the two visitors expected to encounter cordons of armed policemen—a cordon to guard the mansion, a cordon to watch the cordon, and so on ad infinitum. But they were pleasantly disappointed. There was only Mr. Burns.

Grand vizier of the wine cellar is Mr. Burns. But he fails to measure up to one's romantic preconceptions of an intimado of the grape. He is utterly lacking in bacchic attributes. His thyrsus was a rake. He was smoking a bulldog pipe of excellent bouquet. He was fagging the August elm leaves into methodical little heaps. He was in his shirtsleeves.

Mr. Burns is also custodian and caretaker. He is a man of scant speech. Interrogated as to the possibility of entering the wine cellar, Mr. Burns shifted his pipe and rejoined as he continued raking:

"Nope. You're one of these reporters, eh? Wouldn't do you any good. You couldn't get a drink. Nope."

Even a Peep Denied.

"But the public interest! The romance of it all! You have here all the vintages that Omar has immortalized, that Anacreon has sung about. And Bobbie Burns——"

"If he'd cut the booze out he'd a been a better man," said Mr. Burns. "Now, you can't get in. That's all."

"Is the liquor well guarded?"

"Guarded! Um! Guards inside and out. Day and night."

"Could we see one?"

"Nope."

By this time the photographer had slipped around to the side of the house, to the postern gate, which leads to the rear yard and into the cellar. Mr. Burns observed him in the nick of time. The gate was open. He dropped the rake, dashed back, and closed it.

A Touch of Pathos.

Fronting the gate was one of the windows opening into the cellar. There are twenty-four of these, all fitted with upright steel bars, sunk into a sort of concrete rampart.

"Well, Mr. Burns," remarked the visitor in parting, "it must be nice to have all that money."

"He wasn't happy," replied the grand vizier, now back to the rake again. "He wasn't happy. Money don't make everybody happy, son."

Heirs Can Remove Liquor.

Maj. Dalrymple said last night he believed the heirs could remove the liquor in the event the Griffin home were sold and they did not wish to dispose of stock.

"In a case of this kind," he said, "when liquor becomes the personal property of an estate, a judge probably would rule in favor of the heirs and allow them to remove their shares. Of course that is merely my personal opinion."

Capt. Hubert Howard reported yesterday that scores of prescription books, each representing 100 pints of bonded bourbon, have been stolen from physicians in Michigan avenue.

NATIONAL CAMPAIGN —IN BRIEF—

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—With court injunction and balking representatives in Alabama, anti-suffragists in the legislature have succeeded in entangling the ratification of the federal amendment in such fashion that the exact status of women's vote was in doubt last night.

MARION, O.—Senator Harding spent most of the day in conference with Republican leaders. Col. George Harvey, the New York editor, was with him.

CANTON, O.—Enemies of organized labor contribute to the G. O. P. campaign fund, Gov. Cox said in an address. He indorsed the league of nations, but said no United States soldier would be sent abroad without the approval of the people.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Republicans deny Gov. Cox's claims that the Democratic party conceived and put over the federal reserve banking system and parcel post measure, asserting that the Republicans did.

AUGUSTA, Me.—Will H. Hays, Republican national chairman, says Cox is controlled by Wilson and four other bosses.

LLOYD GOERGE'S VACATION WILL BE A BUSY ONE

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LUCERNE, Aug. 21.—Premier Giolitti arrived at 5 o'clock this afternoon to confer with Prime Minister Lloyd George on the bolshevik and Adriatic questions. Mr. Lloyd George met the Italian premier at the station, proceeded with him to the Hotel National, because the villa owned by King Albert of Belgium, where Mr. Lloyd George is staying, is too small to accommodate guests.

The two premiers dined together tonight and will confer tomorrow. Villa Haslihorn promises to be the scene of several important conferences during the coming fortnight, as the German foreign minister, Von Simons, now at Berne, Chancellor Fehrenbach, who arrives at Berne tomorrow, and delegates from Czecho Slavia are due in Lucerne within a few days.

Premier Venizelos, who is coming early next week when his wound permits, will be another important conferee.

Although Mr. Lloyd George came here for a fortnight's rest, it is admitted that he cannot refuse to see such distinguished visitors, so a series of important conversations is expected.

Tomorrow may result in important agreements regarding Fiume and the Adriatic between Premier Giolitti and the British prime minister. An entente may be arrived at with Messrs. Simons and Fehrenbach later, of course entirely apart from the Polish situation. Yesterday was rainy and Mr. Lloyd George remained indoors and read a novel. Today he chartered a motorboat and toured the lake.

IRISH PROCLAIM "MIRACLE" AND PRAISE "CURES"

BELFAST, Aug. 21.—Intense excitement prevails in Templemore, County Tipperary, over what are reported to be weird manifestations of healing.

The Thurles correspondent of a local newspaper sends details of what he describes as an "extraordinary miracle," which, he says, began yesterday evening and still continues.

"About 6 p. m." he says, "all the statues and holy pictures in the house of Thomas Divan, a news agent, began to bleed. Crowds of awed people witnessed the strange manifestation, and wonderful cures are being effected.

"A crippled soldier, who was carried down to Divan's on crutches with a leg which had been badly shattered by shrapnel in France, walked back from the house with full use of his limbs. He had been three years in a hospital. A little girl, a victim of consumption, was borne into the house and she too, was cured.

"People are thronging to Templemore to see the cures."

MEXICANS SEIZE 4 AMERICANS, 1 OF THEM A WOMAN

850,000 Peso Ransom Is Demanded.

[Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.]

Mexico City, Aug. 21.—Somewhere out in the jungles of the state of Jalisco, Mexican rebels are holding for ransom four American citizens, one of them a woman, and one British subject.

Pedro Zamora, former Carrancista general, who recently revolted against the De la Huerta government, heads the bandit army which captured the foreigners and nearly made prisoners of three other Americans.

The prisoners are: Charles Hoyle and his wife, Harry B. Gardner, Culvert N. Dietrich, Americans, and W. B. Johnstone, British, ex-major in France. The men are mining engineers.

Heavy Ransoms Demanded.

Zamora has demanded 50,000 pesos [$25,000] for Johnstone, and 200,000 pesos each for the four Americans. What time limit he has placed for delivery of the money, or the penalty he will exact if his terms are not complied with, are not clear.

Zamora revolted about ten days ago. His forces, estimated at several thousand former Carranza soldiers, have been overrunning the coastal regions and sacking towns and ranches. Autla was burned to the ground last week and twenty girls taken into the mountains.

After the capture and plunder of Mascota and Cuale, the rebels surrounded the ranch of Hoyle and his wife, two miles from Cuale. They were taken away and the other prisoners caught while inspecting mining properties nearby.

Prisoners for Nearly Week.

When the bandits occupied Desmoronado three other Americans, J. C. Smith, Ole Johnson, and Ernest Herrival, managed to escape. They told the De la Huerta authorities about the other prisoners and the sums demanded, and Gen. Calles, minister of war, sent out troops under Gen. Enrique Estrada four days ago to pursue the bandits and release the captives.

Provisional President De la Huerta has expressed willingness to American and British diplomats to do everything possible to free the five prisoners. Johnstone's wife was with him when he was capture, but escaped when an American named Holmes interfered with the officer seizing her.

GEORGIAN OIL MONOPLY MAY GO TO BRITISH

BY JOHN CLAYTON.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 20.—The Georgian commission left Batoum yesterday on a British destroyer bound for London to conclude negotiations whereby the British will secure important trade concessions. It is understood that a franchise has been granted to the British to build a railway from Batoum to the Georgian frontier in the direction of Kars. The Armenians already have given permission for the construction of a line through Kars and Tiflis, opening up a shorter route with easier grades from the Black sea into Persia and India.

It is also understood that the concessions Georgia is prepared to grant include a monopoly of the Georgian oil interests.

SERVE THIS WITH BREAKFAST AND SMILE ALL DAY

Sugar, Produce, Hit Low Mark of 10 Years.

Fruits, vegetables, and sugar prices tumbled yesterday, the two former to points lower than they have been in ten years, according to South Water street merchants. And, to quote from the same source, "the people don't want 'em because they're too cheap."

Plums were quoted at $1 for sixteen quart crates; last year they were $1.75 and $2. California canteloups sold at little more than the cost of the crate and the freight. Potatoes struck a low mark of 3 and 3½ cents a pound and $1 to $1.75 a bushel; cabbages brought $1.25 a crate; apples $1 a bushel; onions were not going very strong at $70 cents a bushel.

Meanwhile sugar fell off 11 cents to 20 and 22 cents a pound to the wholesaler. So much is being received that the price would not stick up. Some candy men are said to be getting sugar at 17 and 18 cents.

"Sugar Men on the Run."

Sol Westerfelt, president of the Retail Grocers' association, sent out an optimistic word.

"Sugar speculators are on the run and the consumer is about to have his inning," he said. "The price is due for a big drop within a few days. There will be a drop in the prices of all eatables. I believe Mr. Poole, the food director and secretary of the city council high cost committee, is right when he asserts 10 cent sugar is on the way here."

Huge losses will be sustained by those who have stored away great quantities of sugar, fearing a still higher aviation of the price, it is declared. Alleged profiteers are unwillingly helping the price slump because the banks have called their loans and the dealers have dumped their stocks onto the market.

In an attempt to help drive down the prices of milk, bread, and sugar, the city council committee on living costs will begin a series of public hearings this week to which distributors, brokers, and retailers will be summoned.

Ald. Max Adamowski, chairman of the committee, made the announcement on receipt of Secretary Poole's report that sugar is plentiful and that there is an organized effort on the part of sugar interests to keep prices up by creating an impression that it is scarce.

Will Call In Brokers.

"We will call in the sugar brokers in an effort to let the public in on the actual workings of attempts to keep prices up when the law of supply and demand clearly is operating to bring them down," Ald. Adamowski said.

"Mr. Poole has also made a complete investigation of milk prices and we will be able to show that present prices are unreasonable. The price of flour is on the decline, yet the price of bread remains at wartime level. We wish to find out why."

Chicago candy merchants and wholesale dealers will not follow the lead of New York dealers, who have cut the price of candies an average of 10 cents a box, it was declared. New York prices on boxed goods are said by Chicago men to be from 25 to 75 cents more a pound than here.

Portuguese Officer Kills Count; Fires on Own Wife

LISBON, Aug. 21.—Count Villar, a widely known Portuguese nobleman, was shot and killed yesterday by a distinguished army officer of high rank. Villar was alighting from a carriage with the officer's wife. The assassin then fired upon the woman, who was about to enter the offices of a firm of lawyers whom she had retained to arrange for a divorce suit in which she alleges cruelty. She was slightly wounded.

DOUBLED LIQUOR GUARD FAILS TO HALT NEW RAID

Six men, armed with revolvers and wearing masks, drove a truck to the loading platform of the Sibley warehouse, 1530 South Sangamon street, yesterday afternoon. After binding and gagging two watchmen they rolled out nineteen barels of grain alcohol and escaped.

The bandits seemed rather surprised to find more than one watchman in the building. Authority to double the guards for the seized liquor in government warehouses was received from Washington yesterday and the second man had just been assigned.

Maj. Dalrymple, head of the prohibition forces, in telling of the extra guard order earlier in the day, said he had lost only eleven quarts of liquor since he was placed in charge of confiscating booze.

John Cook, 1053 South Racine avenue, watchman for a liquor warehouse at 818 South May street, was shot in the hip last night when he intercepted a robber seeking to force entrance. The robber escaped.

New French Loan Will Open Oct. 20, Paper Says

PARIS, Aug. 21.—The new French loan probably will be opened about Oct. 20, and will close Nov. 30, according to Frederick Francois-Marsal, minister of finance, the Echo de Paris says. He says the bonds will be issued at par and will bear interest at 6 per cent.

K. OF C. DEDICATE METZ STATUE OF GEN. LAFAYETTE

Marshal Foch Is Given a Jeweled Baton.

METZ, Alsace-Lorraine, Aug. 21.—[By the Associated Press.]—Marshal Foch, standing at the foot of the statue of Lafayette, just presented to Metz by the Knights of Columbus, today voiced his friendship for America and received from the knights a jeweled baton and insignia of his office as a marshal of France. He sat on the platform among the other notables, smiling when the compliments were translated, but he was obviously deeply moved when the baton ceremony took place.

It was decidedly a Foch day. The marshal rose early and headed a procession of knights into the Old Cathedral, saying to the knights:

"I have come to pray side by side with you for the American heroes in the war."

The marshal took communion with the knights during the solemn high requiem mass celebrated by Bishop Pelt.

All Metz at Ceremony.

The ceremony at the statue brought out the population of Metz and hundreds from the surrounding country. The city was decorated with American flags, and it was a general holiday. The statue was veiled in silk, with an American flag draped near the base. Around the platform were grouped 3,000 children in native costume. Five thousand troops formed a guard of honor and thousands of civilians crowded the park sloping down toward the Moselle.

Supreme Knight Flaherty, in presenting the statue, after the veil had been drawn aside, reminded those assembled of Pershing's famous words: "Lafayette, we are here," and added: "Lafayette, we still are here."

The statue was dedicated by Martin H. Carmody and was accepted by the mayor of Metz and representatives of the various departments. Immediately after the ceremony Marshal Foch went to the foot of the monument, to which three little girls brought the case containing the baton, which Mr. Flaherty presented, at the same time describing Marshal Foch as "the ideal Christian soldier" and "the greatest son of France and the warmest friend of America."

Foch Welcomes Knights.

The marshal embraced Supreme Knight Flaherty and in rendering his thanks, said: "I welcome you, Knights of Columbus, as the representatives of America. I know your merits because of what you have done in the war. The same sentiments that led Lafayette to go to America to fight have prompted you to come to Metz to reassure France that America is ever ready to do her part.

"The union of France and America will assure forever that the natural boundaries between France and her late enemy will be maintained. Alsace-Lorraine will be for ever French. America and France have long fought for liberty, and they will continue to protect liberty throughout the world. Knights of Columbus, you have done France and America a service."

Marshal Foch has been made an honorary member of the Knights of Columbus. There are only two others—Cardinal Mercier and King Albert of Belgium.

Honored by France.

After the ceremony M. L'Hopiteau, minister of justice, who presided throughout, announced the promotion of Edward L. Hearn of New York, general commissioner for Europe of the Knights of Columbus, to officer of the Legion of Honor, and the creation of five chevaliers of the legion—Joseph C. Pelletier of Boston, William J. McGinley of New York, William P. Larkin of New York, Dr. E. W. Buckley of St. Paul, and Martin H. Carmody of Grand Rapids.

He added also the creation of officers of public instruction, with palm, as follows:

John F. O'Neill of Jersey City, John H. Reddin of Denver, Luke E. Hart of St. Louis, John F. Martin of Green Bay, Wis., and J. J. Leddy, Saskatoon, Canada.

ICURA FIBBER ON U.S. BANK ACT, G. O. P. TELLS COX

Deny His Claims to Federal System.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—"Plumes for the Coxdaw" is the title chosen by the Republican Publicity association for a statement issued today challenging Gov. James M. Cox, Democratic presidential candidate, for claiming the federal reserve system had Democratic origin. The association asserts that it had Republican origin, and seeks to prove it. In doing so it charges Mr. Cox with inaccuracies.

"Replete with inaccuracies of statement and bristling with misinformation," the statement says, "the acceptance address of the Tammany-Taggart candidate, James M. Cox, has created wonder in the public mind that a man so long in official life should be so ignorant of events which have transpired within the past decade and of the works of men who have wrought to perfect the American commonwealth.

"Peanut Politician or Fibber."

"To excuse some of the Cox taradiddles on the score of political finesse is to put the candidate down as a politician of peanut size. To plead ignorance on his behalf puts him down as no fit subject for White House honors. One of his fibs should be corrected forthwith, and there is abundant evidence to support the correction.

"Speaking of the federal reserve system, Cox says: 'The federal reserve act was originated, advocated, and made a law by a Democratic president and congress, against the bitter protests of the Republican standpatters, who almost without exception voted against it.'

"Old Hickory, Bank Wrecker."

"The attitude of the Democratic party toward an elastic, bank issued currency had, prior to 1914, been historically the same as that of Andrew Jackson, the wrecker of the United States bank. Time and again the Republican party attempted to put through a decent banking system, only to have the subject talked to death by the Democrats in the senate.

"At length the late Senator Nelson Aldrich succeeded, in May, 1908, in getting an act passed providing for and authorizing a national monetary commission 'to inquire into and report to congress what changes are necessary or desirable in the monetary system of the United States or in the laws relating to banking and currency.'

"That commission filed its report on Jan. 8, 1912. Just one year previously Senator Aldrich had filed with the commission a 'suggested plan for monetary legislation,' revised by him the following October. With the commission's report was filed the draft of a bill 'to incorporate the National Reserve Association of the United States and for other purposes.'

Own Organ Admits Origin.

"On Nov. 10, 1914, the New York Times (Democratic) declared: 'By whatever name we call it, that bill was the source and origin, it contained the spirit and substance, of the present federal reserve banking act. Many of the provisions, much of the language of the Aldrich commission bill were embodied in the act.'

"The Democrats never originated anything, not even the parcel post law, which was drafted by former Senator Jonathan Bourne Jr. But they know a good set of plumes for their Coxdaw candidate to strut in."

BEG YOUR PARDON!

THE TRIBUNE of Aug. 20, reporting the meeting of the drainage board, quoted Charles H. Sergel as having called Col. B. M. Chiperfield "another spoiler like some of the rest of you." Mr. Sergel writes that he never applied this epithet or any other epithet to Col. Chiperfield, but "merely mentioned his name as having been on the pay roll, or rather employed by the sanitary district."

MINERS BUSY; COAL OUTPUT LEAPS UPWARD

Washington, D. C., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—With the striking miners back at work in Illinois and Indiana, production of soft coal during the week of Aug. 14 rose to the highest point attained in any week since last January, the United States geological survey reported today.

Preliminary estimates place the total output at 11,728,000 net tons, an increase over the last week before the strike of 848,000 tons, or 8 per cent.

Whether this increased rate of production can be long sustained the bureau says remains to be seen. One element in the improvement was the accumulation of empty coal cars during the strike of the day men.

FOES OF LABOR BACK G. O. P., IS THEME OF COX

No Yanks to Europe Unless People Say So.

BY ROBERT B. SMITH.

Canton, O., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—Rounding out a day of speech making across central Ohio, Gov. Cox, before a massmeeting here tonight, challenged Republican leaders to deny they are raising a minimum campaign fund of $15,000,000, and declared the list of contributors was made up partly of employers who seek to crush organized labor by governmental repression.

"The Republican slush fund," he said, "will make the days of Mark Hanna suffer by comparison."

The governor came here from Columbus. He spoke at many small towns along the way, where good sized crowds turned out to meet him. His first speech was at Mount Vernon. Later he addressed several thousand persons in Orrville, O.

Wreath on McKinley Tomb.

He motored from Orrville to Canton, and on his way into the city stopped to lay a wreath of flowers on the tomb of William McKinley.

In all his speeches today the governor spoke fervently of the league of nations, but at the same time he took another step forward in the direction of reservations.

"In the next four years," he said, "no American soldier will go abroad unless you direct me to send them. The Democratic party is one of definite action, to legally conclude the war with the allies, as we started it, giving the treaty such additions as may be necessary to protect every American interest, and reminding our associates in the league that under no circumstances can we enter into a war nor send our soldiers away from our shores without the consent of the people, true to their representatives in congress."

Seeks to Placate Labor.

Canton has been considered a sore spot in Ohio from a Democratic point of view. Here it was that the governor last year ousted the Democratic mayor because he failed to keep order during the steel strike. The governor had this in mind when he said:

"Government must preserve person and protect property; in short, it must maintain law and order, being careful neither side to the dispute procures the advantage of its favor."

It was in this connection the governor repeated his charge about the Republican campaign fund.

Multi-Millions for G. O. P.

"When the truth penetrates," he said, "every circumstance attendant upon the collection of multi-millions by the Republican campaign committee, it will be apparent those who believe in force are represented in the list of the contributors. It is hardly necessary for me to remind you that the charge that a fund of $15,000,000 is being raised has not been denied.

"I challenge the Republican leaders to deny it. Until they answer to the charge the evidence will be withheld. If by silence they admit their guilt, the evidence will be produced."

ELIZABETH, MOTHER WANTS YOU HOME; NO SCOLDING OR ROW

The parents of Elizabeth Trobfanbum, 14 years old, have despaired of finding her. She left her home at 1723 Orchard street after 1 o'clock last Monday morning, taking a suitcase full of clothing with her. Her mother and father have no idea why she left. They have heard nothing from her, they say. Her mother believes the girl wishes to return home, but is afraid she will be scolded. Mrs. Trobfanbum wishes to assure her to the contrary.

RESUME SENATE CAMPAIGN FUND QUIZ TOMORROW

The committee of the United States senate that has been investigating expenditures of political campaigns meets in the Auditorium hotel tomorrow morning. Senator William S. Kenyon of Iowa, chairman of the committee, said yesterday that he hasn't any idea of what the committee is about to do.

"How can I say what it will do when the committee isn't here yet?" Senator Kenyon said to THE TRIBUNE. "I have been on a vacation in Maine for six weeks and I don't know what has been going on. We will know more about it when the committee meets." He said that all of the members of the committee will be present he expected, with the exception of Senator Edge of New Jersey. He said he would make a speech today in Geneseo, Ill.

SPENCER QUITS INQUIRY.

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 21.—United States Senator Seldon P. Spencer announced this afternoon he would resign as a member of the special senate committee appointed to investigate presidential campaign expenditures. Mr. Spencer issued a statement explaining that he, being a candidate for reelection, his own expenditures might be subject to investigation.

Olson Asks Court to Give Him First Place on Ballot

Mandamus proceedings were started yesterday by Edwin A. Olson, candidate for the Republican nomination for county judge, in the effort to secure for himself first position in the Republican primary ballots.

Mr. Olson claims that he filed his petition with the county clerk July 31, more than two hours before Frank S. Righeimer's petition was filed. Mr. Olson's suit is brought against County Clerk Sweitzer and the three members of the board of election commissioners of Chicago, August Lueders, Bernard Horwich, and Frank X. Rydzewski.

Des Moines, Iowa, Aug. 21.—Senator A. B. Cummins was much improved today, and his rapid recovery now is expected. He sat up a short time yesterday. He has had influenza.

ALL-STAR SHOW TO ENTERTAIN ON HARDING PORCH

Footlight Favorites for G. O. P. Leader.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Marion, O., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—Senator Harding's front porch will become a theatrical as well as political center of the country next Tuesday, when seventy-five members of the Harding-Coolidge Theatrical league, of which Al Jolson is president, will arrive from New York to put on a campaign show for the senator and Mrs. Harding.

The delegation of stars scheduled to come includes Blanche Ring, DeWolf Hopper, Alice Lloyd, Lew Fields, Valeska Surrat, Evelyn Nesbit, Lew Cody, Mildred Harris Chaplin, Jewel Carmen, Wanda Lyon, Robert Emmett Keane, Zennea Keefe, Frances White, and possibly Babe Ruth. Jolson has asked the owners of the Yankees to permit Ruth, who is a Harding booster, to come.

Jolson Writes Song.

Jolson has written a campaign song for the occasion and the artists will give impromptu speeches and bits of entertaining on the porch. The senator will reply. The league was organized recently in New York and branches are being formed in other cities.

The Marion civic association and Drs. C. E. Carl, W. Sayer of White Oaks Farm, will assist in entertaining the guests. The league will give shows along the way at various cities.

Senator Harding will have Col. George W. Harvey as house guest for two or three days. Col. Harvey arrived this morning.

Francis B. Loomis, former assistant secretary of state, was also in conference. The senator is seeking counsel on his big league of nations speech which he will deliver next Saturday.

Johnson for Harding.

Judge Rex B. Goodcell of San Bernardino, Cal., who was on the stump for Senator Johnson in the preconvention campaign, visited the senator today. He said that Senator Johnson was for Harding all the way, and that he would work in the states where he was most needed.

"The entire Johnson organization is now as definitely behind Harding as it was behind Johnson before the convention," he said. "It is 100 per cent solid for the ticket. Our estimate, based on the figures from the recent registration in California, places the Republican majority there at 150,000, and I may add this figure was confirmed by the most influential California Democrats I have talked with.

"Oregon and Washington will line up just as solidly as California. Basing my judgment on what I learned in the preconvention campaign and developments since, the mountain states will all go for Harding, with possibly one exception. The Democrats in our part of the world know that it is useless for them to make efforts in the mountain and Pacific coast states. They concede them to the Republicans."

RELEASE AID OF PACINI SEIZED IN MURDER CASE

Kenosha, Wis., Aug. 21—[Special.]—Willard Welch, private secretary of Charles Pacini, the murdered amusement king, was released today after having been in custody overnight and being questioned this morning. Chief of Police Owen O'Hare explained that young Welch was not suspected of being connected with the murder, but it was thought he might be withholding some information which would be of value to the police.

In releasing Welch, Chief O'Hare declared that the police were certain he was withholding nothing.

Assistant Attorney-General W. W. Gilman, who was sent here by Gov. Philipp, went to Milwaukee today to lay the result of his investigations before the governor. He said he had no statement to make, except that if some one was not sent here in his place to take charge of the case it would be evident that everything had been found to be satisfactory here.

Drinks, Dances, Falls Out of Hotel Window

James Sullivan, dancing and drinking in a room on the second floor of the Galt hotel, fell out the window early yesterday morning. He is at the county hospital. A. J. Norton, 4210 Cottage Grove avenue, and another man were with him. Norton was held pending investigation. The other man left before the police arrived.

WILSON RULES COX CAMPAIGN, HAYS CHARGES

G. O. P. Chairman Attacks Nations' League.

Augusta, Me., Aug. 21.—Will H. Hays, chairman of the Republican national committee, today opened the campaign for the congressional elections with an address to the Republican workers, in which he denounced Gov. Cox for "accepting the dictation of President Wilson and four other bosses."

Mr. Hays said the Democrats might adopt as a slogan: "First in war, first in peace, first in the hearts of his countrymen." But Mr. Hays suggested: "Last in war, last in peace, gone from the hearts of his countrymen."

As to the "solemn referendum on the league," which President Wilson hoped to grow out of the presidential campaign, Mr. Hays said:

"Our sole requirement is that there shall be no restriction. This referendum is going to be more than solemn. It is going to be great, the most comprehensive ever known. Before ended it will have comprised every phase of maladministration and every flock of Wilsonitis that have brought untold miseries upon a people who have every right to be prosperous and contented.

On "Serving Five Masters."

"Upon the highest authority we are informed that no man can serve two masters, but what of one master and four bosses? Obviously with his recognized dexterity the Democratic candidate hopes to be able to hold to both, though seemingly despised by the one, yet loved by the others.

"What, pray, can be deduced from the mental processes of one who solemnly defines the Monroe doctrine as the very essence of article X.,' precisely as, with like accuracy, one might define vaccine as the very essence of smallpox?"

Mr. Hays took up Franklin D. Roosevelt's charge of a big G. O. P. fund and Gov. Cox's charge that it was $3,000,000.

"Mr. Roosevelt," Mr. Hays said, gave as the authority for his accusation 'an item' he had 'read in a newspaper.' Mr. Cox submitted no evidence whatever.

"Both these men knew that the Republican national committee had adopted a plan which I announced more than a year ago for financing our campaign by a method of decentralized giving, securing small contributions from a great many, with a limit of $1,000 as a maximum for any contribution; that Mr. Harding had publicly approved the plan, and that the committee had readopted it after he had been nominated.

The Probable Expense.

"Nothing has been and, of course, nothing will be concealed. By reason of the enlarged electorate and the greatly increased cost of all things, we figure that there will be required a total of about $3,000,000, an average of about 10 cents per voter. Part of this has been received in small contributions from individuals, 50 per cent of whom have never before subscribed to party funds.

"The larger part of the total amount we hope and have reason to believe we shall be able to raise under the plan of limited subscriptions, which thus far has proved successful.

"With Warren G. Harding and Calvin Coolidge as our candidates, all we ask is a fair contest, and that we propose to have."

Roosevelt Lauds Legion Where Reds Shot Members

Centralia, Wash., Aug. 21.—Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic candidate for vice president, talked little of politics in his address in Centralia today.

He paid high tribute to Centralia's armistice day victims, who, he said, gave their lives for the cause of Americanism, and he declared the government would stamp out those who seek to destroy it.

Mr. Roosevelt classed the American Legion as an organization whose constitution displays the true American spirit.

AND NOBODY HURT!

At the point where Wood street, Milwaukee avenue, and North Lincoln place meet, traffic is heavy and the crowds great on Saturdays. Yesterday Sol Laykin, striving mightily to avoid a smashup, drove his car over the curb and into a store front. And no one was hurt.

MAYOR'S FORCES NOT REPUBLICAN, LOWDEN CHARGES

Says They Are Really Bolshevists.

Gov. Frank O. Lowden enters the Illinois primary contest tomorrow night upon the single principle that it is up to real Republicans of Illinois to defeat the city hall combination and the city halls slate for state offices.

"This is no contest between Republican factions in Illinois," Gov. Lowden said last night in announcing his determination to assume the leadership of the contest between Republicans who are standing upon the national platform and the Thompson-Lundin ticket. "This is the moment," Gov. Lowden said, "when loyal Illinois citizens are to be aligned against the most dangerous form of bolshevism as it is being practiced in the United States at the present time."

Dates for Speeches.

Gov. Lowden, in the announcement that places him at the head of the anti-Thompson campaign, is to take the aggressive against the Thompson-Small-Smith state ticket. He speaks at Dixon in his own congressional district tomorrow night. At Bloomington, in Col. Frank L. Smith's home bailiwick, he speaks Tuesday night. Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday he will be at Springfield for the general roundup of political leaders from all of the counties of the state that will make rendezvous at the capital for state fair week.

Everything indicates that this is to be one of the critical weeks of the downstate Republican primary campaign. With the primaries now less than four weeks away, the fighting candidates for state offices have covered most of the 101 counties outside of Cook. The last stand of nearly all of them is to be made during the approaching week at the state fair, and then the main attack will be directed against the Chicago primary voters.

Thompson Platform Issue.

Political judgment seems to agree that the showdown will come upon the ability of the city hall's slated candidates for senator, governor, and other state offices, to get into the open without delay in saying to downstate folks that they stand for or repudiate the Thompson-Lundin platform that was turned down by the state convention at Springfield in May.

The generally expressed opinion seems to be that acceptance by Col. Frank L. Smith, candidate for senator, and Len Small, candidate for governor, of the city hall doctrines means the loss of much of their normal personal downstate support.

On the other hand, it is common political knowledge that the refusal of either to stand for the Thompson-Lundin platform, in whole or in part, sacrifices them in Cook county so far as the deliverable city hall vote is concerned.

All of the candidates on the anti-Thompson ticket will be at Monmouth, Warren county, tomorrow, at what is scheduled to be one of the biggest meetings of the primary campaign in the Military tract. Congressman Simeon D. Fess, chairman of the national Republican congressional campaign committee, is scheduled to be the chief speaker. The candidates will move from Monmouth to Springfield for the state fair.

One of the significant developments reported yesterday from Oglesby head quarters was that the Peoria county Republican organization had indorsed Oglesby for governor. P. G. Rennici presided as chairman over the meeting that indorsed him. Mayor Woodruff of Peoria is a candidate also for the nomination for governor.

The candidacy of Robert Emmet Burke for the Democratic nomination for United States senator was indorsed yesterday by the Democratic League of Cook county at a meeting held at 112 North La Salle street.

Snappy!

A NUMBER of persons narrowly escaped injury yesterday when an automobile owned and driven by Sol Laykin, 1470 Milwaukee avenue, ran up the curb at Milwaukee avenue and Wood street, across a fifteen foot sidewalk, and came to rest in front of the show windows of the Rusnak Bros. Furniture company. According to the police of the West Chicago avenue station it is a miracle that a number of persons were not seriously injured, as the sidewalk was crowded with pedestrians at the time the accident occurred.

Laykin was driving east in Milwaukee avenue, according to his story, and lost control of his car when he swerved suddenly to avoid striking another automobile at the intersection of Lincoln street.

Two Miners Killed and Eight Trapped in Coal Pit

Wilburton, Okla., Aug. 21.—Two miners were killed and at least eight more were entombed in the Degnan-McConnell mine No. 19 at Degnan, three miles west of here, this afternoon. There was a gas explosion in the mine.

AMERICAN LEGION POST REBUKES MAYOR BOOSTERS

Mayor Thompson and his boosters yesterday received another rebuke from the American Legion. It came from North Shore post No. 21, of which Col. John V. Clinnin, who led the 130th infantry through the Argonne, is the commander. The post, like other Chicago organizations, had received literature sent out by the "Chicago Boosters' Publicity club," organized by the mayor. Col. Clinnin notified the club that it did not care to receive any more of the circulars, which he designated as propaganda. His letter to the club follows:

"Replying to your circular letter of July 27, addressed to the commander of North Shore post No. 21, American Legion, will say that North Shore post is in favor of boosting the good name of the city of Chicago throughout the world, and has, individually, as service men, done its share towards establishing a reputation for loyalty, patriotism, and unselfish devotion to the cause of humanity during the recent world's war.

"The American Legion has dedicated its organization 'for God and country.' We believe the good name and general reputation of the city of Chicago will be extended to all parts of the world by a close adherence to principles of Americanism and good government, which is the best stock in trade for any municipality or other branch of government.

"We are not in sympathy with a 'boosting' propaganda which has for its object the advancement of political ambition of man or men."

SLOGAN MAKERS ARE STILL BUSY; HERE ARE A FEW

Brickbats and bouquets for Cox and Harding continued to arrive yesterday. The best one of the day came anonymously:

"I'm for Cox—from lid to sox!"

John E. Wright, 6758 Lafayette avenue, expressed the opposite sentiment. "Cox? Well—Barnum said there's one born every minute," he wrote.

"Harding—the man who put the rep in Republican!" is the meed of praise handed out by Lalla Ryckoff, 4221 Broadway. And "Harding for the people, and the people for Harding!" shouted Jetha C. Adams, 4408 North Sacramento. And "Cox still clings to his old rye because he's from Ohio," came from A. J. Lyon, Independence, Ia.

BRITAIN FACING RULE BY LABOR HERRICK AVERS

New York, Aug. 21.—"There is no danger of revolution in England," said Myron T. Herrick of Cleveland, former ambassador to France on his arrival today on the Aquitania after a visit of several weeks in Europe.

"I mean, of course, a radical revolution such as some people mostly outside of England seem to have been fearing," he explained. "There doubtless will be a change in the government sooner or later. I would not be surprised if in the comparatively near future a Labor government would come into power in England. But the thinking men of England do not have any apprehensions.

"It might even be a good thing for England to have a Labor government," he continued. "I think it would be a good thing if we had more labor men in our own government."

MAYOR DESERTS PARTY PLATFORM, SAYS M'KINLEY

Attacks Thompson Views as Socialistic.

The Harding-Coolidge platform adopted at the Coliseum is the only real Republican platform in existence, and the repudiated Thompson-Lundin platform is un-Republican and socialistic. Republican primary candidates in Illinois ought to be compelled to stand on the regular platform and not be permitted to campaign for Republican nominations on the City Hall declaration.

This is the substance of a statement issued in Chicago yesterday by Congressman William B. McKinley, candidate for the Republican nomination for United States senator.

Mustn't Desert Party.

"I believe the Republicans of Illinois will not desert the principles of our national platform for the fallacies and the heresies of the Chicago city hall boss," Mr. McKinley concluded. His statement follows:

"It is unfortunate whenever any one man undertakes to control an entire party ticket. That is exactly what William Hale Thompson is trying to do in Illinois. Thompson is trying to dictate every candidate for every office in Illinois on the Republican state ticket, also the county officials in Cook county.

"This is the first time in the history of the Republican party in Illinois that any one man ever had the audacity to assume to make a slate, with his personal candidates for every office, and try to force the Republicans of the state to accept and adopt it.

Try to Build Tammany.

"Thompson and those associated with him are simply trying to build a 'Tammany' machine in Illinois, under the name 'Republican.'

"The principles of the Republican party are set forth in the platform adopted at our national convention in Chicago. Every candidate in the Republican primary should approve and stand upon that platform, otherwise he should not call himself a Republican.

"Thompson does not stand for the national platform. He claims to have a platform of his own. Much of it is simply a series of platitudes. However, the real meat of the Thompson platform is an effort to stir up class hatred, aggravate the present condition of unrest, and in truth promote socialism.

"It is not so important whether or not I may be the next United States senator from Illinois; but it is mighty important that we stop the Tammany tiger at the Cook county line; that we put principles above men; that we stand together behind Harding and Coolidge and the principles for which they stand. The national platform is good enough for Harding and Coolidge."

OGLESBY LAUDS WOMEN VOTERS FOR WAR WORK

Joliet, Ill., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—The women of Illinois were praised by Lieut. Gov. John G. Oglesby, anti-Thompson aspirant for the Republican nomination for governor.

"The women of our state," he said, "have shown themselves able in the last few years to meet every emergency. The action of Tennessee in ratifying the suffrage amendment is glorious news.

"The women proved their worth during the war, and now, in these days of reconstruction, we need their advice and assistance."

Shipbuilding Company in Bankruptcy Suit

New York, Aug. 21.—An involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed today in federal court against the National Shipbuilding corporation of this city, alleged to have liabilities exceeding $5,000,000. The petition was filed in behalf of four creditors seeking to recover more than $800,000.

'RID CHICAGO OF CRIME WITH YOUR VOTE'—THRASHER

Urges Good Citizens to Enter Primary.

An appeal to rid Chicago of crime by voting for law enforcing officials on primary day, Sept. 15, was voiced yesterday by Samuel P. Thrasher, superintendent of the Committee of Fifteen.

Basing his appeal on figures of the Chicago crime commission showing that Chicago alone far outstripped in number of murders the British isles and Canada, Mr. Thrasher said "we have in Chicago plenty of machinery for the enforcement of all laws."

"The mayor is held chiefly responsible," he continued. "The law says that he 'shall take care that the laws and ordinances are faithfully executed.'

"Make Chicago Bone Dry."

"It is plain that illegal liquor selling, gambling and commercialized prostitution make the fertile soil in which to grow rank and noxious plants, the inevitable fruitage of which is murder, rape, arson and other crimes of violence.

"Make Chicago bone dry, as the law demands; prohibit gambling, as it should be prohibited; drive the last haunt of commercialized vice from the city and murders, robberies and other crimes of violence would disappear as fog disappears before the sun.

Good Citizens Should Vote.

"It is stated on good authority that enough people, supposedly good citizens, stay at home from every primary to change the result. Such neglect is criminal and is contributing to and stimulating the reign of lawlessness which exists in Chicago today.

"Opportunity for practical citizenship presents itself on registration day, next Wednesday, and on primary day, the 15th of September."

SMALL ATTACKS LOWDEN BOARD FOR FARE BOOST

Len Small, candidate for the Republican nomination for governor of Illinois, issued a statement yesterday that asserted that "the Chicago Surface lines have made profits of more than $100,000,000 out of their contract with the people of the city of Chicago with fares at the contract rate of 5 cents."

Mr. Small, in his statement, further asserts:

"But when war increased the cost of materials and operating expenses they appealed to Gov. Lowden and his utilities commission to relieve them from the provisions of their contract so far as it was beneficial to the people. At the demand of these multimillionaire traction magnates, Gov. Lowden and his public utilities commission authorized them to increase rates and to ignore and violate the moral and legal obligations of their contracts, so far as beneficial to the people, but to keep all the benefits accruing to the corporation.

"This increase in street car fares from 5 cents, the contract rate, to 8 cents, as authorized by Lowden's utilities commission, means robbing the people of Chicago of substantially $60,000 per day, over $21,000,000 per year, or nearly $150,000,000 during the balance of the contract period."

Chicago Boys, Stranded by Speeders' Fines, Get Aid

Omaha, Neb., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—Clarence Flack, son of the pastor of the Woolley Memorial Episcopal church in Chicago, and Ralph Michel, son of a Chicago cigar manufacturer, are stranded in Omaha with $3 between them. Michel was held at the central police station for operating an automobile without a license. The boys were on their way home to Chicago after abandoning a trip to the Pacific Coast on which they started Aug. 4.

Both boys refused to write home for financial aid. They had $50 when they left Chicago, but lost $28 when they were arrested for speeding in Illinois. They worked four days on a ranch and then started back home to reenter school. Tonight John F. Flack, president of a bank, but not related to young Flack, went the boys' bail and took them home with him while awaiting communications from their parents.

J. W. FERNALD AND WIFE INJURED AS CAR HITS AUTO

James W. Fernald, retired grain merchant, 81 years old, and his wife, Mrs. Belle M. Fernald, 71, of 4434 Greenwood avenue, were seriously injured yesterday evening when a street car crashed into their electric automobile in front of 4911 Lake Park avenue.

Mr. Fernald's left arm was broken and several of his ribs were fractured. His wife sustained concussions of the brain and severe bruises. Both were taken to the Illinois Central hospital by Fred L. Meckel of 4925 Lake Park avenue.

An unidentified man was killed yesterday afternoon by an automobile at Seventy-fifth and State streets. The car was driven by John Kurir, 244 West Twenty-sixth street. He and his companion, Miss Anna Karellia of 8306 South Wabash avenue, were questioned; he was held. The body, that of a man 60 years old, was taken to Laughlin's morgue, 311 East Seventy-first street.

MRS. M. E. ADAMS.

Mrs. M. E. Adams, 1707 Crilly court, was struck by an auto driven by Gust Almcrantz, 1100 North Clark street, as she was about to board a car at Clark and Eugenie streets. She is at Henrotin hospital.

John Cary, chief petty officer, received slight injuries when, blinded by the headlights of another auto, he drove his car into a concrete pillar of the Loyola L station.

SAYS SITUATION IN MESOPOTAMIA IS EXAGGERATED

BY JOHN STEELE.

LONDON, Aug. 21.—"We are in for a long and troublesome job in the pacification and cleaning up of Mesopotamia, but not for war. War means fighting some organization with a head to it. This is the suppression of sheer tribal anarchy," said a high British official today. "It is very much like the problem in the Philippines after the Spanish-American war," he continued, "but much intensified by conditions rising out of the late war.

"It is nonsense to talk about a political movement in Mesopotamia. There are no politics in the outbreaks, but the trouble is that instead of dealing with the anarchy in these tribes one at a time, we will have to tackle them all at once."

Propaganda at Work.

This statement was made by a high official in the India office, who indicated that the Mesopotamia situation had been exaggerated by some of the British newspapers which oppose the British policy there.

One or two posts have been rushed by the Arabs and a few officers murdered, but there is nothing like a political insurrection, and the situation is a tribal anarchy, due to the effects of the late war on an uncivilized race

Prince Feisal in Europe.

The Indian armies are offering reemployment to young retired officers because it is realized that many officers are needed to carry out police work in small units.

Meanwhile Prince Feisal, whom the British propose setting up as king of Mesopotamia, has arrived in Europe on his way to visit Prime Minister Lloyd George in Switzerland.

'TIRELESS,' WORD THAT TELLS WHY COX SUCCEEDED

Born in Storm Center of Politics.

Here lies the woman, the first love one,
Who settled on the Miami, above Hamilton.
Her table was spread, and that of the boat,
And Anthony Wayne was often her guest.

Epitaph found in graveyard near the Cox homestead.

"Hamilton, Butler County, Ohio"—words that I write still when I try a new pen, because I learned to write them first and love them yet," wrote William Dean Howells when he was 79 years old, and he always referred to the years he lived there as "the gladdest of all my years." He affirmed and reaffirmed "the almost unrivaled fitness of the place to be the home of a boy," and he loved it so much that when he was old he wrote a whole book about it, which he called "A Boy's Town." It ranks with Darrow's "Farmington" (also about a boy's life in mid-nineteenth century Ohio) as a masterpiece of tender retrospect.

Pivot of Politics.

What Howells said as to the "unrivaled fitness" of the Butler county region for a boy to grow up in applied with double force to a boy who may have had a notion that he would grow up to be president of the United States. For Butler county fairly dripped with politics. Like the state of Ohio, it long has been and still is pivotal—a pivot within a pivot, as it were, if that is the way pivots work—and it long ago voted itself into the title of "the Gibraltar of Ohio Democracy." They live their political life in no detached way down there. Every man and boy, and now most of the women, are politicians, and one of the first things they tell you, after they have finished talking about their playmate, Jimmie Cox, which is not soon, is how Daniel Webster once spoke from the balcony of "the house that used to stand down there," and how it was in Butler county that Judge Thurman made the famous speech on the greenback issue that defeated him.

Home of Famous Men.

Besides Gov. Cox, Gov. William Bebb of the old Whig days and Gov. James E. Campbell, who beat Foraker and was beaten by McKinley, were born in Butler county, and the career of Gov. John Brough, who, like Gov. Cox, was a printer's apprentice, an editor, and a war governor, was much identified with this county. So was that of Gov. John M. Pattison. Gov. Judson Harmon's wife was a Butler county woman, and he always speaks of her as "my inspiration." As long ago as 1816 William Henry Harrison ("Tippecanoe") represented the Butler district in congress, and so later did such big men as Tom Corwin and Jeremiah Morrow, and such a terrific trouble maker as Clement L. Vallandigham, who, they say in Butler county, was the inspiration of Hale's "A Man Without a Country." He lived in Hamilton, and later in Dayton, where the mob sacked his house, but when the men of the Butler county Democratic committee touched on that turbulent figure in the long line of James M. Cox's political ancestry they added, significantly, "But you might as well forget Vallandigham." Politicians are very squeamish persons.

Vorhees Another Giant.

Another of the county's political giants was Senator Daniel Vorhees, "the tall sycamore of the Wabash," who did his country true service in getting us the present Congressional Library building. Here, too, was born Congressman Lewis D. Campbell, who by reason of his stocky body and his shaggy mane became known throughout the middle west as "the Butler Pony," and whom this nation laughed at once for his widely quoted statement that the corn in the Miami valley grew so high that you had to ride on a horse to husk it. Few believed him, but that really happened in certain fields.

Among other notables whom Butler county produced were Murat Halsted, who was born in the hamlet of Paddy's Run, that later, much to Halsted's disfavor, got itself renamed Shandon; and Dr. Albert Shaw of the Review of Reviews, and Lucky Baldwin, and Lou Beauchamp, "the Apostle of Sunshine" to the trustful Chautauquas, who was born four or five miles from the Cox farm.

Gave Verne His Idea.

Of all the books in the world you would be least likely to link up with this fat, agrarian county would be the high fantastical Jules Verne's "A Journey to the Center of the Earth," but 'tis said that from the "theory of concentric spheres" evolved by the Butler county man, John Cleves Symmes, Verne drew the idea for that tale. Symmes conceived the notion that the earth and other planetary bodies consist of hollow concentric spheres, open at their poles, and peopled and treed inside, and he made his theory known all over Europe and America. He is buried in Hamilton and a hollow sphere, "open at the poles," surmounts his grave.

Traditions of County.

Such were some of the political and cultural traditions of Cox's home county. What with its strong state rights men and its equally determined union forever and anti-slavery men, the county was always a political battle ground. It was distinctive, and it bred men of distinction and made hot history. In the civil war Morgan's raiders once crossed the county line. In later years it was fought over by passionate temperance advocates, of whom Gov. Cox's mother was one. Its people were famous corn farmers—Jonathan Smith of Butler won the Centennial exposition's first prize for corn—but they were also "a bunch of readers," as one of their descendants described them. And Michael O. Burns, who grew up with Cox, campaigned with him later, and is today one of his best and shrewedest friends, told me that the essential thing to remember, in considering the environment which helped to make Cox what he is now, is that ever and always "politics was the dominating theme and factor in the Miami valley, even with boys."

Among such people the farm boy Cox learned to talk hog cholera intelligently; later the young district school teacher Cox learned all about that kind of schools, and all the time he was learning a very concrete, vital kind of politics. Those three things went a long way toward making him a success in the world, as you shall see.

"Above all," said Michael Burns, "he was tireless, tireless, by the Lord!"

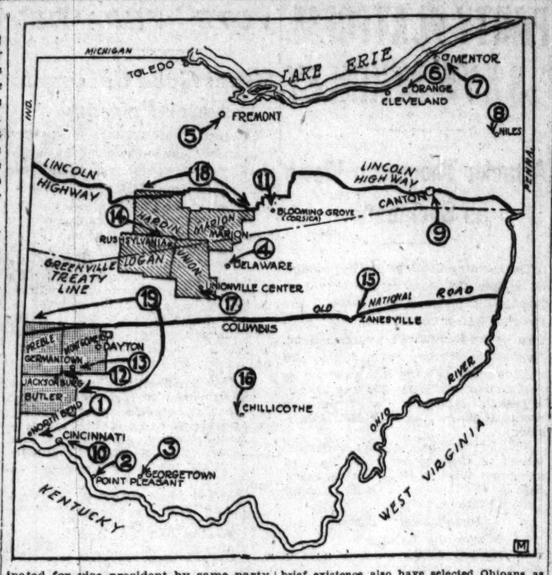
Tribune's Map of Presidential Ohio

BY EYE WITNESS.

[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Showing why Ohio is called "Mother of Presidents." Fourteen times in twenty-one national campaigns the great political parties have chosen sons of Ohio as presidential candidates. Seven became presidents. The eighth is in prospect. Six times in thirteen campaigns vice presidential candidates were chosen from the same stock. Two were elected. Here is eighty-four years of political history at a glance:



1.—NORTH BEND: Site of farm William Henry Harrison, ninth president, carved out of the Ohio wilderness and where he lived most of his mature life. Though born in Virginia he was nominated as an Ohioan, and his career as soldier and statesman was entwined with Ohio's history. Twice nominated; once elected.

2.—POINT PLEASANT: Birthplace of U. S. Grant, eighteenth president. Twice nominated; twice elected.

3.—GEORGETOWN: Where Grant grew up.

4.—DELAWARE: Birthplace of Rutherford B. Hayes, nineteenth president.

5.—FREMONT. Home of Gen. Hayes' maturity and where he is buried. It is thirty miles southeast of Toledo.

6.—ORANGE: Birthplace of James A. Garfield, twentieth president.

7.—MENTOR. Gen. Garfield's home, where he was nominated and there he had a model farm.

8.—NILES: Birthplace of William McKinley, twenty-fifth president. Twice nominated; twice elected.

9.—CANTON. Where McKinley lived when he was nominated and there the first "front porch campaign" was fought, the candidate making 300 addresses on the lawn in the 150 days between nomination and election. In Canton McKinley is buried.

10.—CINCINNATI: Birthplace of William H. Taft, twenty-seventh president. Twice nominated; once elected.

11.—BLOOMING GROVE [also known as Corsica]: Birthplace of Warren G. Harding, present Republican nominee.

12.—JACKSONBURG: Birthplace of James M. Cox, present Democratic nominee.

13.—GERMANTOWN: Home of Rev. Aaron Sherman Watkins, present Prohibition nominee for president; also nominated for vice president by same party in 1908 and 1912.

14.—RUSHSYLVANIA. The Rev. Aaron Sherman Watkins was born here in 1863.

VICE PRESIDENTIAL NOMINATIONS.

16.—CINCINNATI again: Birthplace of George H. Pendleton. Nominated for vice president on the McClellan ticket in 1864, but defeated.

15.—ZANESVILLE: Birthplace of Thomas A. Hendricks. Twice nominated for vice president; once elected. Senator Hendricks also was given the Democratic presidential candidate's electoral votes in 1872, Mr. Greeley having died before the votes of the electoral college were cast.

16.—CHILLICOTHE: Where Allen G. Thurman grew up. Though born in Virginia he was an Ohioan for seventy-six of his eighty-two years and was nominated as an Ohioan on the Cleveland ticket in 1888, but defeated.

17.—UNIONVILLE CENTER: Birthplace of Charles Warren Fairbanks. Twice nominated, once elected.

[Minor national parties that had only a brief existence also have selected Ohioans as candidates, but the names of both the parties and the men mean nothing now.]

18.—THIRTEENT STATE SENATORIAL DISTRICT, comprising Marion, Hardin, Logan, and Union counties, Warren Harding's early political training ground. At Bellefontaine, Logan county, he made his first speech as a candidate.

19.—THIRD OHIO CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT, comprising Montgomery, Preble, and Butler counties; James M. Cox's early political training ground, which twice sent him to congress.

The old Greenville treaty line was the line north of which the Ohio Indians promised in 1795 to stay, after the awful beating Mad Anthony Wayne had given them the year before. It ran just south of Senator Harding's present home town and his fellow citizens say to this day that it set Marion back twenty years. Treaty abrogated about the time the Hardings pioneered into this region.

The Old National Road was the outlet to the Atlantic states in the days of the Harding and Cox pioneers.

COP WILLING TO WINK AT A KISS, BUT 'SASS'—NEVER

"They were spooning, your honor, but I would have overlooked it if she hadn't sassed me," Lincoln Park Policeman W. T. Parsons told Judge Charles F. McKinley when he appeared in court with Edward Boyle, 22 years old, of 518 North Clark street, a former soldier, and Miss Jane Smith, 18 years old, whom he arrested near Grant's statue in the park.

"I suggested they ought not to kiss in a public place," the policeman added.

"Well, he had no business to interrupt," said Miss Smith. "Ed was wounded and he has been blue. I was trying to cheer him up."

"Your motive was all right, but perhaps it would have been better in another place," said the judge. "In any case, you should never talk back to a policeman. Two dollars and costs each."

YANKEE VESSEL, AFIRE AT SEA, GOING TO HALIFAX

New York, Aug. 21.—The American wooden steamer Mendora was reported today by wireless afire and making for Halifax at six and a half knots an hour, with smoke pouring from its hold.

The Mendora, a vessel of 2,848 tons, which left Philadephia Aug. 9 for Gothenburg, Sweden, with cargo, sent this message:

"Returning to Halifax on fire. Blaze not located. No flames yet, but much smell of burning wood. Position at noon today 93 miles southeast from Chebeague."

Chebeague is an island in Casco bay, Maine.

Pancho Villa's Daughter, 19, Dead in San Antonio

San Antonio, Tex., Aug. 21.—Raynalda Villa, 19, a daughter of Pancho Villa, died here last night from tuberculosis. She came here with her mother when Villa became a bandit. The funeral was held here today.

Injured, Starving, About to Slay Self When Found

El Paso, Tex., Aug. 21.—Jake Fillemann, cattle man, was recovering in a Globe, Ariz., hospital today following seven days and nights on a barren Arizona hillside without food or water while suffering with a broken thigh.

Fillemann was thrown from a mule near Geronimo. On the seventh night he sharpened his knife preparatory to ending his sufferings if help did not come.

Two rangers found him as he had finished these preparations.

3 YANK BUDDIES, 2 FRENCH BRIDES, ROMANCE, WRECK

Pretty Carmen Reveals Troubles in Court.

MRS. CARMEN MAU.

Near the house in which three "buddies" were billeted in Angiers, France, lived Carmen and Mable, two black haired, dark eyed chums since childhood. They were grateful for the part America was playing in the war and they did their best to make things as cheerful for the happy-go-lucky doughboys—Frank Mence, George Mau and George Adams Jr. as their sunny smiles, fluffy omelettes and "pommes de terre frit" could accomplish this end.

The inevitable happened. One night George Mau told Carmen he intended to bring her to America as his bride. On the next vine covered porch Frank was saying the same thing to Mable. The next day a double wedding ceremony was performed by the village priest, with George Adams as best man.

George Balks at Work.

Six months ago the three buddies returned to Chicago with the two French brides. Mau and his bride started housekeeping at 2221 Taylor street. Then appeared the first cloud.

GEORGE ADAMS JR. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Carmen tearfully told the story to Municipal Judge John Richardson yesterday. George had refused to work. He had told her she must go to work as a waitress. So Carmen worked and made many tips.

Then her husband accused her of smiling too much at the men in the restaurant, of being too nice to George Adams Jr., who had returned to his mother's home at 233 South Lincoln street. There were quarrels.

Blow Is the Climax.

Then Mrs. Adams, mother of the third "buddy," had taken her to her home.

One day Carmen met her husband at La Salle and Madison streets and he struck her, she said.

Judge Richardson imposed a fine of $200 and costs. Mau was sent to the bridewell.

GOAT GLAND NOT BRINKLEY'S ONLY "ELIXIR OF LIFE"

Fined for Liquor Sale in Kansas.

The fame of Dr. J. R. Brinkley, exponent of the Toggenburg goat gland, apparently was on the decline last night.

Following exposition of the views of several prominent Chicago physicians regarding Dr. Brinkley's claims, numerous others have come forward with statements regarding the practicability of the "goat gland elixir of youth."

In addition, a number of other facts have come to light regarding Dr. Brinkley and his activities.

Liquor Sales Cause Arrest.

For instance, at Junction City, Kas., the court records there show that Dr. Brinkley — while ostensibly curing scores of various ailments in his hospital there—was arrested on Feb. 27 on a charge of violating the Kansas state liquor law.

In an inquisition before County Attorney L. B. Morris, three witnesses testified that they had purchased alcohol in various quantities from the Brinkley drug store—another Brinkley enterprise—at Milford, Kas., and on that day a temporary injunction was granted by Probate Judge Daniel Hurley against Dr. Brinkley and his wife, Minnie, forbidding the further sale of intoxicating liquors in their store.

Doctor Pleads Guilty.

On March 20 Dr. Brinkley appeared before District Judge R. L. King at Marion, Kas., and entered a plea of guilty to the charge of violating the prohibitory law. For this offense he was fined $300 and sentenced to ninety days in the county jail. He was paroled, however, for a period of two years.

On July 7 Judge King in District court granted a permanent injunction against Mrs. Minnie Brinkley forbidding the sale of liquor in the Brinkley store.

Dr. Brinkley's hospital at Milford is now in charge of the sheriff of Geary county, it was reported last night. The sheriff took possession on an attachment in favor of the American Electrical company of St. Joseph, Mo., a concern which had sold the doctor a quantity of copper wire.

Fail to Find License.

State authorities declared yesterday they were continuing their investigation into Dr. Brinkley's past life. Further search of the Springfield records, according to Dr. Francis H. Shepardson, had failed to disclose any license issued to Dr. Brinkley. Legal action, it was predicted, would be started in the next few days.

Among the physicians who disputed Dr. Brinkley's claims yesterday was Dr. Arthur Dean Bevan, former president of the American Medical association, who characterized the transplantation of goat glands as "rot," and warned the public against accepting new medical discoveries until they have received the O. K. of the profession itself.

"It is a scientific fact," he explained, "that any foreign gland introduced into the human body must disappear within a short time. This is as elementary and uncontrovertible as that two and two are four."

Tells of Dangers.

According to Dr. Orlando F. Scott, "gland transplantation cannot possibly do any good. Rather it will do harm because of the mental depression that is certain to follow when the patient realizes he has been fooled. To mislead a person suffering from disease is criminal."

And "it is high time that some one disproved these claims," remarked Dr. A. Augustus O'Neill, former president of the Chicago Medical society and medical director of the state Red Cross during the war.

"This is only another manifestation of the craze which swept the world when Dr. Brown-Sequard announced the discovery of his elixir of life thirty years ago," he continued. "He took the secretions of the same glands which are being transplanted into humans now and injected the secretions hypodermically.

"Those who write the testimonials telling of the wonderful effects of gland transplantations are laboring under a delusion."

Story of Hospital.

According to information received by THE TRIBUNE yesterday from its correspondent in Milford, Kansas, Dr. Brinkley arrived there late in 1917. Shortly afterward the "Brinkley-Jones Hospital," a two-story and a half frame building, the largest in the town of 250 inhabitants, was erected. It was opened with a formal program, including an address by Dr. Brinkley. Then came the reports of sensational operations and the arrival of scores of credulous ones who, like Ponce de Leon, journeyed toward the fountain of youth. One man from California, like "Kernel Cootie," in Friday morning's TRIBUNE, brought his own goat.

Juror Cannot Live on $3 Per Day; Excused

James D. Fennessy, 2998 Archer avenue, one of a special panel of fifty veniremen called to serve in the election fraud cases before Judge Robert E. Crowe yesterday, asked to be excused on account of the illness of his wife.

"Three dollars a day is not enough to support a wife and three children," he told the judge.

"It is unfortunate that the state cannot afford to pay a living wage to jurymen," Judge Crowe said as he excused Fennessy. "Some time ago I asked that it be doubled, but the state doesn't think it can afford it."

Legion Chaplain-General Soon to Resign His Post

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 21.—The. Rev. Father Francis A. Kelly, Albany, N. Y., chaplain-general of the American Legion, who is in a local hospital recuperating from injuries received in an automobile accident July 26, announced today he will resign from his post in the legion Sept. 28, when his term expires.

Father Kelly plans to return to his diocese work in Albany after his resignation takes effect, he said.

Father Kelly will continue to work for the legion as a member, he said. He has been connected with the organization since it was founded.

POLICE HUNT EXPRESS THIEVES.

Cleveland, O., Aug. 21.—Police today were asked to search for thieves who stole $3,500 from an American Railway express car in transit from Pittsburgh to Cleveland yesterday. The theft was discovered when the train arrived at the Pennsylvania railroad station here.

They Can't Help It

SIX pretty girls, Health Commissioner John Dill Robertson's stenographic staff, have been isolated from the other members of the clerical corps and now occupy a room with nice ground glass partitions.

"I observed," explained Dr. Robertson, "that the masculine employés were wont to engage them in conversation and that there was keen rivalry to perform little acts of chivalry.

"Of course the girls can't help it. An appeal was made to me, and I came to their assistance by placing them in a separate room."

The girls are Lila Flynn, Lilas Klinker, Myrtle Simpson, Daisy Rosenbaum, Carrie Gilmartin, and Katherine Hartnett.

FARMERS' UNION WANTS WHEAT UP TO $3 A BUSHEL

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 21.—Protesting against "recent manipulations of the American wheat market," organized farmers of Missouri, Nebraska, and Oklahoma, were planning to force an advance in the price of wheat that they may realize "a reasonable profit" on their product.

As the result of a meeting of representatives of the farmers of the four states here farmers will be urged to withhold wheat from the market until a minimum of $3 as a terminal market price is obtained.

A resolution adopted characterized alleged manipulations of the wheat market as "a performance which has forced a decline of more than 80 cents a bushel in a few days." The decline has reduced wheat prices to $2 a bushel and less, the farmers said citing figures to prove that the average farmer loses 77 cents a bushel at that price.

Haas Picnic Party Made Seasick by Lake Winds

Michigan City, Ind., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—It was sick 700 Chicagoans that arrived in Michigan City on the steamer Florida this afternoon to celebrate Joseph F. Haas day.

The seasick picnickers were greeted by city officials and escorted to Washington park by their own band, where a picnic dinner was enjoyed by those who could eat.

It was reported every one on board the board suffered from seasickness and only about half of the party mustered up courage to make the return trip via the water route this evening.

ADMITS MURDER OF CONDUCTOR ON DINING CAR

Former Porter Sought to Avenge Grudge.

With the arrest of Joseph T. Todd, 22 years old, 3937 Indiana avenue, colored, by Detective Sergeant Timothy O'Connor of the Englewood station the mysterious murder of James B. Todd, dining car steward for the Pennsylvania railroad, who was shot and killed on his train near Englewood station, was solved yesterday.

Joseph Todd, a former dining car porter, confessed that he shot James Todd, the dining car steward, because he had "done him dirt." He claims that he had no intention of killing the man; all he wanted to do was to injure him in revenge for the old grudge.

The Negro, who lives at 3937 Indiana avenue, was arrested by a squad of detectives under Sergt. O'Connor in front of a building at 5355 Federal street and was immediately taken to the offices of the state's attorney, where he made a complete confession to Assistant State's Attorney John C. Melinaphy.

Borrowed Gun from Woman.

According to the story told by Todd to the prosecutor, he had had trouble with the dining car steward on two occasions, once in Pittsburgh about eight months ago and again in Chicago four months ago. On the night of the shooting he obtained a loaded revolver from a Negro woman living in the neighborhood of Thirty-fifth street and Indiana avenue and then went to the Englewood station of the Pennsylvania railroad, where he boarded the New York-Chicago train.

He went into the dining car and found the steward counting his daily receipts and shot him, and then attempted to shoot several colored porters who had been witnesses of the crime. Following the shooting he ran to the platform of the car, pulled the signal cord, and when the train stopped he jumped off and escaped.

Identified by Man in Car.

Todd has been identified as the man who did the shooting by Sam Reeves, 3118 South Wabash avenue, one of the porters in the car and one of the men at whom he shot. Detectives have been sent out to get the woman who gave Todd the revolver and also to find the weapon.

WRIT BY WIFE AWAITS HEARNE AT ELGIN RACES

When Eddie Hearne, Chicago race driver, pulls into the pits at the close of the Elgin road races next Saturday he will face the alternative of providing a $3,000 bond or going to jail. His dilemma arises from the issuance of a writ of ne exeat by Judge Joseph Fitch in the Superior court yesterday. Mrs. Zola S. Hearne, the racer's wife, petitioned for the writ to compel her husband to provide for her maintenance before leaving the jurisdiction of the Illinois courts.

EDDIE HEARNE.

It will not be the first time Hearne has finished an Elgin race to fall into the clutches of a deputy sheriff and an irate wife. In 1914 he was arrested at the close of a race there and released on bond, later to be fined for contempt for failure to pay alimony to Mrs. Gertrude McKay Hearne. In 1915 the proceeding was repeated, as the racer continued in arrears on alimony granted a year before.

Hearne and his second wife were married on Oct. 21, 1915, in Kansas City and separated in October, 1917. She recently filed a bill for divorce, charging desertion.

In the petition presented before Judge Fitch yesterday Mrs. Hearne asserted her husband earned from $5,000 to $15,000 a year. He has given her no money for support and maintenance since leaving her, she asserts.

Man Who Served in War Becomes Citizen at Last

Baboo Ram of 2456 Prairie avenue smiled as he walked home last night. After many years waiting he had become an American citizen.

He came to America several years ago and was preparing to apply for his first papers when the war began. He enlisted and served two years. Then he was honorably discharged. He applied for citizenship, but was told that technicalities prevented him obtaining his desire. He applied to the "United Americans," a pro-American organization. They helped him secure his citizenship.

Dill Pickler's Chief and Bride Are Shipwrecked

"Jack" Jones, head of the Dill Pickle club of Chicago, and his bride, got into Ephraim, Wis., yesterday in a severe storm. The engine of the eighteen foot dory in which they took their honeymoon trip had become disabled and the boat was swamped. Jones built the boat himself and sailed it. He and the second Mrs. Jones left Chicago early last week. Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, the "Socialist Joan of Arc," was the first Mrs. Jones.

CIVILIZATION AND BREACH OF CONTRACT.

When the first primitive man put down his club, made an agreement with his opponent, and kept it there was the beginning of civilization.

All human progress dated from that act.

The keeping of your word is the foundation of civilized intercourse, the cement which holds our whole house of civilized life together. Without it there is but one law—the law of force.

Agreement or contract does not abolish injustice. It gives play to deceit. It is often founded on some form of force. Nevertheless it is an advance in human relations over force, and it is the only way to remove the intercourse of men from the animal plane and give opportunity to man's moral nature to form his relations and to develop. Force has had and always will have its rôle in human life and human advancement. We cannot deny that, but if our lives are safer, more comfortable, and richer in experience than that of the cave man, it is because agreement gave man opportunity to live in peace, to produce, to accumulate, to ponder, and to invent. By these means the welfare of the masses of mankind has gradually advanced through the ages. The poorest of the poor, the weakest, the most ignorant and helpless have been in some measure benefited by them, and it is these who would lose most by their destruction.

Yet there is a radicalism which justifies and teaches a general denial of the principle of agreement. Bolshevism is the most conspicuous representative of this doctrine, but it infects a good deal of the radical thought current in the labor movement. Contracts are often not respected as they should be even among those who argue for collective bargaining.

We do not contend that contracts always should be kept. So-called capitalistic law provides for relief from certain contracts, and it is obvious that until men's actions are governed wholly by the golden rule, contracts will sometimes be forced or unjustly or procured by dishonest methods. Contracts procured by duress or by concealment of essential facts are not binding in law or morals—"capitalistic" morals. But the false radicalism which we refer does not concern itself with such. This radicalism holds that as between the employer and employé no contract is binding if the employé sees fit to break it; that is, if he thinks he can benefit himself by not keeping his word.

This is as different from the principle of refusing compliance with a contract which has been imposed by force, in a practical sense, or by willful deceit, as black is from white. Radical ethics justifies it on the ground that the relation of employer and employé is always and essentially one of duress, economic duress, and that the employé, being unable in capitalistic society to choose freely, is forced into all contracts he makes. They cover this reasoning with the assertion that the wage earner is a slave, regardless of whether this wage earner is living under duress of direct force or under conditions of political democracy which give him and the majority of the other members of his community the right and power to change institutions and laws by agreement.

Although this conception of democratic society does not square with the facts, we need not analyze it here because, even if it were true, it would not justify the repudiation of the principle of good faith advocated by false radicals. We say false radicals, because a real radical, as the word implies, goes to the root, and these radicals do not go to the root of social evils or to the logical conclusion of their own philosophy. The root of the matter is not in the form of men's relations, but in their impulse to oppress and to cheat. Changes of form may modify and mitigate; they do not transform men's relations. In Russia the Utopian claims of bolshevism did not prevent cruelty, oppression, and deceit by the bolshevists.

The principle of good faith, of contract, is as essential to a proletarian system of society as any other, for it underlies all systems. When the radical, for the sake of destroying existing forms of society by making them unworkable, strikes at this principle, he is radical only in the sense that he is striking at the root of civilized human relations. But he is not radical in any other sense, because he thinks he can build a better society without its most essential foundation. He is superficial, not radical, and puts his reliance on machinery more than any "bourgeois," who, after all, puts his final reliance upon the innate attributes of the individual—the foundation of all workable systems of government or society.

The bolshevik, by justifying the breach of faith, destroys the base upon which the very system he seeks to establish must rest. He dooms his own child to death. He asks civilized man to go back to the jungle and the cave.

THE BIRDS AND THE LAW.

Two items in the day's news deal with birds. There is a jump of many pages between the item telling of the annual gathering of purple martins in Chicago for their winter vacation trip to Central America, and the item telling of a move to prosecute fifty-five Chicagoans for keeping ducks, quail and wild geese in cold storage beyond the legal time limit, but they are related none the less.

Even the casual reader, who knows nothing of birds and cares less, is stirred to momentary interest by the statement that the martins assemble by thousands at one spot in Jackson park and in a vacant lot in Evanston early every August for their journey to the south. It reveals something of the wonders of bird life and bird instinct. It is a clean, healthful, out of door interest. It may lead to the discovery of such interesting facts as that a purple martin destroys a thousand insects every day and that without them a thousand trees would die every year.

It is a start toward knowledge of the value of our bird life, and the interest which study of birds may hold. To that extent it is related to the item about the ducks. The law against storage of wild ducks for more than ten days after the close of the season is designed to help protect the ducks from promiscuous killers. It is only one of the many laws for the protection of birds. They should be protected.

The suggestion of federal action against fifty-five Chicagoans alleged to have violated the law will serve at least to emphasize the existence of such laws and to recall the necessity of their enforcement.

ALIEN CAUSES AND AMERICAN NATIONALISM.

Senator Harding said the other day that a new sense of the wisdom of Washington had come to him while sitting in senate committee and listening to the appeals of delegations on behalf of home folk across the sea.

The remark touches an aspect of the league of nations question which gets too little consideration. Once the United States takes a seat in the council of the league and every cause in Europe will become an American domestic issue. We cannot escape something of this now. The present makeup of and inadequate assimilation of our population makes the evil unavoidable. But so long as the United States has no formal responsibility to act, is confessedly sovereign and independent, we are able to offset the ardors of foreign nationalism, hyphenism, or whatever you choose to call it, with insistence upon our policy of non-interference. But seated at the league table we assume direct responsibility for international action or inaction upon every question which boils in the old world caldron. Not a foreign group in our population but will be exhorted by their home folks to exert their greatest influence upon our government. This will intensify the ties which bind our newcomers to their old home and obstruct the growth of American interests and ideas.

Mr. Wilson is such an internationalist, so far as Americanism is concerned, that he could and would contemplate this result upon our domestic character with indifference, if not satisfaction. But for those of us who wish to see the United States evolve as a nation and to see the American people, drawn as it has been from every race and clime, fuse as soon as possible into a self-conscious and harmonious national entity, this promise of an invasion of alien issues, sympathies, and antagonisms must be one of the most forceful of arguments against entering the league.

Our situation in this respect is different from that of any great power. We alone are in process of national amalgamation. We alone have a population largely subject to alien traditions and affiliations. We alone need deliberately to cultivate unity, to devote ourselves to assimilation, to resist forces which are centrifugal and disintegrating.

The world war has made us of this generation rather belatedly conscious of the dangers of malassimilation. We are beginning to take them seriously. We see what pan-Germanism and Irish nationalism can do towards distracting and confusing opinion and policy. We know that in the situation produced by the war many passionate causes have been revived, and that if we enter European politics as a responsible monitor or agent these causes will be fought out in our own domestic politics, obscuring problems proper to American policy and diverting thought and feeling which should go to their solution.

The American people have fought one war for independence and one for political union. But we are still in need of independence and of unity. Our greatest need is the interfusion of our different strains into a social, cultural, and political entity, an American personality as homogeneous as the British, German, or French. This is no small task, and its performance will be seriously retarded, if not defeated, by the intrusion of many alien problems, by the perpetuation of alien sympathies and the solidification of alien groups, which it is our special need to diffuse and assimilate as soon as possible.

Thoughtful Americans will hesitate long before inviting the transfer of the European confusion into our politics.

NO TAMMANY IN ILLINOIS.

Downstate they are likely to remember. That is why when the Lundin-Thompson Tammany crusaders leave their home hunting grounds, where we have no time to remember, they meet a fall of political temperature.

The Lundin-Thompson Tammany proposes to "protect" the people of Illinois from the public utilities. The folks downstate recall the attempt of Yerkes to get a perpetual grip on the streets of Chicago. They recall the Allen bill, which caused a rebellion of decent citizenship throughout the state, and they will note that the present real head of the new crusaders was then in the state senate and gave the Allen bill his voice and vote.

That was more than twenty years ago, but the Lundin-Lorimer-Thompson political philosophy has never changed. The variety of bunk varies, but the reality under it never. The support of Yerkesism, the waste of the west parks, Lorimerism, the present exploitation of the public service and ruin of the city's credit are all of a piece—fruit of the same malodorous tree.

Downstate will remember, and so, we believe, will Chicago.

Editorial of the Day

DRAFT EVADERS.

[Seattle Post-Intelligencer.]

A young man who spends three years in solitary exile, subsisting on the scanty fare that could be found in the mountain wilderness, rather than respond to the call of his country in the hour of national peril, is beyond the understanding of most Americans. Outwardly there is nothing abnormal about Alfred Fattig, who driven to desperation by the loneliness of the woods, has surrendered to the federal authorities in Oregon. Yet Alfred Fattig and his brother, Charles, who is still in concealment, and the thousands of his kind, including the notorious Bergdoll brothers, are not as other young men. Somewhere in their makeup there is a queer twist which distinguishes them from the splendid young Americans who stood by their flag and their country.

The figures given out by the war department indicate that there were a great many Fattigs and Bergdolls in the country. They are to be rounded up and punished for their crimes. They are contemptible in the eyes of their fellow countrymen since they chose to shirk when an appeal was made to their patriotism and to their manhood. In the sum total of the country's manhood they count as nothing.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

"HOW," a Missouri man asks his favorite news paper, "should corn on the cob be eaten?" If he will take the trouble to look through the files of this column—in 1901 or '02, we think—he will learn all there is to know about eating corn from the cob. There were plain and fancy methods, among the latter being the art of leaving your initials in relief.

Punctuation's Artless Aid.

SUNSHINE AND ROSES AND YOU.

I know of an old-fashioned garden,
Where pansies and hollyhocks grow
With poppies as red as the sunset,
And lilies as white as the snow.
The roses bend over the pathway,
The roses climb over the wall;
And you are the gardener, my darling,
The loveliest flower of them all.

The sunshine is bright in the garden,
And scented and soft is the air,
While happiness blooms like the roses,
With never a shadow of care.
But should there come sorrow or showers,
And should there come tempest on tears,
The joy of your presence, my darling,
Would still fill with sunshine my years.

As sweet as the rose at your girdle,
I woo you with tenderest art:
I'll win you and hold you, my darling,
The treasure and pride of my heart.
My vows shall be sweet as the south wind,
My kisses fall soft as the dew,
And I'll live and I'll love in our garden
With sunshine and roses and you.

DISILLUSIONMENT is the latest literary wear. Aldous Huxley, at 25, hasn't a single illusion left. Then there is that other sophisticated infant, Mr. Fitzgerald. What is to become of him? Like Heifetz, he has no future.

WONDER WHAT THIS OISEAU DID?

[From the Morris, Man., Herald.]

To the Editor: Kindly allow me to make a public apology in your paper concerning my conduct in a game of ball between Emerson and Morris. I feel very sorry and ashamed of myself for losing my hasty temper. I could not have been in my right mind to do just as I did, to allow such a provocation to make me do as I did. It seems like a bad dream to me and never will forget it. In my 24 years of playing I never lost control of myself before. I forgive the player who was the cause of my weakness, and hold no ill will to any one. It will be better for me to say no more.

How about a little good society?

ROMANCE.

Today I rummaged in my mind
And found a little room,
Forgotten long and left behind
To silence and to gloom;
And there I found a dream of old
All covered up in dust,
A shining dream of purest gold
In which I once did trust.

I set my little room to rights,
Let in the wind and sun,
And later trimmed the shrouded lights
And lit them every one;
And down I sate and read a tale
I had not read for years:
Of knights and jousts, and of the Grail,
Of shadowy woods and meres.

And lo! my little room became
A palace far away,
And I therein a soul aflame
In haunts of yesterday.
Encased in mail, with Galahad
I rode upon a quest—
Forsooth, again I was a lad
By old Romance possessed.

LAURA BLACKBURN.

DURING 1820 Keats published his best poems and Shelley some of his greatest; Scott published "The Monastery," and "The Abbott"; Lamb made his appearance in the London Magazine, and Hazlitt issued his lectures on the Elizabethan drama. We fear that 1920 is not going to match that record.

The Diverse Paces of Time.

Sir: Central Standard Time struggles ineffectually with Daylight Saving Time; "an hour before the sun," objected Benvolio. But as "the finger of a clock runs the great circuit," so may man's ingenuity overcome his inhumanity; necessity's daughter has adjusted for me the fashion of these times, and why not for others? On my stairway hangs a cuckoo clock rampant, and minus its hour hand. Take such a clock on your pilgrimages, since it accommodates its record both to Standard and Daylight Saving, and is correct in either case. Neither Hipparchus nor Ptolemy, in introducing or extending the Babylonian system of parasangs or hours, ever designed such confusion as now engulfs the traveler, as "time travels in diverse paces," and at last the much abused cuckoo comes into his own. ABOUT WORM MEDICINES.

WHILE there are practically no symptoms of worms and most of the symptoms which are supposed to indicate worms are unreliable and misleading, probably the women of the last generation were right when they gave their children worm medicine about once a year. At least, they were not far from right when they gave ordinary American worm seed. None of the new fangled, imported worm medicines are equal to American worm seed, the seed which grows so abundantly and so widely in the United States.

Children play on the floor; they, or at least those not able to walk, use their arms and hands as a means of locomotion. Putting the hands into the mouth is instinctive with the young human animal and no amount of admonition or training ever wholly overcomes the tendency. Since intestinal worms are swallowed as eggs (or occasionally as young worms) the wonder is that any child escapes.

The cleaner the floors, the fewer animals, such as cats, dogs, and rats, there are around, the fewer worms children have. Many intestinal worms cause anemia, some do harm and even endanger life by crawling into unusual cavities, and some do harm only by their physical presence. It has been proved in recent years that the ordinary round worm, supposed to be the most harmless of all worms, penetrates the lungs and occasionally causes pneumonia.

The eggs of this worm are swallowed, pass into the intestines, and hatch as young worms. These penetrate the liver and go on to the lungs. They get into the bronchial tubes, crawl up into the throat, are swallowed, and lodge in the intestines, where they grow to maturity.

It takes the swallowed worm less than two and a half months to reach maturity in the human intestine. In ten days after the eggs are swallowed the young worms are penetrating the lungs.

Of the various worm medicines, American worm seed is the best all round remedy for the various worms which infect the human intestine; fewer are unharmed by worm seed than any other. For instance, santonin, which is used rather more frequently than any other worm medicine, is not poisonous to hookworms and not very poisonous to round worms.

In order to rid the intestines of round worms with santonin, as Hall shows in the American Journal of Veterinary Medicine, it is necessary to give it repeatedly. To give it and keep on giving it will get rid of whip worms and eventually of round worms. It is chosen usually because it is easy to take, does not upset the stomach, and seldom poisons.

Hall tells us that Germany had a monopoly of santonin before the war. It is made in only one factory and that is in Russian Turkestan, and for fifteen months none has been put out. But worm seed, a better, if less pleasant remedy, is here in great abundance.

BABY BEST AT HOME.

C. W. F. writes: "My 8 months old baby's diet consists of four feedings of eight ounces each made up of three parts certified milk to one part oatmeal water (also sugar). I nurse him before each feeding. For his noon feeding I give farina, soup with zwieback, and a little vegetable. He weighs 21 pounds and is in splendid health and very regular in all his habits. (Of course, he gets orange juice, too.)

I am going to the country for two weeks. Would it be safe to give the baby milk which we would get from the farm there? The milk seems good, though, of course, richer than the certified milk. I could put up the feedings within half an hour of milking time. I can have the certified milk iced enough for two days at a time, sent me, but do not wish to do it unless necessary."

REPLY.

The best place for your baby is at home. If you are determined to go it will be all right to feed fresh milk in the country. If the cows are not proved to be free from tuberculosis by tuberculin test home pasteurize the milk. This is easily done without apparatus. Set the milk bottle on a saucer in a kettle of water.

IT'S A MATTER OF TASTE.

H. B. writes: "Is henna harmful when used as a coloring for the hair? In beauty parlors they use it hot, applying it with a brush and letting it remain on the head one hour, and then washing the scalp thoroughly. It causes a little smarting to the scalp for an hour or so, but seems to do no harm. If you will please answer this question I will be thankful. If it is harmful I don't care to continue its use."

REPLY.

It is not liable to harm your health. If you can stand being pointed out as a hennaite you have nothing to worry about.

TOO OLD FOR CANCER.

R. L. S. writes: "This is the third time I have written you, but have not received a reply. Will you kindly advise me what are the symptoms of cancer of the mouth? I have had a small, hard lump on the roof of my mouth, right over a front tooth and on the other side over another tooth there is a sort of a hollow. This lump has been there as long as I can remember, but has never given me any trouble. Once the roof of my mouth was sore after I ate bitter sweet chocolate or something of that kind. Will you kindly advise me and let me know if there is any cure for cancer of the mouth?"

REPLY.

A lump which has been in the mouth "as long as I can remember" is not cancer. See your physician. If this lump should be removed he will do so. If not, do not tamper with it. The cure for cancer of the mouth is very early removal of the tumor, or treatment with radium or X rays, or both.

Letters for this department must be signed with names and addresses of the writers.

THE NEIGHBOR'S CHICKENS.

South Chicago, Aug. 17.—[Friend of the People.]—Can any one, regardless of who they are, keep a large number of chickens in a crowded neighborhood in the vicinity of South Chicago? They draw rats and mice. Our place, consisting of three flats, is just overcrowded with them. MRS. S.

Chickens may be kept, provided they are confined to an inclosed space and do not become a nuisance to the neighborhood. The writer does not give a definite address and this particular case cannot be investigated.

JOHN DILL ROBERTSON,
Commissioner of Health.

INSURANCE AGENTS.

Cairo, Ill., Aug. 18.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—Several life insurance agents have been after me since I left the army to take out life insurance. I carried government insurance, but have let it drop. What should I do? I am not married, but hope to be. H. L.

The best life insurance writers will advise you to keep hold of your government insurance, because they know that the strength of the United States government is the security for these policies, and they know that the premiums are lower than those charged by any company for participating insurance with similar benefits. You should reinstate your full insurance and carry it until you want to change it into one of the permanent policies now being issued by the government. By getting permanent government insurance now you get a better rate than you will a few years hence and are commencing a bank account at the same time.

MAKING A WILL.

Chicago, Aug. 16.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Kindly inform the subscriber on the following points:

1. If a man dies without a will in this state, leaving a wife and an only daughter as the nearest relatives (the daughter married with family), how will the property be apportioned?

2. In making a will, is it necessary to have it made by a notary or other official?

3. Is it essential to have the will witnessed by one or more parties?

4. Is it necessary to have the signature of such witnesses legally confirmed to guard against the event of their previous death? R. K.

1. The wife will take one-third of the personalty and a life interest in one-third of the realty, in addition to widow's award and possible homestead. The daughter will take the balance.

2. There is no statutory requirement to that effect, but we advise you to employ an attorney in order to make sure that the matter is properly handled.

3. Yes.

4. Statutory forms must be complied with.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

RENTER IS LAX.

Chicago, Aug. 16.—[Friend of the People.]—Can you tell if there is a law to compel an agent to fix the floors and clean the walls and also to fix the plumbing? The place is very dirty and needs fixing badly of a building he rents for $35 a month. He raised the rent from $30 just a few months ago and refused to clean.

The place in question is a store and the young fellow that keeps the place is afraid he will lose his trade, as the customers have already complained about the place being so dirty. M. F.

Try reporting the facts to the department of health, city hall, Chicago.

NOTICE TO VACATE.

Waukegan, Ill., Aug. 16.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. How long notice to vacate apartment must be given? Is verbal notice sufficient? Landlord gave no definite word, only saying, "I guess I will take this flat."

2. Tenant has lease with clause to vacate on sixty days' notice. If notice is given on the 2d of June, is tenant allowed thirty days according to law, and an additional sixty days on the lease? V. I. K.

1. The matter is not well settled. We incline to the opinion that the notice described is insufficient. The wording of the lease might affect the answer.

2. Depends on the wording of the clause.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

MEMORY TESTS. CAN YOU ANSWER THESE?

MEN AND WOMEN.

1. What distinguished service is Betsy Ross said to have performed for her country?
2. In what line of work was Horace Mann eminent?
3. What state did Roger Williams found in the seventeenth century?
4. Who was Molly Pitcher?
5. What was the fate of William Walker, one of the most famous of the American filibusters?
6. What Democrat, in the course of a debate on the silver question, uttered these words, "You shall not crucify mankind upon a cross of gold," and so impressed the convention before which he spoke that he was nominated for president?
7. Who fell, mortally wounded, during the duel between Alexander Hamilton and Aaron Burr?
8. Who was Lucretia Mott?
9. In what line of work did Phineas Taylor Barnum achieve fame?
10. Who was Jefferson Davis?

LITERATURE ANSWERS.

1. Who was the author of the "Confessions of an English Opium Eater"? Thomas De Quincey.
2. In what legend by Washington Irving does the character of Ichabod Crane, Yankee schoolmaster, appear? "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow."
3. What is the Decameron? A collection of Italian stories written by Boccacio.
4. Who was it in the Old Testament who is said to have sold his birthright for a mess of pottage? Esau, Isaac's son.
5. Who wrote the Essays of Elia? Charles Lamb.
6. Whose poem was written to Theresa Macri, a beautiful Italian maiden, and was called "Maid of Athens"? Lord Byron's poem.
7. When and what was the Renaissance? The great intellectual movement that took place in Europe during the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries.
8. What is the nationality of a man popularly referred to in literature as "Taffy"? Welsh.
9. What famous Greek philosopher was called by the Delphic oracle "The Wisest Man of Greece"? Socrates.
10. What soldier is referred to in prose and poetry as "Tommy Atkins"? The British soldier.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

BOY, PAGE THE STAFF.

Chicago, Aug. 17.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—For years The Tribune has been the most popular newspaper with my family and most of my friends, irrespective of political conviction.

Why? Because the paper contained features that pleased us nine shots out of ten. We liked (1) Mr. Burton Rascoe's book reviews, (2) A Line o'Type or Two, (3) The Voice of the People, (4) Mr. Percy Hammond's dramatic criticism, and (5) the news and special article sections in so far as old guard Republicanism did not distort them. Men like Mr. Henry M. Hyde were especially pleasing.

The way it looks to me now is that the editor has acquired somehow a spin of reverse English on his judgment. Hammond seems to be ruined by his change of venue. Miss Forbes, who seems to be pinch hitting, in a way, for Rascoe, is unfascinating—to treat the lady kindly. Hyde is gone though not forgotten. Isn't B. L. T. becoming sufficiently popular so his head will fit the block? The Wake of the News is a terrible thing. The attempts of The Tribune to swing popular opinion would be laughable if they were not actually sinister at times. The section devoted to history and to memory tests is one of the worst things ever perpetrated. L. M. S.

DOES MEDIOCRE COMPANY RUIN GOOD CORN?

Rockford, Ill., Aug. 17.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I wish you had never written your "Golden Bantam Days" editorial of this morning. The editorial of some years ago did not divide your allegiance. Realizing that I may bring upon myself the classification given to "Flatterer," who asked for a reprint of the old tribute, I, too, would in asking for it give an indication of personal liking for this most toothsome vegetable grown in our gardens.

To modify the editorial is to take as great a liberty with the subject as it would be to attempt an improvement upon McCutcheon's Indian Summer picture.

And then to think that as the years have rolled by you have found in Early Malcom, Shoepeg, and Country Gentlemen (which is but the polite name for Shoepeg, in order to get 20 cents a dozen more for the same thing), something about which to let your happy pen narrate? It is too bad to put Golden Bantam glorious in such mediocre company.

W. W. BENNETT.

LOOKING OUT FOR THE STATE TREASURY.

Elgin, Ill., Aug. 13.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Thompson-Tammany does not like The Tribune or the "watch your state" voters and I am inclined to believe they will never like us. They will never get the upper hand on us either, because if they did the state treasury would dwindle down like the Chicago treasury is today, and this would mean we would be bankrupted all around. The Chicago situation is close enough for us without having more shame. We want Oglesby for governor.

JOSEPH DELAHANTY.

AN ARGUMENT FOR CO-OPERATIVE MARKETING.

Kingsbury, Ind., Aug. 14.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—So much has been written on the H. C. L. problem I want to add a little testimony. A resident of our village, raising considerably more fruit than his family can use, has been having some interesting experience. After offering choice cherries, carefully picked and well crated, to a number of retail grocers, and agreeing to take his pay in trade, found the market oversupplied and was unable to even get an offer. Some of his trees, loaded with cherries, were left untouched and the ground beneath them is literally paved with the pits of wasted fruit. The condition now is about the same with apples and other fruits.

Is there a remedy for this condition? The farmer and gardener have their money invested in fruit and vegetables that they cannot dispose of and the city housewife is obliged to pay the high prices. Is this justice to the farmer and gardener and is it fair to the city consumer? WILLARD D. NORTON.

DEFINING THE PROFITEER.

Waverly, Ia., Aug. 14.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Mr. E. L. Cox wants some one to point out the animal known as a profiteer. That is easy. Some have four legs. And a great many have only two. They both travel about under the name of hog. Mr. Cox cites a case of a man buying a farm for $200 an acre and selling it in six months for $300 an acre. Was he a profiteer? I answer, no, but simply a speculator. There is a difference between speculation and robbery. If a merchant bought a piece of merchandise in 1916 for $50 and sold it in 1918 for $100, and his overhead expense was 20 per cent per annum, was he profiteering? It is to be presumed this merchant had other pieces of merchandise in stock on which his overhead expense was also 20 per cent per annum and which he sold for much less than 100 per cent profit. Hence he was profiteering on the piece he bought in 1916, and belongs with the two legged hogs. A corporation declared a 300 per cent dividend in 1918. Was that corporation profiteering? Most assuredly. A corporation that robs the people of $3 annually for every $1 invested may be classed as 300 per cent "hoggish." J. B. QUIMBY.

Polish Advance Continues

1—Moscow reports successes in the region of Ciechanow on the northern front. The Poles gain at Plonsk.

2—Reds again attempted to bridge the Vistula with pontoons near Plock, but were repulsed.

3—The main bulk of the Red army has escaped. They outran the Poles, due in part to the great number of horses in their possession. The Poles have taken Drohiczyn and are on the Bug river in many places.

4—The Poles have not yet entered Brest-Litovsk. The Reds still hold the town, but are almost surrounded.

5—The Poles are driving across the Bug toward Kovel.

6—Gen. Budenny, with soviet cavalry, is almost within sight of Lemberg in a great thrust on the Galician city.

"Bedouins" [Scribner], by James Huneker.

The six best circulators in the public library last week were:
"This Side of Paradise" by F. Scott Fitzgerald.
"White Shadows of the South Seas," by Frederick O'Brien.
"The Rescue," by Joseph Conrad.
"Now It Can Be Told," by Philip Gibbs.
"Mrs. Warren's Daughter," by Sir Harry Johnston.
"Woman Triumphant," by Blasco Ibanez.

"SUNNY DUCROW," by Henry St. John Cooper, is a sort of volatilized Polyanna. Sunny is a little girl from a pickle factory, who at the age of 17, after a few months of following her own advice, "Hold your head up and keep smiling," is not only the idol of the London stage but half owner in the pickle factory which by that time has become a national institution, with a model city attachment and ads on every street corner. It's a wholly impossible yarn, and yet somehow it has a charm that holds one's attention, perhaps because it is so utterly impossible. There are moments in it which are really amusing, and the heroine, despite her Jesse Jameslike assurance about life, is fun.

The Century company is putting into print again "The Strangling of Persia," by W. Morgan Shuster. During the war a third edition was exhausted, and the difficulties in the printing trade deterred the publishers from ordering a new edition. When Mr. Shuster was asked if he wanted to make any corrections, he said that he could suggest no changes; that time had vindicated his statement of facts, and long consideration had made all the firmer his convictions based on the facts.

Edwin Balmer, whose latest novel was "Ruth of the U. S. A.," which ran serially in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE, will have a new one this fall. "Resurrection Rock" it is to be called. It is a Chicago-Northern Michigan story, and those who have read the manuscript say that it is far and away the best thing he has ever done.

Harry A. Franck, whose latest jaunt is "Vagabonding Through Changing Germany," has settled in New York for a few weeks, with Mrs. Franck and young Harry Jr., who was born at sea a few months ago. His journey through the West Indies, from which he has just returned, will be his next book.

"Children in the Mist," by Grace Madden Martin, is a collection of short stories about the Negroes of Mississippi, Louisiana, and Florida, of Carolina, and rural Kentucky. They picture them as, to quote Mrs. Martin, "children groping through a fog." "Sweet and lovable, mystified, baffled and exploited, discouraged and embittered," she says, "these hapless people, children who, after fifty-six years of freedom, still see in a glass darkly."

"The Golden Bird," by Dorothy Easton, comes to this country sponsored by John Galsworthy, who says of the sketches which make up the book, "not snapshots, but little pictures, entirely without preciosity, extraordinarily sensitive, and faithful, and never dull, because they have real meaning and truth." They are, in a sense, literary descendants of the "character" of the sixteenth century, except that they concern situations instead of one person.

It is a book essentially for leisure, the sort of thing which should be interrupted by long glimpses at quiet landscapes, by uncounted moments of thinking that are really just "settin'," as the New Englander says. It is not a stirring book. It is, rather, a sedative volume, satisfying in that the author has accomplished with skill a difficult technical feat.

Probably the most prolific writer of the present day is Isabel Ostrander, who writes detective stories under her own name, under the pseudonym of Robert Orr Chipperfield, and, I hear, under three other names. She turns out a complete story every six weeks, and she is a genius in the manufacture of plots. If she could write as well as Wilkie Collins did, she'd become a fireside classic instead of merely an almost best seller. Her latest is "Unseen Hands," one of those across the murderer mystery stories. It is published under her Chipperfield personality. "Ashes to Ashes" was the latest Ostrander one.

"Germany After the Armistice" is the translation of a report based on the personal testimony of representative Germans concerning the conditions existing in 1919. It is in reality a collection of interviews which Maurice Berger, a Belgian journalist, had with representative Germans.

Immediately after the armistice M. Berger went to Germany to put pertinent questions about the war and its conduct to men of power in politics, diplomacy, and the arts and sciences. His interviews were published in Le Matin and L'Excelsior of Paris and in Le Soir of Brussels. They were the talk of Europe for awhile. They are interesting—in translation—but somehow they seem just a little out of date, because most of them concern a state of society and mind which is now no more.

Hermann Sudermann had this to say in answer to the question, "Did the war cause a stoppage in your literary production?":

"On the contrary, production has never been more abundant. Some have gone along in the old way. Others have expressed in dramas, novels, and poetry the feelings aroused by this great and terrible crisis. But there has been no outstanding work. I mean none of the importance of Barbusse's Sous Feu, for instance." (He means Le Feu.) The book is nothing more than bound journalism, but accepted as that it has a place on any shelf consecrated to war and post-war documents.

"Auction Helps" is a little book by Lucy Blackburn which takes the backward in bridge by the hand, and leads them into the game.

"An Honest Thief and Other Stories" is the latest addition to Constance Garnett's translations of Dostoevsky. It is Volume XI. of the series.

The Atlantic Monthly's Book Shelf for August shelters "Life of Lord Kitchener, by Sir George Arthur; "Letters of Travel," by Rudyard Kipling; "O. Henry Memorial Award: Prize Stories 1919"; "Lancelot," by Edwin Arlington Robinson; "The Foolish Lovers," by St. John Ervine; "Mrs. Warren's Daughter," by Sir Harry Johnston, and "Social Theory," by G. D. H. Cole. The books are recommended for review each month by the American Library association book list, the Wisconsin Free Library commission, and the staffs of the public libraries in Springfield, Mass.; Newark, Kansas City, and St. Louis. Reprints of the reviews may be had at the public library, or I will send them to you if you will send a stamped, addressed envelope for them.

"Chance and Change in China," by A. S. Roe, is a book of the China of the republic, a pleasant combination of an interpretation of national characteristics and the personal reflections of the author, a travel book in the most popular sense of the word. It is not concerned with politics or economics, merely with human beings and their struggles, as yearners for the new, to make their traditions up to date.

The result is exceedingly amusing in many cases, as Mrs. Roe suggests. A woman so eager to be in the mode that she stands, dressed in her best, on her doorstep gayly smoking a cigaret to prove that she is free, yellow, and 21, a young dandy wearing for an outer wrap the finest product of a Paris corsetiere's art. And the clutch of tradition on a family to such an extent that a young man marries the corpse of the girl who killed herself rather than become his mother's daughter, a grewsome tale.

The story of Punch and Judy shows, which Mrs. Roe says—as marionettes have flourished in China since about 800 B. C. Her pictures of Chinese home life are alternately amusing and depressing, but always fascinating. There is no constraint in the book and no preaching.

J. H. Curle has written a philosophical travel book which he calls "The Shadow-Show," and in which he propounds the theory that Omar Khayyam—or "Old Omar," as he calls him—sponsored centuries ago, that we are but phantom figures in a giant puppet box.

Mr. Curle has been every place in the world. He is more like the sun that never sets on England that any ordinary son of the empire, even of a nation which is noted for its travelers. But he cannot write. He pieces together scraps of impressions which, from a really gifted pen, would have been exquisite vignettes, but which, somehow, from his are rather blurry sketches. His jaunts fits from Tunis to the Taj Mahal, from Chicago to a Chinese revival, from Stevenson's grave to a Cossack sleeping under straw blankets. There is a treasure trove of experience in his book. He is more like a human incarnation of the National Geographic magazine and Explorers' club than any one man in the world.

But when he takes his pen in hand he does merely a job of recording and not of writing. The separate facts are fascinating. Cemented by his observations of life, they lose some of their charm.

His observations about women of all climes are, to say the least, trite, sure of conclusions. Of American women he brazenly says: "Generations of republican training have left her—a woman; lover of glamour, aristocrat at heart, worships appearance; for titles, caste, and precedence she will sell half her soul. And the student of woman (I speak always of the average woman)" Doesn't he know there ain't no average woman?

Another travel book of Mr. Curle's has just been brought out by E. P. Dutton & Co. "Wanderings, a Book of Travel and Reminiscence," it is called. I haven't read it yet.

I found out in Admiral Sir Percy Scott's "Fifty Years in the Royal Navy" how and for my first name. It is, I find whenever I travel much afield in the navy, a time honored name for the lady sheep dog and the pet mare. I had found a dull biography to find that it has a war record. "Bully beef" was

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

THE DEATH BED.

By Thomas Hood.

We watched her sleeping through the night,
Her breathing soft and low,
As in her breast the wave of life
Kept surging to and fro.
So silently we seemed to speak,
So slowly moved about,
As we had lent her half our powers
To eke her being out.
Our very hopes belied our fears,
Our fears our hopes belied,
We thought her dying when she slept,
And sleeping when she died.
For when the morn came dim and sad,
And chill with early showers,
Her quiet eyelids closed, she had Another morn than ours.

the trade name for what those in the know called Fanny Adams. A girl by that name had disappeared mysteriously about the time that bully beef was introduced into the navy. The story got about that she had been "tinned," as the admiral says. "To this day," he declares, "the tins which contain preserved meat, which are utilized for all sorts of purposes, are called Fannys."

"Some of Us Are Married" is another collection of Mary Stewart Cutting's pleasant tales of the little comedies and tragedies of married life. Mrs. Cutting is one of the few married women who writes about marriage humorously, as if it were an institution worth perpetuating.

This girl had never worked before—

Miss Randolph had been graduated from high school with a good record. Circumstances at home made it necessary that she go to work.

But she didn't know what to do. She didn't know a thing about business and she couldn't afford to spend six months or a year studying shorthand.

She worried about it for some time—trying in vain to reach a decision. Then, one Sunday, she saw one of the advertisements on The Illinois School of Filing and decided to send for the 54-page free book—"Filing as a profession for women."

That book was a revelation to Miss Randolph. She had never even imagined that filing was such an important branch of business—or that it could be studied.

So she took the course and studied the principles that underlie all filing systems—learning through actual practice. Today this little girl who had never worked before, is already getting $17.50 a week, plus a BONUS—and she has just started.

Delighted! Well, I should say she is.

Miss Randolph likes the work because it is pleasant and interesting and because it throws her in contact with the important executives of the business.

Who knows! Unless Miss Randolph had read that book and taken the course in filing she might be just one of a hundred girls in an office! Who knows but that it will open up a similar future for you, too!

Drop in tomorrow to see Miss Gladys C. Bridges, the principal of the Illinois School of Filing. She will be glad to tell you about the course.

WONDER WHAT A PRINCE THINKS ABOUT? READ IT

Carol of Roumania Reveals Views.

Zizi having been the subject of protracted public discussion since his highness, Prince Carol of Roumania, arrived in America, his highness gave out yesterday the appended interview.

It was held in the royal visitors' suite at the Blackstone. There were present his private secretary and amanuensis and Charles J. Vopicka, former vintner and now American minister to Roumania. A number of reporters were outside in the hallway. Mr. Vopicka handed them carbon copies of the interview through a crack in the door, a few minutes after the prince had departed via the secret elevator for the Twelfth street station en route to Cleveland.

It's "Prominent Country."

"In passing through the United States on my return from Japan," the prince said, "I did not want to be indifferent to the big business movement of the country, and that is why I have been stopping in the different cities to see their principal features.

"The United States have given me just the impression I expected they (the plural is the prince's) would. It is a prominent country for business, and I am very happy to have had a faint view of it" (the neuter single is the prince's).

Tribute to Papa.

Adverting briefly to his impressions of America, in which he dwells at length upon the stock yards and the agricultural college of Wisconsin university, the prince mentions his native country and intimates that the king of Roumania is a swell fellow:

"Always at the head of generous movements, he was the first to set the example by renouncing his crown properties in favor of the fighting peasants."

Continuing with the horn, the prince observes:

"Do you realize we have become the sixth largest country of Europe; that the natural riches of Roumania are priceless; that our oil wells are the richest in the world; our plains one of the granaries of Europe; our forest enormous El Dorados of timbers; our minerals——"

But we had almost forgotten Zizi. The public will be interested to know that the prince didn't mention her.

LIPTON DUE FOR 3 DAYS' FEASTING BY CHICAGOANS

Sir Thomas Lipton will arrive in Chicago tomorrow morning at 10:40 from New York for a three day visit.

He will have luncheon at the Olympian Fields Country club. He will then visit the South Shore Country club. At 7 p. m. he will be the dinner guest of Mayor Thompson at the mayor's home.

Tuesday he will be in the hands of the Chicago Yacht club. He will receive a delegation of Serbians at 11 a. m. They will express their appreciation for the Red Cross contributions and other assistance rendered by Sir Thomas during the war. There will be a reception and dinner at the yacht club Tuesday evening.

He will have luncheon at the Saddle and Cycle club as the guest of Sheldon Clark Wednesday. He will leave for New York Wednesday afternoon.

THREE TRAINMEN KILLED.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Aug. 21.—Three trainmen were killed this morning near Schoolcraft, south of here. Their train, a Lake Shore railroad freight, ran into an open derailer.

A FRIEND

Aledo Woman Who Has Been a Tribune Reader for 60 Years.

MRS. SARAH E. SCOTT.

Back in 1860, when Chicago's population was 109,000, a new subscriber was added to the subscription rolls of THE TRIBUNE, which then was housed in a three story building in Clark street, between Randolph and Lake.

She was Mrs. Sarah E. Scott, now living at Aledo, Ill. Her parents had come to Illinois in a prairie schooner when she was 6 months old. She is now 84.

"I have not missed my copy of THE TRIBUNE in sixty years," she says.

She is the mother of the late Judge Guy C. Scott of the Illinois Supreme court. Mrs. Edward C. Freutel of 818 Ingleside place, Evanston, is her granddaughter.

MAYOR CLOSES 'HAWAII,' SCENE OF KILLING, ROWS

Mayor Thompson stilled the hilarity of the Hawaiian Gardens, a black and tan café at 5728 South State street, yesterday by revoking the license of Jacob Ellis, the proprietor, on the recommendation of the police department and at the request of 179 residents of the neighborhood.

It was in this café that Paul Fosberg, 6147 South Halsted street, a white man, was set upon and beaten by three assailants on the night of Aug. 1. He died in an ambulance.

Repeated disturbances in the place, according to Capt. James J. Ryan, resulted in the refusal of Ellis to point out the disturbers to the police even though he had turned in the alarms himself.

"Ellis made no effort to run a lawful and orderly place," said Capt. Ryan's report to Chief Garrity, which was forwarded to the mayor.

After the death of Fosberg Arthur Burrage Farwell, president of the Chicago Law and Order league, made an investigation of the café's record. Subsequently it was reported that Ellis attempted to hand over the license to a friend to avoid revocation.

"My investigation shows that this place should stay closed," Chief Garrity said. "Ellis and his friends will have a mighty hard time getting my permission to reopen the place."

In their petition to the mayor the 179 residents of the surrounding district declared the café "has been a menace to the safety and comfort of the neighborhood."

BARE $165,000 "LEAK" IN CITY GARBAGE DEALS

Who Reaps Profit? Not Chicago.

utation of the products of the Chicago plant and have been paying 6 cents for grease."

"The records don't show you have been paying 6 cents," was suggested.

Eberson consulted his private records and then said he had it up to 5¾ cents.

Apparently Eberson started buying in April, 1919. He paid 4 cents for the grease, while the market quotation varied from 4½ cents to 5½ cents.

In May of last year the city sold for 4 and 4¼ cents, while the market quotations ranged from 5½ to 6¼ cents.

In June the city sold for 5¼ cents when the market quotations ranged from 5½ to 7 cents. That brings the business up to July, 1919. For the year following the city sold farther below the market quotations.

The market quotations for grease have been taken from the National Provisioner, and its figures are meant whenever that phrase is used. These figures are collected by the publication from those who deal in grease. The price quoted is for "loose" garbage grease, which means grease placed in tank cars, instead of in smaller containers. The city sells its grease in tank car lots. The price quoted is also f. o. b. Chicago, which is also the way the city sells its product.

Mistakes Will Happen.

Eberson asserted that such quotations are not dependable in every instance. To be sure, reporters on the National Provisioner are likely to make mistakes, like reporters on any other publication. Perhaps brokers sometimes give out inaccurate information and impose upon the publication, but there are buyers of grease who claim the market quotations as published are not below the actual price paid for grease for the periods indicated. Eberson knows there are official records showing garbage grease has been sold above the price he has been paying the city.

Table Compares Prices.

The following table shows the price at which the city reports it has sold grease, as compared with the high and low market quotations for the same months of the year ending July 1, 1920:

Month, 1919.	Market Quotation, Low.	High.	City's Selling Prices.
July	7	12	5¼-6¼
August	9	10½	5¼
September	8	8½	5¼-5½
October	8	10	5¼-5½
November	8	9	5½
December	9	9½	5½
1920.
January	10	11½	5½
February	10¾	11¼	5½-5¾
March	10¾	11	5¾
April	10¾	11	5¾
May	9½	11	5¾
June	7	9	5¾

Garbage grease ordinarily is sold by a municipality on test. Therefore, while the market figures are highly indicative, they are not absolute. The different prices quoted for the city are on different sales in the same month.

A difference of one cent a pound on a large quantity runs into a big profit. So the amount sold each month by the city has been extended at the price paid the city and also at the high and low market prices quoted. That will give an idea to those unacquainted with the value of a cent a pound what it means when applied to the grease output of the Chicago garbage plant for one year.

Where City Lost Out.

The contrast between the city's income from grease and what it might have been at either the high or low market quotations follows:

Month, 1919.	Market quotations. Low.	High.	Revenue received by the city.
July	$ 36,496	$ 62,565	$ 28,020
Aug.	36,515	42,622	21,301
Sept.	43,451	46,166	29,261
Oct.	17,966	22,458	12,079
Nov.	23,348	26,267	16,052
Dec.	20,640	21,787	12,613
1920.
Jan.	28,862	33,191	15,874
Feb.	30,312	31,722	15,648
Mar.	12,637	12,931	6,756
Apr.	6,441	6,591	3,445
May.	17,035	19,725	10,310
June.	15,934	20,387	13,089
Totals	$289,643	$346,417	$184,457

It can readily be seen that the buyer of Chicago's garbage grease could easily have made more than 57 per cent on his investment by selling at the low market quotation, or more than $105,000.

But there is no reason why he should have been satisfied with that profit. There are a number of users of garbage grease who are willing to pay whatever the demand of the market is. They utilize the grease in the manufacture of soap and there are at least half a dozen large corporations of reliability and responsibility which could have been canvassed for each car of grease.

A price from each one could have been obtained on each tank before a sale was made and the seller would have had from several days to a week to get these bids.

Therefore the man who purchased the grease from the city lacked energy and business ability if he did not get better than the lowest market quotation.

Any one who knows John Eberson will not suggest that he lacks energy, and his experience as manager of the old Chicago Reduction company, as a private corporation, was sufficient to give him much knowledge of the grease business.

Profits Near $105,000?

Eberson showed his books so far as they disclosed one sale of grease—but only one. That was on the first lot, in April, 1919. His books in that instance showed he bought for 4 cents and sold for 4½ cents, the low market quotation. He did not disclose figures on other sales. If he was able to sell each time at the low market quotation his profit on grease was $105,000, minus the cost of selling.

A claim that the Chicago garbage grease is worth only 3 or 4 cents below the market is not very convincing when Eberson's books show he sold his lot at the low market quotation. More doubt attaches to the claim when it is recalled the city in February, 1919, sold at 11.91 cents, while the maximum market quotation was only 6 cents. That was before Eberson got on the job.

RADICALS SEEK TO GAIN HOLD IN WISCONSIN

Candidates Up for Republican Primary.

BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.

Madison, Wis., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—Radicalism is again running amuck in Wisconsin. The Nonpartisan league has come into the state on a "shoestring" of some 20,000 members and through a combination with the Socialists, the labor extremists, and with La Follette, always an idol of the league since it started in 1916, it is seeking to get a foothold in the state house and to grab control of the state Republican party.

Senator Irvine L. Lenroot faces the battle of his life at the primaries Sept. 7. His opponent is James Thompson of La Crosse, the La Follette entry whom Lenroot defeated in the great primary fight in 1918 during the war. Although the campaigning is intense, the voters seem apathetic.

Bids for Anti-American Type.

The campaign on the radical side has many of the aspects of that of 1918. It includes an appeal to the elements which made Wisconsin a sore spot during the war. Its strong bid is for the pro-German type, which gave Victor Berger, Socialist, 110,000 votes in April, 1918, when he ran against Lenroot and Joseph E. Davies, Democrat.

The Nonpartisan league has a membership of about 20,000 in the state, mainly recruited in the northern localities among poorer farmers on the cutover lands, mainly foreigners, and in some of the southern counties where Berger's "kaiserites" were strong in the 1918 contest.

La Follette himself still has his own following, not so numerous, of course, as of old, but still carrying their support of the pompadour almost to fanaticism. Then come the Socialists, who are well intrenched in Milwaukee, and such of the labor organizations which are under Socialist influence, as in Milwaukee, and bringing up the rear are the Plumb plan leaders.

That is the combination which is seeking to capture the Republican ticket at the Sept. 7 primaries.

Six Out for Governor.

Over the governorship there is much fighting, the situation being badly muddled by the presence of six candidates. John J. Blaine of Boscobel, attorney general, has the Nonpartisan league support. Five other candidates are lining up the opposition, which is an obvious advantage for the league. State Senator Roy P. Wilcox, as a regular Republican, is running for the governorship nomination largely on the loyalist question, and in the last seven weeks has addressed 140 open air meetings in 140 different cities and villages. "Today," says Mr. Wilcox, "we are fighting the Nonpartisan leaguers, Socialists, and other radicals in their attempt to gain control of the Republican party in Wisconsin. That is the rallying cry of this campaign."

Col. Gilbert E. Seaman, who was chief surgeon of the 32d division, then chief surgeon of the 6th army corps, is running as the choice of the conference of regulars and stalwarts called in Madison last month by Gov. Philipp, and he is also the pick of the Milwaukee progressives with former Gov McGovern leading the way.

J. N. Tittemore of the American Society of Equity, which has 45,000 farmer members in Wisconsin, likewise is running for the governorship in an out-and-out fight against the league, which he defeated some months ago when it sought to capture the Equity, body, boots, and breeches. He has some support from railway brotherhoods and labor where not under socialistic domination, and he declares the great issue is "the Nonpartisan league and communism versus representative government and a sound agrarian program."

Fights for Three States.

Lieutenant Governor Dithmar, a former La Follette man, is now one of the anti-La Follette entries, while Merlin Hull, as a candidate of the drys is visiting the Y. M. C. A.s and the Sunday schools.

The campaigners are pointing out that North Dakota, Minnesota, and Wisconsin form the string of states. A. C. Townley is playing hardest this year and that if Dr. Ladd is elected to the senate from North Dakota, and Thompson goes in from Wisconsin, the league, with LaFollette, will have three boosters in the United States senate, enough to hold a balance of power.

WANTED: A HOME

Young Mother, 17, and Baby Son Who Seek Haven So She May Work.

MRS. HELEN GANNON AND GEORGE ROBERT.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Mrs. Helen Gannon, 17 years old and the mother of a 6 months old boy, feels she is "up against it." George Stanley Gannon, her husband—she was married to him when she was 15—has deserted her, she says, and her sister, Mrs. Jeanette Dasch of 843 North Hoyne avenue, can no longer shelter her and the baby.

Mrs. Dasch has been taking care of George Jr. while the mother worked in a loop department store. Now Mrs. Dasch has become a mother and she cannot care for both babies.

Mrs. Gannon may have to put the baby in an institution. But she believes she may find some family that will give her and the baby a room for a moderate sum and care for the baby while she is at work.

CHICAGOAN DIES IN CRASH.

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 21.—One man was killed and two injured here when an auto in which they were riding turned turtle on the Beach Ridge road. The dead man is Michael Chokas, 26 years old, of Chicago. The injured are Carl S. Bielawski of Seattle, who is suffering from a fractured skull, and Thomas Apogolis, who sustained cuts and bruises.

EDWARD NEVERS, MARSHALL FIELD VETERAN, DIES

Entered Employ of the Firm in 1865.

Edward Nevers, former cashier of Marshall Field & Co. and an early business associate and intimate friend of the late Marshall Field, Levi Z. Leiter, Robert M. Fair, and Harlow N. Higinbotham, died early yesterday morning at the age of 83 years at his residence, 1445 Estes avenue.

Mr. Nevers was born in Buffalo, N. Y., in 1837, and came to Chicago in 1862. He was first employed in the offices of the dry goods firm of Cooley, Farwell & Co. When Field, Leiter & Palmer first organized in 1865, Mr. Nevers became their head bookkeeper and cashier. In 1881 the firm's name was changed to Marshall Field & Co.

Becomes a Manager.

He served as a general manager for the company until 1916, when failing health forced him to retire from business. On the fiftieth anniversary of his service, in 1912, he was presented with a diamond medal by the firm.

"Mr. Nevers was a man of the most sterling character and integrity," said James G. Shedd of Marshall Field & Co. "His good judgment and able counsel have been solicited for many years by the managers and executives of the firm. He occupied an enviable position as counselor and good friend of all the employés, and was known for his eminent fairness and just dealing."

Soldier's Body Coming Home.

The body of Edward F. Hickey, brother of George F. Hickey, 4708 Lexington street, who was drowned in the English channel when the English transport Otranto collided with another boat, will arrive in Chicago Monday. The funeral services will be in charge of the Advertising Men's post of the American Legion.

Hickey was on his way to France when the fatality occurred. He had originally enlisted with the 14th coast artillery and was later transferred to Unit No. 1 of the September automatic replacement draft.

Aged Illinoisan Dies.

Joseph Skevington, a retired farmer living at Albion, Ill., died yesterday, age 90 years. He had lived in Edwards county all his life and for years was prominent in politics, although never holding any office.

FOREST FIRES KILL THREE.

Winnipeg, Manitoba, Aug. 21.—Three persons lost their lives, twenty homes were destroyed, and a new school building was burned by bush fires which swept through the village of Mulvihill, ninety-six miles north of Winnipeg, yesterday and today.

MAUDE R. WARREN IN TURK CAPITAL AFTER BEING SEIZED BY REDS

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 21.—Mrs. Maude Radford Warren, Chicago author, has arrived here after having been detained at Baku by the bolsheviki for eight weeks.

MAUDE RADFORD WARREN.

Mrs. Warren reached Baku by steamer from Persia the day the Russian bolsheviki took the city over from the Azerbaijanese. She was not imprisoned but was kept under surveillance and denied permission to take the train for Batum until bolshevist military movements was old and the Moscow crowd had thoroughly entrenched itself and defeated Tartar opposition at Elizavetopol and other points.

The only Americans now in Baku, so far as American officials know, are Mr. and Mrs. S. Spoer, J. C. Smith, A. G. Telfagten, C. A. Cashafer and A. G. Graham. Practically all remained in Baku of their own volition for business reasons when the other Americans moved out under the direction of Charles H. Moser, American commissioner at Tiflis.

WIFE'S SCREAM ROUTS 5 ROBBERS RAIDING SALOON

Five robbers were frustrated late yesterday afternoon in an attempt to hold up the saloon of Joseph Machowick at 1101 West Forty-seventh street when Machowick's wife screamed and a son fired at the men. The son believes he wounded two of the robbers. The would-be robbers arrived in an automobile and made their get-away in the same vehicle.

Five armed liquor thieves strolled into the Citizens' Boulevard pharmacy at 5456 South State street shortly after 9 o'clock yesterday morning, trained their revolvers on a clerk, a porter, and two employés of the Carroll Ice Cream company, locked them in a closet, and while two of the men stood at the door with guns ready, leisurely looted the store of $3,000 worth of liquor, cigars, and cigarets.

The holdup occurred a few hours after the police had battled with eight other drug store bandits and captured four of them. The men had entered the store of the Brady Drug company at 701 West Forty-seventh street early in the morning but were driven out after a gun battle with James S. Brady, th eproprietor. The robbers got away, but four of them were caught later.

HUNT COUGHLIN BABY KIDNAPER THROUGH N. Y.

New York, Aug. 21.—Police were searching today for Blakeley Coughlin, 13 month old baby, kidnaped from his crib at Norristown, Pa., more than two months ago. Information from Philadelphia detectives indicated the child had been brought to this city.

Attorneys for George H. Coughlin of Norristown obtained a Supreme court order here attaching the bank accounts and other property of Augusto Pasquale, to whom Coughlin asserts he paid $12,000 on promise that the child would be returned.

No Change in Condition of "Tama Jim" Wilson

Traer, Ia., Aug. 21.—No change is noted today in condition of James Wilson, former secretary of agriculture, who is critically ill at his home here.

YOU patronize one store instead of another more on account of service than because of the price or merchandise. Isn't this true?

Take furniture, for instance: There is comparatively little furniture that is handled exclusively by any one firm, and yet you'd rather buy of one than of any of the others, because you like the way that store serves you.

Our idea of serving you is to help you get what you want; to promise delivery at a certain time, to keep that promise, and—to promise that you'll always be satisfied with every transaction made with this store, and to keep that promise without question and without argument of any kind—permitting you to say just what we shall do to satisfy you entirely.

We follow this policy, and as a result our business has many friends; more every year, and these friends bring others, because right service is not so easily found as right goods.

No policy of this store is changed in any way because of special sales; remember that.

RUGS

Our methods applied to rugs have made this department very popular. You'll find here a very large variety of fine domestic and oriental rugs.

HAS UNCLE SAM A HEART? WELL, READ AND SEE

Skipper's Lonely Wife to Sail on Ship.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—Uncle Sam has a heart sometimes. Evidence of this has just been exhibited through W. S. Benson, chairman of the United States shipping board, answering the plea of the lonely wife of an American ship master to be permitted to accompany her husband on one of his long voyages.

Chairman Benson ruled, after Capt. Foley, director of operations, to whom the ship captain's wife's appeal was addressed, had recommended it, that wives of masters under certain conditions could accompany their husbands on voyages.

Plea of Captain's Wife.

The plea of this ship master's wife tells its own heartful story. Here it is:

"When I tell you how I have been left alone for the last three years, I am sure you will give your consent for me to make just one trip. Please let him sign me on as one of the crew. I have my passport, and I will not be in the way. I do all of his book work and keep his accounts for him. I am an orphan, and I get so lonely on his run to South America, which keeps him away sometimes for six months. After being away six months he is going to sail again after being in port a little over two weeks. In all the last three years he has only been home three months. Up to last October he was in the United States navy. He is on inactive duty now.

Proud of Husband.

"During the war I did not mind being left alone, for I was busy with my war work, but now it seems like I can't be left alone any more. We are buying a little home, and right now my husband can't quit his work on water, as he has followed the water all his life, except when he went to the Philippines to fight with the United States army. I am proud of my husband's war record, for his boat sank a submarine and he has a sword given him by the boys on his boat when he was put on inactive duty."

Then came Admiral Benson's consent.

FISHER TO TALK ON RUSSIA.

Judge Harry M. Fisher, who recently returned from Russia, and Attorney Damin Orlowsky, will address the Russian colony picnic, to be held today in H. J. Kolze's Electric park, at 6353 Irving Park boulevard, on the situation in Russia.

HIGH PRICES HERE ASTOUND EDITOR FROM TASMANIA

Homeward bound after attending the Canadian Press conference at Montreal, the Hon. Charles E. Davies, member of the legislative council of Tasmania and owner of the Tasmama Mail and the Mercury, passed through Chicago yesterday.

C. E. DAVIES. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

"The prices in America are astounding," he said. "In Tasmania we do not have them, although prices there are far above what they were before the war. A clerk rents a fine home for $700 a year, while a laborer finds suitable quarters for $25 a month. Tasmanian hotels, the best, charge about $6 for room and board a day."

The development of water power in Tasmania is bringing much wealth to the island, he said.

SAFETY WEEK'S QUERY: 'WHAT'S YOUR HURRY?'

What's Your Hurry?

It is the anti-accident slogan devised by Charles M. Hayes, president of the Chicago Motor club. You will see it often, for the next seven days is safety week.

Thousands of pennants bearing the slogan will appear on the rear of automobiles of the 17,000 club members and 200,000 pamphlets containing safety advice for pedestrians and motorists have been distributed throughout the city.

U. S. to Dedicate National Park-to-Park Highway

Washington, D. C., Aug. 21.—Secretary Payne announced today that the national park-to-park highway would be officially dedicated to the public next Wednesday when the official designation party leaves Denver, Colo., to fix the official route. The highway will connect eleven national parks and traverse nine western states, being approximately 4,700 miles in length.

BRITISH LABOR SEEKS TO AVERT MINERS' STRIKE

Coal Workers' Demands Gain No Sympathy.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[By Special Cable.]

[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Aug. 21.—Trade unionists in general are becoming much worried over the threatened coal miners' strike next month, and strong pressure is being brought to bear on the miners to modify their demands.

The strike would throw thousands out of employment in iron, steel, engineering, shipping, and many other trades, and there is no sympathy for the miners' demands among the other workers.

Labor Against Coal Strike.

The miners are in a triple alliance with the railway men and transport workers, but are pledged not to act without them, and the railway men are unwilling to undertake a strike at this time. Mr. Thomas, the railroad men's leader, is trying to bring the miners to their senses and the coöperative organizations on whom they are dependent for their finances are also seeking peace.

Sees Peace in Oil Control.

The current number of "New Europe" contains a remarkable article by G. R. Hunter, professor of history at Robertson college, Jubblepore, India, pointing out the danger to western Europe, America, and the east from a German, Russian, and Japanese combination. The first principle of safety he declares is the formation of a firmer alliance between America and Europe, and second, this alliance should secure oil supplies throughout the world, without which to wage a successful war is impossible.

Sheriffs Raid Lemont for Hootch—but in Vain

Four automobile loads of deputy sheriffs raided Lemont yesterday afternoon, searching for more liquor in saloons and stores. But the deputies left the village empty handed. A few days ago Maj. Dalrymple's agents found several gallons of liquor in eight Lemont saloons.

EVANSTON'S MOST BASHFUL COUPLE WILL BE MARRIED

Evanston's most bashful young man and young woman are to be married. Announcement of the engagement of Miss Gladys Edith Farrall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Farrall, 2631 Prairie avenue, Evanston, to Alan Marshall Keplinger, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Keplinger of Franklin, Ill., was made yesterday, and therein lies a tale.

It was in 1916 at the Northwestern university freshman class party that young Keplinger, whose father is president of the Franklin bank, first saw "the girl of his dreams." Miss Farrall was attracted by the young man, too, and for a whole year the couple passed each other frequently on the campus, always wanting to speak, but never arranging a meeting.

One day a frat brother invited Keplinger to attend a show with two co-eds. When Keplinger met the young woman he cried, "Why, you are THE girl," and she responded, "And you are THE boy."

Keplinger was overseas twenty months in the air service.

PROFITEERING IN SUGAR CHARGED IN INDICTMENTS

Salt Lake City, Utah, Aug. 21.—Indictments charging the Utah-Idaho Sugar company, its officers, and many other prominent Salt Lake and Ogden business men with having made exorbitant profits in the sale of sugar, in violation of the Lever act, were returned today by a special federal grand jury, in secret session here since Aug. 11. Bench warrants have been issued for the arrest of those indicted.

An indictment returned against the Utah-Idaho Sugar company, as a corporation, cites two instances where sugar which cost $9.44 to produce was sold to jobbers at $23.48 per 100 pound bag. A second indictment charges the company officers, excepting Heber J. Grant, president, with having aided and abetted the company's action.

PONZI GIVES UP $1,000,000 TO U. S. RECEIVERS

No Trace Found of Postal Reply Coupons.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 21.—Charles Ponzi turned over to federal receivers today part of what remains from the millions of dollars which he received from investors in his discredited financial operations and went on the witness stand to tell about the rest. Little had been elicited as to his assets, however, when the receivers' hearing was adjourned until Tuesday next.

The checks and securities which Ponzi handed over to the receivers, as announced in the courtroom today, did not greatly exceed a million dollars. Edwin L. Pride, the accountant, who has been conducting an audit for the federal authorities, again estimated Ponzi's liabilities at $7,000,000. Ponzi said he had additional assets, but did not indicate their amount.

No Evidence of Coupons.

The only business of which he could find any trace, the auditor testified, was the issuing of notes for the amount of the investment, plus 50 per cent, and the payment of early notes by the receipts from later ones. There was nothing in Ponzi's books, he said, to indicate any business in international postal reply coupons, such as Ponzi claimed to be the basis of tremendous profits.

It was brought out that Daniel V. McIsaacs and Daniel H. Coakley of Ponzi's counsel had received fees of $25,000 each. McIsaacs explained that the Hanover Trust company, where Ponzi kept his principal account, had paid these sums on authorization from Ponzi.

Ponzi's replies to questions by counsel for the receivers indicated ignorance of the conduct of his business affairs. He did not know the names of his agents, was not familiar with his accounts in several banks, and was in doubt how many persons were authorized to draw checks in his name. He said he left most of these things to Miss Lucy Meli, the 18 year old girl who was manager of his office.

Mr. Dodge drew from Ponzi a statement of certain holdings not previously of record by the receivers, among them 1,600 shares of the Hanover Trust company, the bank which collapsed when his business went to the wall.

Robber Gets Rich Loot: a Bushel of Potatoes

"The Great Potato Robbery"—not a movie—is stirring Evanston. John Doepp, 23, of 2406 Hastings street, Evanston, is in jail. The police are looking for Mrs. George Sepp, 502 Chicago avenue, Evanston.

The potatoes, one bushel of 'em, were stolen from the home of Mrs. Grace Schmidt, a widow, at 539 Chicago avenue. Doepp was arrested.

"I stole them to protect Mrs. Sepp," he said. Mrs. Schmidt says different. "Doepp calls on Mrs. Sepp every night," said she. "I think both of them are guilty."

Eventually - You Will Drive a Closed Car

Women fear the daily struggle in the traffic press at the wheel of a heavy car.

They know the difficulty of finding a place at the curb in the busy center of town.

Those, to whom the possession of wealth is not novel, and good taste everything, know that the day of true economy is dawning—the hour of the modern, lightweight, high-quality, enclosed car is here.

Eventually everybody who can afford one will drive an enclosed car.

Women to whom the chilling blasts of fall make open cars uncomfortable fully realize this.

Imagine the safety of handling this Jordan Sedan, which weighs only thirty-one hundred pounds, as contrasted with the difficulty of managing a car of much greater weight.

Striking color, genuine comfort, good taste and atmosphere that is rare, have made this car beautiful. But light weight, and that peculiar quality of balance which makes the Jordan reliable, afford just the kind of economy which people of good taste value equally with distinction.

Individuals who have had years of experience with motor cars are hoping that manufacturers will be able to build enough enclosed cars to provide deliveries this fall.

But only the few can be served. The demand for the trim, modern Jordan Sedan and the charming, graceful Jordan Brougham is beyond all means to satisfy.

Choose your Jordan Sedan or Brougham now. Each possesses that rare quality of service—that thorough, substantial construction which makes it last and last.

Step into the Jordan salesroom today, whether you mean to order this month or next. Note the quality of the appointments of these economical cars—ask for a demonstration, and learn of their smooth, quiet operation.

Phone us, if you choose, and we'll send a car to you. Or, telephone that you are coming in.

24.1 Miles per Gallon—Jordan's Country-Wide Economy Run Average

FREIGHT RAISES NO EXCUSE FOR PROFITEERING

Changes Too Slight to Be Felt.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—The freight rate increase recently granted the railroads by the interstate commerce commission will not be a justifiable cause for piling another burden on the ultimate consumer's pocketbook. This is the conviction of railroad operators, labor statisticians, and government officials, including officials of the department of justice.

"The public should be forewarned," says the Pennsylvania railroad in a statement issued here presenting figures to prove its contention, "and forearmed against any attempts to take advantage of the freight rate advance for the purpose of justifying profiteering."

Rate Increase Small.

The warning of the railroad company is backed up with figures showing how slightly the retail prices of commodities should be affected by the rate increases.

"While it is true," says the Pennsylvania statement, "that in the case of some few articles and commodities small increases in price may be justified, nevertheless the amounts which in any instance could fairly be added to the present prices are a small fraction of the whole, and in the case of practically every article or commodity of daily consumption the increases in transportation charges are relatively so small as to be practically negligible.

How it Effects Consumer.

"Let us see what these figures mean to the household consumer who buys flour by the sack, eggs and oranges by the dozen, and butter by the pound.

"Most flour is shipped in carload lots. Taking the rate from Minneapolis to Philadelphia, the 40 per cent increase will amount to 33 cents per barrel of 200 pounds. On a twenty-four pound sack of flour this will be just a trifle less than 4 cents. Even if the flour is shipped in less than carload lots, the increase in the freight charge per twenty-four pounds would be 7 cents.

"As a crate of eggs contains thirty dozen, a glance at the table will show that on a carload shipment the added freight charges would be about half a cent per dozen eggs, and in the less than carload lot shipment about two-thirds of a cent a dozen.

"Similarly, it will be observed that the increased freight charges on butter per pound from Chicago to Philadelphia, when sent in carload lots, would be about four mills, and on less than carload lots less than 5½ mills—in the one case a little less than and in the other a little more than half a cent a pound.

"On packing house products, such as ham, bacon, lard, and canned meats shipped from Chicago to Philadelphia in car load lots, after the advanced rates become effective the increased charge will be 1.7 mills on each pound, while in less than car load lots this will be 2.4 mills."

33 YEARS A BLUECOAT, HE RETIRES, BUT ONLY TO TAKE UP NEW JOB

Thirty-three years of faithful service on the police force will end for Policeman William L. Evers tomorrow when he will be retired on pension at the age of 62 years.

POLICEMAN W. L. EVERS.

The last nineteen years of his service have been spent as general license officer, a post from which he has been absent but once. That was in 1907, when a collision between a patrol wagon and a street car laid him up for three months.

Mr. Evers owns an apartment building, in which he lives, at 3811 Lincoln avenue. He was born and eduated in Chicago. His wife, whom he married thirty-eight years ago, describes him as "decidedly a home body."

But he will not cease to work. As soon as he lays his police uniform away he will don another—that of guard at the Great Lakes Trust company, 110 South Dearborn street.

"I'm too young to sit around and fold my hands," said Mr. Evers, "but my new job probably will offer pleasanter and lighter duties."

LIVE STOCK MEN VOTE TO FIRE UNION COWBOYS

Live stock handlers employed by stockyards commission firms who have signed up to join the new union may be without jobs tomorrow. The 110 companies composing the live stock exchange have voted to discharge any stock handler who affiliates himself with the new union. As nearly all the 600 handlers have signed up, they will face dismissal unless some agreement is reached at a meeting to be held this afternoon.

Every effort to come to some agreement will be made, as it is feared the dispute may result in a general strike throughout the stockyards.

The stock handlers have been the only unorganized labor at the yards. Some time ago plans for forming a union were discussed. The employers informed the workers that, while they had no objections to the men forming an association among themselves, any move to affiliate with other unions in the yards would be considered grounds for discharge. Disregarding the warning, the men organized and affiliated themselves with the other unions, it is declared.

The commission men have announced they will not back down from their threat. Most of the employers are old live stock handlers themselves, and believe they can cope with the situation even to the extent of once more donning overalls and driving cattle.

The recent action of the commission men in increasing their rates is believed to have resulted in the men joining the union. By joining and bringing about strike conditions they hoped to get their wages increased in proportion to the increase in rates. it is alleged.

UNION SUED FOR A RECEIVER AND $10,000,000 CUT

Action Called Court Echo of Outlaw Rail Strike.

Columbus, O., Aug. 21.—Appointment of a receiver for the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, and an accounting and distribution of the brotherhood's trust fund, estimated at $10,000,000, is asked in a suit filed here today by Benjamin Callahan, head of the Columbus Yardmen's association.

The suit was filed by Callahan as an individual policy holder, but in effect is said to be action on the part of the Chicago Yardmen's association, the insurgent association which precipitated the recent outlaw strike of yardmen.

Outlaws' Share $5,500,000.

The petition says there are 145,000 members of the rebel organization, and estimates their share of the trust fund at $5,000,000.

It asserts that all members of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen expelled for participation in the alleged unauthorized strike have been deprived of a share in the trust fund, which they helped to create.

Personally, Mr. Callahan said, he has paid dues of $2.50 a month for twenty years.

Want Personal Service.

The action was brought in the Franklin county courts here, so that personal service could be obtained on Val Fitzpatrick, first vice president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, who lives here.

No officials of the brotherhood are named defendants, but service is asked on Fitzpatrick.

In a separate suit against the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen James Fowler, local member, charges that payment of an insurance policy of $1,600 for total disability, resulting from injury to his eyes, March 21, was refused on the grounds that he had been implicated in the strike movement. He asks the full amount.

INDIANA MINES CLOSED AS DAY MEN WALK OUT

Terre Haute, Ind., Aug. 21.—[United Press.]—Coal production was virtually at a standstill in the Indiana field today, owing to the unauthorized strike of day men.

Reports received at district headquarters of the United Mine Workers and by coal operators showed that just about ten per cent of the mines were in operation.

The day men, who comprise about 30 per cent of the 30,000 miners in Indiana, are dissatisfied with the award of President Wilson's coal commission and the failure of the miner-operators' scale committee to reach an agreement at their Cleveland meeting.

While the walkout continued to spread today, union officials and mine operators were optimistic. William Rainey, vice president of the union district No. 11, which comprises the Indiana field, said that the strike will be brought to an end within a few days.

FIND ANOTHER MAN WOUNDED IN SWITCHMAN WAR

10 B. R. T. Members Are Held by Police.

Another wounded man, believed to have participated in the revolver battle in the heart of South Chicago early yesterday morning, was found in the Illinois Central hospital yesterday afternoon. He had been shot in the kidney and is in a serious condition.

He is Henry Denhot of 10650 Ewing avenue, member of the Yardmen's association. He told the police he had been waiting for a street car when he was accidentally shot. The police learned he was taken to the hospital in a taxicab by friends.

Alfred Jackson, 9315 Chappel avenue, was shot in the right hand during the battle, which occurred in the vicinity of Ninety-first street and Commercial avenue, when members of rival railroad switchmen's unions chanced to meet.

Arrest Ten B. R. T. Men.

Ten members of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, who are opposing the "outlaw strike" called months ago by the Yardmen's association, are under arrest, charged with carrying revolvers. They will be arraigned in South Chicago tomorrow morning.

The police say 200 men took part in the affray. The yardmen "outlaws" have been intimidating members of the B. R. T. because of their refusal to join the unauthorized strike, the police were told.

For two months the working switchmen have been threatened, attacked, slugged, the police say. A few days ago, Edward Romelfanger, employed on the Wabash railroad, was found shot in the back of the head, and was taken to St. Bernard's hospital. He is still unconscious.

Edward Hudson, watchman, employed by the Wabash, is being held by the police. He owns an automatic. It was a bullet from an automatic that wounded Romelfanger. The watchman, however, denies he is guilty.

More Police on Guard.

The police have tried to prevent the attacks of the "outlaws," but with little success. Several arrests were made and additional policemen detailed to guard the workers, but the attacks continued.

STREET CAR KILLS PRIEST.

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 21—Father Francis Shannon, pastor of a local Catholic church, was killed last night when struck by a street car.

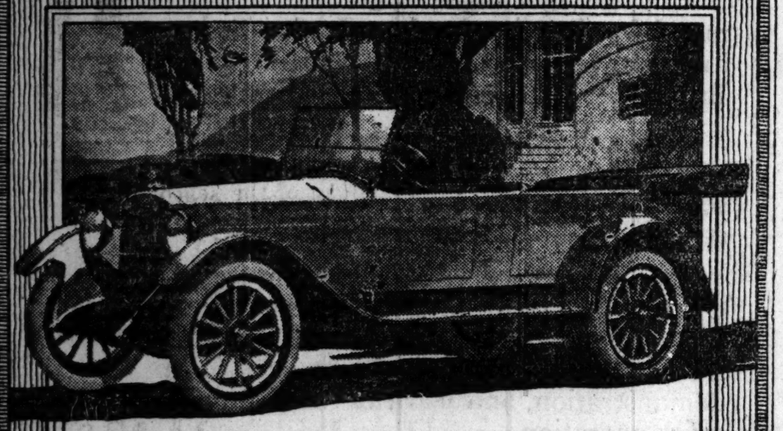
GRANT SIX



WHEN a Grant Six owner talks about his car it is almost with affection. For the Grant Six has many qualities that endear it. It is loyal and faithful and willing, it never complains, it does not indulge in tantrums. When you want a burst of speed the motor almost seems to read your thoughts—and when you thread your way carefully in crowded traffic the motor throttles down good-naturedly and accepts the situation without fretting and balking.

Owning a Grant Six means motor service without uncertainty or extravagance. It means a car you can be proud of in any company, a car that retains its newness and fine appearance, a car that is always comfortable and economical. If you buy a Grant Six you will have no disillusions and no disappointments.

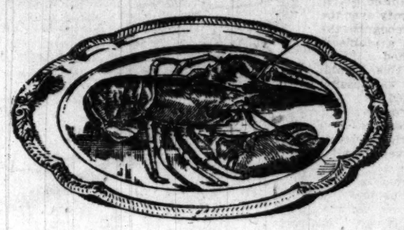
NOTE: At the North American Restaurant half a sweet, tender baby lobster costs 45 cents. At other high class restaurants from 85c to $1.50. The difference is what you pay to have it brought to you.



Chicken is Low-Priced when you wait on yourself

Ma's Chicken Dinner Combination (daily and Sunday from 11 a. m. until midnight) at the North American Restaurant for 85 cents is fast becoming popular with those people who love pure food and good cooking and are willing to wait on themselves to prevent this meal costing them from $1.95 to $2.65.

The Ma's Chicken Dinner Combination consists of a whole breast of a milk fed chicken (one full lb. of white meat) with cream gravy; bacon; candied sweet potatoes and green peas. The price is 85 cents. The reason the price is so low is that you pay nothing for service. You wait on yourself. And that is becoming the way of the sensible world.

In any other restaurant of equal high grade you will pay from $1.00 to $1.50 for the Chicken alone. The bacon, the sweet potatoes, the green peas will cost extra. In other words the total cost of this meal, anywhere else but here, will be from $1.95 to $2.65. The difference between their price and ours is what you pay for being waited on.

That is just one dinner we serve. From our big assortment of dishes you can select just the food that appeals to your own taste. The price for all food at the North American is equally as low as the Chicken.

For 50c you can get a good big portion of the finest milkfed Chicken Salad; or fresh Lobster Salad for 60c; or fresh Shrimp Salad for 40c. These prices include our famous Thousand Island Dressing.

And you should try our pastry. It's all made in our own kitchen and from nothing but the finest and purest materials—pure leaf lard; the best creamery butter; and cane sugar. No substitutes of any kind are used. If the pastry you have been getting other places, and paying big prices for, hasn't been tasting just right, try ours. You will say you never tasted any better—any time, any place, or at any price.

Have your noon or evening SUNDAY DINNER here today—

give your wife a real vacation. And don't fail to bring the kiddies. Certified Milk from the Arcady Farms, 15 cents a bottle.

OD JOSS WILL VE CHINA FROM BIRDS OF PREY

,000,000 Chinese ust Find Own Way.

BY FREDERICK A. SMITH.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Special Correspondence.]

SHANGHAI, July 24.—Seventeen d men in a low, rakish canoe, ioned after the lines of a racing t, paddled past our good river mboat Loong Mow as we hung ly to our brace of anchors and our shore line in the swift current the Yangtse under the hills of g-King, City of Smells.

n the bow of the canoe and facing stern raved a Chinese, and with e rave he swung a white flag. adships there stood a man holding a brazen breakfast gong, upon ich he beat rhythmically. Behind squatted a third man before a e, and with each stroke of the ng and each swing of the flag at the e he whacked out a home run on drumhead. In perfect time with se three gentlemen the crew of the oe dipped their paddles into the uid ochre and emitted a yell in rus.

Bug on Lily Pond.

The canoe pushed up river, thread- its way cleverly between sampans, ks, and trading steamers, and, turn- about near the United States gun- t Palos, came back. Going nc- here, coming to the same place, blow- whither it listed, skittering about a waterbug in a lily pond. Such ry amid such torrid heat! Such en- siasm shining on the dripping faces the oarsmen! The cheer leader ked like a greased statue magically ched off into animation.

But what was it all about?

So we asked a missionary.

"Have the Mings arisen from their mbs?" we inquired. "Or have the 1 Chinaboys discovered a new form sequeeze?"

"It is only a dragon boat," said the sionary wearily. "It is paddling out to bring good joss to the city and people."

A Ravaged City.

Up the hillside was a city whose popu- tion is variously estimated to be from 0,000 to 700,000. At least three of e Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse re at that moment riding roughshod er Chung-King's putrid pavements. en, women, and children were dying cholera at the rate of 100 daily. Ban- s were raiding the river shores and ading river craft for hundreds of les east and west and paralyzing a mmerce that might have prospered ntily on this lone trade route into and of riches. Ten thousand troops, hting under the banners of a rival ovince, were feeding upon the dwin- ng provisions of the city and demand- a million dollars to get out without ying the city or burning it.

Setting out to visit the stricken city, engaged a sampan for 300 cash, aning the equivalent of 300 of the ns which are minted around square es so that a man's roll may be car- d on a string.

Plague Worries People.

But I found only a few shops doing siness as usual. The plague was rrying the people; the demands of soldiery had awed the merchants; bandits had cut off imports and ex- rts.

For some reason the world looks to shaded avenues of the legation arter of Peking for its impressions what China is doing. I traveled rough great provinces where Peking name but seldom mentioned, where ,000,000 of natives dwell in the val- cut by the monster Yangtse, and not whether they be of the north of the south.

And it is safe to say the people of ina, foreign, native, private, offi- l, or diplomatic, know little about ina's internal tragedy. Almost ev- ybody in the so-called capital seems be exclusively regardful of the big ance at the present moment, the big ance for his home commerce and me prestige, or the big chance for individual pocket.

Chinese for Themselves.

As for the future of the millions of inese I saw up the Yangtse, the Chi- se apparently will have to fight it t for themselves. There are foreign icers and officials judiciously placed give some small measure of safety foreigners imperiled by some spo- dic anger of native troops or bandits. t they are not placed there to aid e Chinese.

MYSTERY

National Search for Vanished Girl Fails to Yield Single Clew.

HARRIET H. KIMBALL.
[Reinche Photo.]

The disappearance of Miss Harriett H. Kimball has developed into a national mystery. No clew has been obtained by private detectives and the police of all large cities since she left her father's home in Kansas City on Aug. 16.

She was a talented painter and it was thought she might have joined some of the artists' colonies in Chicago or New York. Her brother-in-law, Ralph Renwick, an Evanston architect, has visited the Three Arts club and all the studios of Chicago, but has obtained no trace of her. Search in Greenwich Village by the New York police likewise was productive of no results.

Miss Kimball frequently had complained that Kansas City offered no opportunities for her. The day before she disappeared she cashed a $50 Liberty bond. That was all the money she had, so far as known.

SENDS $5 GIFT FOR POLICEMAN WHO CAPTURED 5

Motorcycle Policeman George Johnston of the Lincoln park police force, cited seven times for bravery and several times for rescuing persons from drowning, has excited the admiration of Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Engelhart, 4420 Malden street.

Last night THE TRIBUNE received a letter from Mr. Engelhart inclosing a check for $5 for the policeman. It was Johnston's exploit of capturing five bandits singlehanded, and taking three revolvers from them that won the check and the praise.

"This is but a small sum, and I only hope other will follow my example and give the man a little encouragement while he is living. Why wait until some catastrophe befalls him?" Mr. Engelhart writes.

IMPERSONATOR OF KINCAID ON WAY TO CITY

Theodore Schude, German, impersonator of Lieut. Arthur M. Kincaid of the United States army, and now under arrest on federal charges, will leave San Francisco for Chicago today, it was learned last night.

Order for his removal to this city was entered yesterday by Judge F. H. Rudkin of San Francisco, where Schude has been held by military authorities. Schude, when arrested, was a private in the 44th infantry under the name of Arthur Le Grande.

Charges of defrauding the United States government of $1,668 and of impersonating an army officer, both in the United States and France, will be preferred against him.

Boll Weevil Destroys Cotton Crop in Arkansas

Pine Bluff, Ark., Aug. 21.—Thousands of acres of cotton in southeast Arkansas have been virtually ruined within the last two weeks by boll weevil, and the ravages of the pest continue, according to planters of Grant, Cleveland, Jefferson, and other counties. Cotton estimated to produce a bale to the acre fifteen days ago will not be worth picking in some sections, farmers said today.

WAR CHANGES U. S. VALUATION OF PHILIPPINES

Now Wants Trade Bases There; Natives Willing.

In view of the dispatches sent to America indicating nationalistic demonstrations in the Philippine Islands Mr. Hunt has investigated the situation for The Tribune.

BY FRAZIER HUNT.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]

MANILA, Aug. 18.—The results of the great war have caused a complete turn about face in the viewpoints held by the army and navy official Washington towards the Philippines and towards the proposition of unqualified independence.

Three years ago both our general staffs looked upon the Philippines as the weakest military spot of the nation. The Japanese scare of seven years ago focused attention on this weakness. To military experts the islands were a decided military and naval deficit. Our national dangers lay in the Atlantic, where our fleet had to be centered. The Philippines offered easy prey to Japan.

Jones Law Passed.

The Jones law—or what is known here as Bill Jones—giving practical autonomy to the islands under a powerful governor general—was put through congress at this time. Governor General Francis Burton Harrison was sent out here with the distinct job of hustling along affairs so that we could get out from under the responsibilities of this farflung burden that we were carrying at arms length.

While the American business men here raged and tore their hair at our new policy Mr. Harrison quietly went about the business of turning over the government to the Filipinos. Scores of good and true Americans who had years of splendid service behind them were turned out without a word.

Rush Stable Government.

In the preamble of the Jones bill there appeared in the second paragraph this pledge: "Whereas it is and has always been the purpose of the people of the United States to withdraw their sovereignty over the Philippine Islands and to recognize their independence as soon as a stable government can be established . . . ." It was to establish this "stable government" as quickly as possible that everything was tuned to.

Then came the great war with the result that the whole military problems of America were shifted about.

However, during the last seven years we have gone so far in our independence program and have made such definite pledges that apparently there can be no decided reversal. Consequently the great question here is, how to continue the program and at the same time answer our new naval and military and commercial requirements for great bases of operation here.

Manuel Quezon, president of the Philippine senate, declares that the application to the Philippines of some such law as the Platt amendment for Cuba would be accepted here. This would mean that the islands could not negotiate treaties without the consent of America and gives the United States the right to intervene in internal affairs.

YANKEE JUNKET TO GIVE COREA THE ONCE OVER

Americans Smile at Jap Cholera Scare.—

BY JOHN POWELL.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]

[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PEKING, Aug. 15.—[Delayed.]—Japanese officials are bringing strong influence to bear to prevent the American congressional party from passing through Corea en route from China to Japan. Corean republican leaders in China have grasped the opportunity afforded by the presence of the party China by presenting the Corean case to the Americans.

There are strong rumors that the Coreans are planning a big independence demonstration similar to that of last year when the American congressional party passed through Corea. The Japanese, thoroughly alarmed, are now urging that the party omit Corea from its itinerary, "owing to the presence of cholera in Corea."

Japs Warn U. S. Women.

This action is said to have aroused much resentment among the party, and members seem determined to visit Corea and see for themselves what the situation is.

Today the Japanese minister to China personally urged the women of the party not to go to Corea for fear of possible disorder there.

The Japanese highly resent addresses made by several members of the party respecting the Shantung disposition and encouragement given by them to the Chinese toward resistance of Japanese aggressions and pledges of American friendship to the Chinese people in their struggle for democratic development.

Two Japanese agents were discovered at Shanghai and prevented from accompanying the party on the train which carried the congressmen to Peking.

Party at Shantung.

American officials in China fear that a delicate situation may result and are doing everything possible to prevent trouble by calling to attention the unofficial status of the American congressional party.

Congressmen Porter, Dyer, and Small made addresses at Tsinan-fu, the capital of Shantung. They told the assemblage that America would never consent to the Japanese ownership of the province of Shantung. Judge Hardy, a Democrat from Texas, spoke in favor of the league of nations and then complimented China for not signing the Paris document.

The civil governor of Shantung thanked the American people for their friendship for China and said that the time had now arrived for America and China to work together.

Hints at New War.

"I would like to see America and China get together and form their own league of nations for the Pacific ocean," he said.

"I believe that a full understanding of China by the American people would prevent a future war. If the Chinese problem is not fully understood we are certain to have another world war into which America will be drawn as well as Europe.

"If now America helps her younger Chinese brother republic the time may come, perhaps within twenty years, when China will be in a position to help America. Don't give us candy today, fruit tomorrow, and forget us the day after."

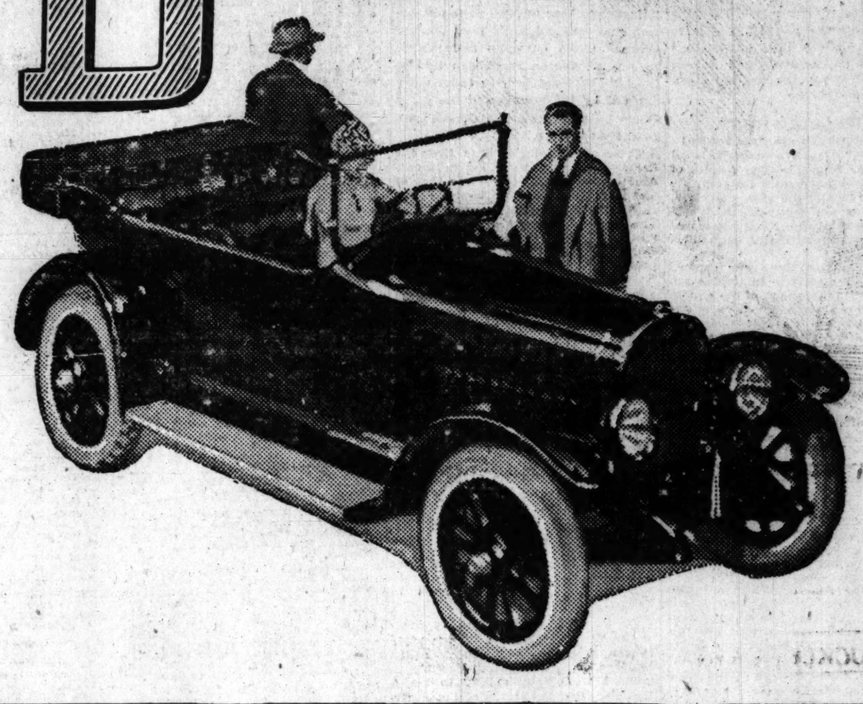
DORT

Quality Goes Clear Through



There Has Grown Up Everywhere A Very Sound and Solid Respect For This Car

Doubtless you yourself have at one time or another remarked the staunch esteem which the Dort seems to arouse in owners.

In every section of the country, in every community, in every little family group, in which the Dort is in use, there has grown up a very sound and solid respect for the car and its all around competence.

This intense good will the Dort does command is perhaps the surest indication as to the true desirability of the car for you, since it is sprung not merely from the excellence of any single characteristic, but embraces every phase of its performance.

It is true one owner may emphasize most heavily the marked economy of the Dort.

As a matter of fact the Dort has won a national name for its low operative cost.

Your own figures, if kept accurately, will show that the sum of a season's saving in gas and oil and in tire expense will be of no mean size.

But where one owner lays stress on the Dort's thrift you will find, perhaps, that the next one you question will seem most impressed with the infrequence with which the Dort requires mechanical attention.

So very sturdily is the Dort constructed and so very simple is its design that only at rare intervals does the car require adjustment.

Its economy in this respect is quite as noteworthy as its thrift in oil. and gas, and tires.

And then again, the next owner you query may be chiefly delighted with the ease and comfort with which the Dort rides and drives.

In this connection it is worth remembering that the length of the Dort springs is nearly 81% of its wheelbase.

The springs are long and thick and their smooth resilience absorbs the jar and shocks of rough road travel.

The heavy frame of the Dort helps also in making it comfortable and in holding the car to the road.

This over-size frame is particularly valuable in a light car such as the Dort because it keeps the car rigid and does not distort nor weaken under continuous road pounding.

Were you to continue questioning more and more Dort owners the proof in favor of the car would mount higher and higher.

There is no weak spot in the Dort record of performance.

It has earned the friendliness of owners by its dependability.

Its popularity is not a seasonal whim but a thing of steady growth.

Today it has more friends than yesterday. Tomorrow it will have more friends than today.

And so it goes on—an ever-widening circle of good will toward a car that is daily demonstrating anew its right to the title "the best buy in its field."

The powerful Dort engine turns fuel into mileage with the barest possible loss of power.

It wrings the last bit of travel from even the very mediocre gasoline you get today.

It develops power quietly and pulls vigorously.

On steep hills or in thick traffic travel it answers the accelerator readily and resolutely.

Fifty owners can be accommodated with immediate delivery. Make a memo of that if you don't want to wait.

Geyler Service Is Expert and Prompt

No small share of the great good-will the Geyler Company has earned is due to the efficient service and courteous treatment afforded owners.

The name Geyler stands as an assurance of quick, thorough service to Dort owners.

A systematized, highly organized service organization has been developed during the long period of years the Geyler Company has been in business, and it is equipped with every modern facility.

You can count with certainty upon pleasant and satisfactory relations with the Geyler Company.

ANTWERP, Aug. 21.—The United States practically clinched the track and field championship of the seventh modern Olympic games today, by again outscoring any other single nation. Four finals were finished, the fifty-six pound weight hurtling, running hop, step and jump, 3,000 meter walk, and decathlon. America's points in the first three, with the overwhelming lead of the previous days, is enough to assure the track and field honors to the Stars and Stripes again. The contest for second place remains bitter one, with only three points separating Sweden, Great Britain, and Finland. The Marathon tomorrow, always the feature Olympic race, may elevate any of the three to a secure hold on second place.

BRUTUS HAMILTON.
[Photo U. & U.]

Decathlon Outcome Doubtful.

The completion of the decathlon today left a narrow margin of points separating Helger Loviand of Norway and Brutus Hamilton, the University of Missouri undergraduate, and the actual outcome has been left in doubt for a day, subject to possible revision of the points by the Olympic officials. Of the three finals counted in the point column today, United States won two. The Stars and Stripes were hoisted over the stadium in honor of the triumph of Patrick McDonald of New York in the 56 pound weight throw. Big McDonald towered above the other contestants of the competition as he stepped into the circle for his supreme effort to land an Olympic victory, following the disappointment of being outdistanced in the shot put and hammer throw on preceding days. Whirling about, he put his great bulk into one mighty heave of 11.265 meters, which outdid his best effort in leading the qualifiers yesterday.

Ryan Second in Weight Toss.

Pat Ryan, McDonald's colleague on the New York police force, and the only other American survivor in the finals, placed second. C. Lind of Sweden was third and Archie McDiarmuid of Canada, fourth.

W. Tuulos won the hop, step and jump, with Swedes finishing second, third and fourth. Sherman Landers of Chicago was fifth and Dan Ahearn of Chicago sixth, for America's only places.

Frigerie of Italy won the 3,000 meter walk, thus giving his nation all its points in the games, as he previously had annexed the 10,000 meter walk. R. Remer and T. Maroney, New York hikers, placed third and fifth, respectively, for America.

The Americans showed good form in the 400 meter relay, in the first heat of which the team composed of Charles Paddock, Los Angeles; Loren Murchison, New York; Jack Scholtz, University of Missouri, and Morris Kirksey, San Francisco, was the victor in :43. France won the second heat and Sweden the third.

French Strong in 3,000 Meter.

The French looked strong in the 3,000 meter relay, also, taking first, with the United States second, in their heat. The other heat was won by Great Britain, with Sweden second.

Twenty-eight thousand persons, the largest crowd of the Olympic games, saw the day's events. Many were Belgian school children, taking advantage of the government's throwing open the gates of the stadium to the Belgian public free.

The qualifying round was held in the discus throw, with two Americans, two Finns, and two Swedes placing. The best throw was made by Nicklander of Finland, 44.685 meters. Taipale, also of Finland, placed second. A. R. Pope, University of Washington, and W. K. Bartlett, University of Oregon, placed third and fourth for America.

Six Yanks in Marathon.

Six American long distance men are entered as part of the immense field to compete in the Marathon event. Only four will be actual starters, however, in the event, which will start and finish at the stadium tomorrow, but will cover a course of more than twenty-three miles along suburban roads and through several villages, turning when exactly one-half the distance has been covered and retracing their steps.

In the severe decathlon test, in which Hamilton was the only American survivor, Lieut. E. Vidal, United States Army, remained until the final of the ten events. Harry Goelitz of Chicago and E. Ellis of Syracuse, the other United States entrants, suffered eliminaties earlier.

Although six Americans are entered for the Marathon tomorrow, the probable starters are Charles Mellor of Chicago, Joe Organ of Pittsburgh, Arthur Roth of Dorchester, Mass., and Carl Linder of Quincy, Mass.

Swimming Today.

The swimming championships begin tomorrow and will continue until Aug. 27. America and Great Britain have entered for all the swimming, diving,

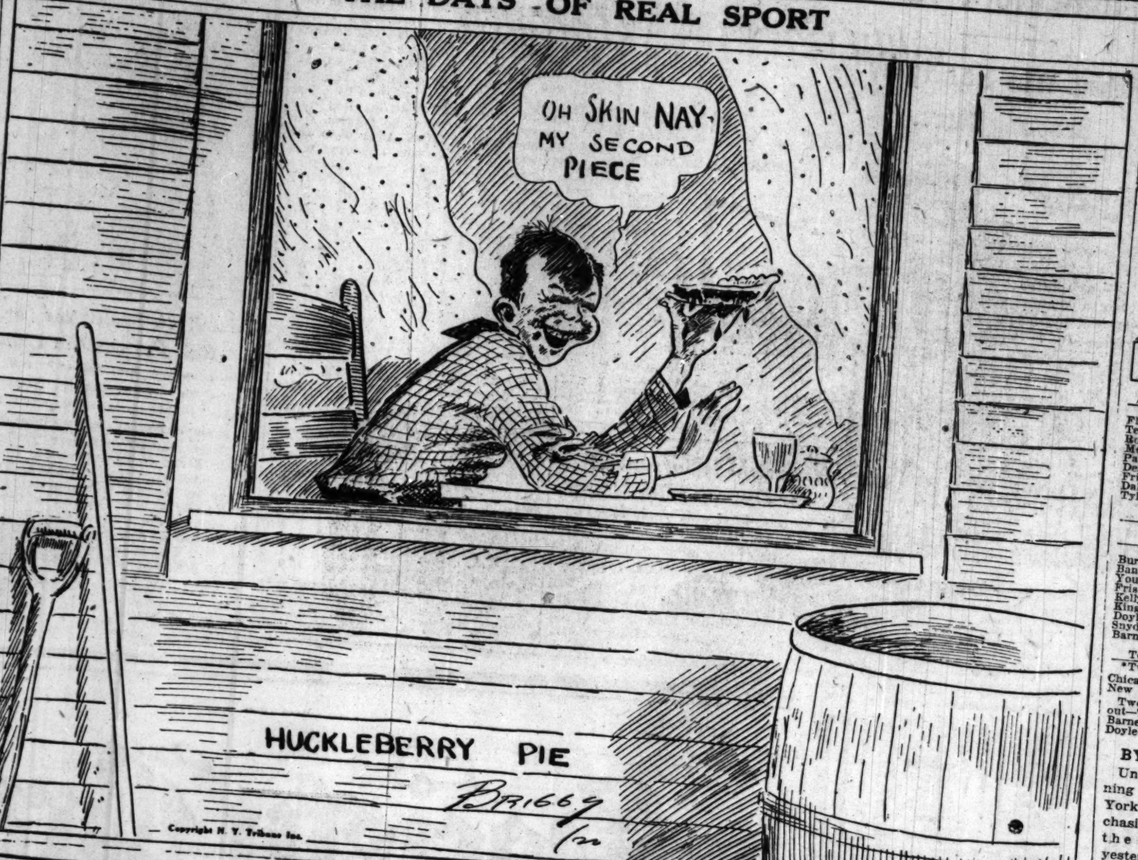
THE DAYS OF REAL SPORT



In the Wake of the News

SAD, IF TRUE.

A Tragedy in One Act.

It was an Ancient Ball Player
Who stoppeth one of three;
Blue was his nose and scant his hair,
"Just listen here," quoth he.

"It was the eighth, the score was tied,
And I was going great.
Three hits had been made by their side
While ours had totaled eight.

"But they had two and we had two
And they were at the bat,
And I was pitching, and it's true,
None equaled me at that.

"And two were gone and two were on,
Their slugger toed the plate.
I lobbed the ball up with a yawn,
Just easy, slow and straight.

"He swung and spun like some wild mill,
We all began to laugh;
The third time round, he met that pill
And broke it square in half.

"And one piece landed in my hand
With mellow sounding plop!
The other soared to beat the band,
I thought 'twould never stop.

"It hung up there, or I'm a Turk,
Like a dirty little moon;
It cleared the hill, it cleared the kirk
And Dago Joe's saloon.

"Since that sad day, I've tramped the world
A second Wandering Jew;
I lost that game, the last I hurled,
By two and one-half to two.

"And often in the stilly night
I've wished I was a Red;
I'd Luque and See"——but pale with fright
His auditor had fled.

MARKET LETTER.

SMALL traders were delighted by the rise in Standard Oil stocks last week, New Jersey moving from 601 to 665, and Indiana from 635 to 685. Thus the holder of a thousand shares of each realized a profit of $64,000 and $50,000 respectively.

The market, for some time, has been full of just such opportunities for the conservative piker, and if he has not profited by them, it is not the fault of The Wake.

WHITE-MORAN GO AT EAST CHICAGO PUT OFF A WEEK

The Charlie White-Pal Moran fight scheduled for East Chicago yesterday afternoon was postponed a week. It will be held next Saturday afternoon, weather permitting. Both Moran and White will rest a few days and then resume training. Despite the fact that the fight was postponed, White loses $500, his forfeit for weight. The Chicago boxer weighed 137 pounds, two pounds more than the agreed poundage, and Joe Golden, manager for Moran, claimed the forfeit. White declares he will insist the stakeholder not pay the forfeit because the fight was postponed.

Tribune Decisions

Decisions of The Tribune fight representatives are:

At Lawrence, Mass.—Mike O'Dowd beat Tommy Robson [12].

At Brockton, Mass.—Harry Carlson beat Jimmy Frazetti [12].

At Minneapolis—Cliff Kramer, St. Paul, knocked out Tommy McCarthy [5].

Lipton to Be Guest of Olympia Fields Tomorrow

Sir Thomas Lipton will be guest at luncheon tomorrow of President J. P. Gardner and A. Alonzo Stagg, former president of the organization, at Olympia fields. Sir Thomas will arrive in Chicago tomorrow morning and will be conveyed to the club by automobile.

VARDON AND RAY BEATEN, 6-5, BY EVANS-GAUDIN

Excellent team work by Chick Evans and Phil Gaudin, the Skokie professional, enabled them to give Harry Vardon and Ed Ray, the invading Englishmen, a defeat by 6 and 5 at the Skokie Country club yesterday, this being the greatest reverse incurred by the Britons in their tour.

HARRY VARDON.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Gaudin, who is a former English international player, gave his amateur partner good assistance and when the visitors started what looked like a rally at the third hole in the afternoon, the home team stopped them. Vardon had a sure three at the 450 yard hole, but Chick tied him with a twenty foot putt.

Evans Sinks 15 Footer.

Again at the fifth hole Ray was six feet from the pin on his third and Evans sunk a fifteen footer for a four, and Ray missed. Chick lost a shot at the next hole, but Gaudin tied the Englishmen with a par four.

Heavy rain overnight left the course in soft condition and the start was delayed for about two hours.

The English players won the first hole, but lost the second, 3—4, and also the ninth. After that turn the local team won the thirteenth and fifteenth, and were three up at the interval.

Battle for Low Score Prize.

In the afternoon there was a prize for low score. Evans reached the turn in 34. The local men won the first and fifth holes, but dropped the ninth to a good three by Ray. Gaudin won the tenth with a great four, and Chick took the eleventh with another four. The next two holes were halved, giving the home team the victory. Evans had low score of 74.

These matches will be for Lake Shore members and their guests. The forenoon contest will start at 9:30 and the afternoon at 2:30.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

Today's Question.

What do you think of golf as a sport?

Where Asked.

On Wilson avenue, near the beach.

The Answers.

C. J. McMahon, 1214 Hood avenue, salesman—I think golf is the best sport a man can indulge in. It takes him outdoors and he gets more exercise than in other games. Tennis and baseball are so strenuous a man gets too tired really to be benefited, as he is in the more leisurely game of golf.

Miss Marguerite Lockefer, 4615 Clarendon avenue, cashier—I think golf is a wonderful game. I play it whenever I get a chance, which is not as often as I wish. I have often watched them play even when I should have been doing something else. It is fascinating.

G. S. Hendricks, Kenmore Hotel, salesman—Golf is the best game for a man to play who does not wish the strenuous life. Golf gives one the exercise without getting fagged out. It is healthful and a good game to train the eye and muscles to work together.

Miss Annette Falco, 936 Sunnyside avenue—I think golf is a rotten game. There is nothing doing most of the time. I can't see what men can be thinking of to follow a little ball all around these courses, swatting it every once in a while, and digging up the nice grass.

Harlan Randolph, 217 North Leclaire avenue, high school student—I have never played golf, though most of my relatives go in for it. I guess it is all right for those who like it, but I do not think I would care to play it. I would like tennis or baseball better—there is more action and fun. Golf is an old man's game, to my notion.

RAIN FORCES POSTPONEMENT OF ELGIN RACE

Elgin, Ill., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—The driving rain that washed Chicago clean last night and this morning so flooded the Elgin road race course that the committee in charge of this year's national classic was forced to announce postponement of the contest for one week. Hundreds of automobile parties and thousands of race fans splashed out to the course and waited well into the morning before giving up hope for a start on the mushy track.

All nine drivers entered in the race announced they will remain here until next Saturday, spending the intervening time in unofficial practice and in tuning up their machines for what is expected to be the American championship struggle.

A light rain late yesterday left the course in lightning fast condition. Scores of visiting cars helped it along by touring over the damp surface and packing it down. The real flood came in the small hours this morning and deluged both course and parking space.

Approximately 100,000 paid admissions were in sight, according to box office officials, when the race was called off. More than $5,000 worth of grand stand seats had been sold in Chicago, and an additional $1,500 advance sales were made in Elgin, more than doubling the advance for both cities in former years.

PLAYERS TO READ CHAPMAN SERMON

Cleveland, O., Aug. 21.—Several hundred copies of the sermon delivered by the Rev. Dr. William A. Scullen at the funeral of Ray Chapman, former Cleveland Indians' shortstop, yesterday, were ordered by Ban Johnson, president of the American league, just before he left for Chicago last night.

"It was the greatest sermon I ever heard, and I want every baseball player to read it," he said.

Frazee Reported Bidding for New York Nationals

Boston, Mass., Aug. 21.—Reports from New York that he was negotiating for the purchase of the New York Giants were neither confirmed nor denied by Harry M. Frazee, owner of the Boston Red Sox, today. According to the New York report, Frazee is said to have made a large offer to Charles A. Stoneham, owner of the Giants. Stoneham, according to the report, is ready to transfer the franchise to him.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Until the Clubs blew in the eighth inning it was a hot battle they gave New York's pennant chasing Giants at the north side yesterday, even though the weather was frigid. The final count was 8 to 3 and the proud and peppery New Yorkers made seven of their eight runs in the last two rounds.

ROSS YOUNG.

Leading by a count of 2 to 1 after seven frames had been chalked up and George Tyler going at a steady clip, opposed by the clever Mr. Jess Barnes, it looked like the Cubs would deal McGraw's men another jolt. But in the eighth, Young Barney Friberg, performing at second for the Mitchells, slipped a cog right at a critical spot and then everything went to smash and the Giants rushed over three tallies with a flourish that hinted of championship style.

Giants Clinch It in Ninth.

The Cubs were handed one in their half of the same round, but in the ninth the Giants dispelled all hopes of the small and shivering crowd by knocking in a cluster of four, being helped this time by a slip on the part of Charley Deal. Barnes maintained his steady form to the finish and today the Giants are close enough to the league leaders to hear the flapping of the flag.

It was much too good a baseball fight to stage before a small crowd. The weather man was to blame for he wouldn't send the sunshine in time to convince the fans of Chicago that there would be a contest. Probably about 4,000 were present when there would have been a park full on a nice afternoon. The diamond had been covered and was in good shape, the only thing marring the sport being the stiff lake breeze.

Giants Score at Start.

For most of the time it was a combat for one run and furnished plenty of thrills. The Giants scored one in the first when Burns doubled, went to third on Young's infield hit, and came home on an out by Frisch, but in the third with one out, Terry singled and raced to third on Robertson's single, from where he counted on Merkle's sacrifice fly.

That evened things and the fight was fierce until the seventh, when a hit by Daly, a pass to Tyler, Flack's sacrifice bunt, and Terry's sacrifice fly gave the Cubs another which might have won had no mistakes followed.

In the eighth Burns started with an infield hit, and after Bancroft fanned, Young smashed a hot one to Friberg. He came up with the ball close to second and made a bad toss to Terry, spoiling a force play. Then Frisch slammed one to Terry and a double play might have still rescued the Cubs, but Friberg ran over second before receiving Terry's toss, losing the force play, but fired to Merkle in time for an out at first. Tyler then became wild and walked two men, forcing home the tying run, and Doyle followed with a single that sent home two more.

Three Giants Hit in Ninth.

Singles by Barnes and King with a double by Young, an error by Deal, a late throw to the plate by Friberg, and a sacrifice fly by Kelly, sent four New Yorkers over the pan in the ninth and made the victory a complete rout.

NOTES

Washington, D. C., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—Two more games here, tomorrow and Tuesday.

Williams probably will pitch the second game and Faber the third one here.

Roth robbed McMullin of a nice hit in the second by stabbing it out of the sun with one hand after a hard run.

The grounds were very slow on account of the heavy rains of the last two days, making it difficult to hit or to cover much ground.

The White Sox accepted their elevation calmly. They have been expecting to break into the lead almost any day, and do not believe they can be dislodged now.

A squad of White Sox were shown the department of agriculture this morning at the invitation of Secretary of Agriculture Meredith. A moving picture man was on hand to "shoot" the players and their host, who plans to use the films to boost the work of his department.

Strunk came close to making a lot of trouble for the umpires in the third inning. Judge hit a long foul fly, which carried beyond the grand stand. A gate was open in the fence and Strunk ran through it out of sight of the umpires, but did not get under the foul. If he had caught it the play would have called for a judicial ruling, as technically the ball was out of the inclosure.

Notes

The final game between Giants and Cubs will take place today. Vaughn and Toney are the likely hurlers.

A swell catch by King prevented the Cubs getting off with two runs in the first. Paskert poled the drive with two on, and King nabbed it in right center, finishing with a collision against the wall.

John McGraw was at the grounds running things from the bench, with Lieut. Evers on the coaching lines. Evers seemed to have a struggle to restrain himself from taking an active part in the sixth inning row when Frisch was called out at the plate, but be managed to keep out of it.

Frisch looks like one of the best base runners who have broken into the league in years. He stole second in the sixth round, getting a great start on Tyler, and finished with a slide that brought him right up on his feet at second about the time the ball arrived.

A regular old time rumpus occurred in the sixth. Frisch was on second with two out when King slammed one off Deal's toes for an infield single. Deal snatched the ball and made a diving tag for Frisch coming into third, but Ump. Rigler ruled him safe. A dozen Cubs dashed into the diamond to protest. King and Frisch then tried a double steal and Frisch was called out at the plate. A half dozen Giants stormed over that decision, made by Ump. Moran. From the press stand one could see that both decisions were correct.

HERE'S PROOF THAT RUTH HAS A REAL WALLOP

Washington, D. C., Aug. 21.—"Babe" Ruth and his home runs have been "investigated" by Uncle Sam and both have been given an official O. K.

Some of the friends of the champion home run hitter of all time decided some time ago that it might be that Ruth's home runs were due in some part to the different baseball used this year in the major leagues, so they gathered up a number of the balls the Yankee player had hit out of the parks and sent them to the bureau of standards here for investigation. Those balls were put through a "third degree." Scientists pounded, beat, and dismembered them, and reported that there was nothing in them that would cause them to "ride" farther when hit than the baseballs heretofore used.

Ben Shibe Seriously Hurt in Auto Accident

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—Suffering from a possible concussion of the brain, Benjamin F. Shibe, president and part owner of the Philadelphia American league team, is in a serious condition today as the result of an automobile accident yesterday when the car in which he was riding was rammed by another car, turning the machine over. Shibe is 85 years old and has been an invalid for several years.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—With some assistance from Boston, Chicago's White Sox went over the top today and gained the objective for which they have been fighting valiantly for weeks. They climbed into the lead by trimming Washington, 5 to 2, in the opening of their three game set here, while the Red Sox were taking a two edged fall out of Cleveland.

It was no soft triumph for the Gleasons. The Senators made them fight for everything they got, and at the end were threatening to upset Eddie Cicotte, who began to wilt slightly under the excessive humidity and had some trouble weathering the eighth inning.

Zachary Knocked Off Slab.

With two of their regulars nursing damaged hands, the Gleasons batted Zachary so hard he was withdrawn at the end of five innings, during which he yielded nine hits and five runs. Acosta fed the Sox Cuban curves the rest of the way and stopped them with one hit, which Eddie Collins whaled over Rice's head in the seventh.

Cicotte had the Griffmen thoroughly tamed for seven rounds, in which he was nicked for only six hits and nary a tally. But in the eighth Cicotte wabbled. Two bases on balls and a couple of hits, one of them a scratch, put the game in doubt for a few spasms, but a fast double play, started by Weaver and finishes by the Collinses, yanked Eddie out of that chasm and he breezed through the ninth.

Weaver a Busy Gent.

Buck Weaver's bat was prominent in the victory, as he peeled off three hits, one of them a triple. He drove in two runs and scored three himself.

The Sox got the jump on Zachary right in the first frame. Strunk led with a single. E. Collins sacrificed and a wild pitch let Strunk to third, from where he trotted home on Weaver's first hit. Jackson deposited a Texas leaguer in short right for two bases and Felsch hit a fly so far that Weaver scored from third on it.

Two more Sox tallies arrived in the third. One was out when E. Collins drew a pass and raced all the way home on Weaver's clout to right for three bases. Jackson's fly scored Buck. The fifth run came over in the fifth as a result of singles by E. Collins and Weaver and a double by J. Collins, right after Eddie had been cut down at the plate on a grounder by Felsch.

Cicotte Loses Control.

The dangerous eighth was started by a pass to Judge. Roth slammed a single to right and Rice beat out a nasty slow bounder to Weaver, filling the sacks. Cicotte passed Brower, forcing in a run. Harris filed out so far that Roth scored, than Shanks hit to Weaver for a double play. O'Neill tried to make trouble with a single at the start of the ninth, but got no where.

CARL MAYS BACK IN YANKEE TOGS; FANS "RIDE" COBB

New York, Aug. 21.—Carl Mays, pitcher of the New York American league club, probably will be in the game against Detroit tomorrow. Mays today made his first appearance on the field since the unfortunate accident which resulted in the death of Ray Chapman, shortstop of the Cleveland team. The Yankee pitcher warmed up near the right field bleachers, but after the game with Detroit started he went to the clubhouse.

Ty Cobb of the Detroit team, who was quoted in Boston as saying that some drastic action should be taken against Mays because of the Chapman accident

INDIANS HANDED TWIN TRIMMING BY BOSTON SOX

Cleveland Goes Runless for 18 Innings.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 21.—Boston shut out Cleveland in both games of a double header today, winning the first, 12 to 0, and the second, 4 to 0. In each game Cleveland made only three hits, Hoyt and Pennock pitching effectively. Wood had charge of the Indians in the absence of Manager Speaker, who was reported as improved and planning to leave Cleveland tomorrow afternoon to take part in the double header Monday in Boston.

Scott was the big hitter of the second game, making a single, two doubles, and a triple in four times at bat.

Babe Ruth Says His "Nanny" Strayed Only on One Occasion

BY BABE RUTH.

(Copyright: 1920: By United News.)

Every ball player loses his nanny at least once. That happened to me down in Jacksonville during the training trip last spring. There was a fellow in the stand who just wouldn't let me alone. No matter what I did I was "a great big stiff," a "false alarm," and a lot more things that are too hot to put down here.

BABE RUTH. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

I stood it just as long as I could and then went over to the stand to get that bird. I was ready to knock his block off. And when I got to him, what did I find—a little, sawed-off runt of a man, about 10 cents' worth of skin and bones. I couldn't hit him, so there was nothing for me to do but grin and go back to the lot.

That Brown Derby Again.

After the brown derby incident I wanted to make a home run in Philly, just to show 'em. But I was out of luck. It was about two weeks later, on May 1, that I got my first homer of the 1920 season off Pennock of the Red Sox at the Polo grounds. Since then I have socked a homer against every club in the league, and in every park on the circuit. So far I have slapped out three on my old home grounds at Fenway park, Boston, but, of course, most of my round trip clouts this season have been made under Coogan's Bluff, New York.

Up to July 25 I had made twenty-five on the home lot. I have now collected a record of forty-three home runs for the season. If you go to the trouble to take a high dive into statistics, you'll find that forty-three home runs is more than any entire club in the American league has knocked out this year.

Autobiography of Babe Ruth. Chapter XIV.

Proud of His Work.

Honestly, I'm mighty proud of this record. My hitting this year has scored about 140 runs, as I figure it, and we still have a spell to go before we'll know who's going to battle for the world's championship. I think I have about 140 hits to my credit for about 310 bases. A peculiar thing is that for all these homers and other extra base hits I stand pretty well out of first place in the American league batting list. Speaker and Sisler top me with averages of about .400, while mine is only .383.

Back in 1911, Ty Cobb's best year, he hit for an average of .420 with 248 hits and 288 bases. In 1919, when I broke the world's home run record with twenty-nine, I hit 139 times for 284 bases and finished the season with an average of .322. But Cobb didn't lead the league in home runs in 1911. Frank Baker of the Athletics was the homer champ that year with nine.

Williamson Hit 27 Homers.

So I like to think that a hitter today takes conditions as he finds them and makes his home runs against the best pitching the other clubs can serve and against a ball that stands as the official ball of the game. In Ed Williamson's day, in 1884, he hit twenty-seven home runs. But he got twenty-five of them on the old grounds on the Chicago lake front, where the fence was close in. Thus he only got two anywhere else. And Buck Freeman, another star walloper, who was knocking them over the fences in 1899, his best year, is down in the records for twenty-five.

MICHIGAN LEGION STAR ENTERS FOR MEET OF A. A. U.

Guy M. Cox, commander of Alfred Branchini Post, American Legion, Iron River, Mich., has entered the 100 and the 220 yard dash in the A. A. U. meet to be held at Stagg field next Saturday, according to Charles A. Dean, chairman of the championship committee, with whom entries closed yesterday. Cox participated in the inter-university games in France and won the 200 meters event. The games are to be held under the auspices of the Chicago chapter, Knights of Columbus.

Americans Sail to Take Part in Airplane Race

New York, Aug. 21.—Clarence Coombs, alternate pilot of the "Texas Wildcat," one of three American entries in the international airplane race, sailed today en route for Paris, where he will assist Roland Rohlfs, former holder of the world's altitude record, in his attempt to lift the Gordon Bennett aviation cup the week of Sept. 27. Rohlfs sailed for Havre yesterday. Three countries—France, Great Britain, and the United States—are entered in the international airplane race.

FIFTY RUNNERS IN 5 MILE HANDICAP ROAD RACE TODAY

Over fifty athletes will face the starter in the five mile handicap road run promoted by the Illinois shoe repairers, starting at Forest Park today at 2 o'clock.

George Hankel, unattached, will start from scratch alone, because his old teammate, Chuck Mellor, will be striving to lead the pack of marathon runners gathered at Antwerp in the Olympic marathon.

O'Leary and Schmehl to Hike to Joliet Today

Dan O'Leady, 80 years of age, and Henry Schmehl, now in his sixty-eighth year, will leave this morning from the Briggs house for Joliet, Ill., a distance of forty miles. They expect to walk the distance in 7 hours and 40 minutes. If they do that well they will be beating two previous walking records they made between Chicago and Joliet in their younger days. In 1874 they walked the distance in 7 hours and 58 minutes, in 1914 they walked it in 7 hours and 35 minutes. Many walkers will accompany the veteran "peds."

REDS ARE EASY FOR MARQUARD'S HURLING, 4 TO 0

Robins Win Easily by Bunching Blows.

Cincinnati, O., Aug. 21.—Brooklyn regained some of its lost ground today by shutting out the champions, 4 to 0. Marquard pitched brilliantly, not a Red runner reaching third base and only two getting as far as second. Eller was in fine form until the eighth, when he was taken out. Sallee was hit for three runs in the ninth. Score:

Hendricks Is Suspended for Dispute With Umpire

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 21.—President Thomas Hickey of the American association today announced that Jack Hendricks, manager of the Indianapolis club, which is playing here, had been suspended indefinitely for a dispute with Umpire McCafferty at St. Paul several days ago. Manager Hendricks left this morning for Chicago.

NORMALS DOWN PYOTTS BY 6 TO 5 IN GREAT RALLY

The Normals made it one-all in the five game city championship series with the Pyotts when they fell on Dick Cantwell in the ninth for six runs, winning, 6 to 5. For eight innings Cantwell shut out the Normals, fanning nine and allowing only three hits, but in the ninth he weakened and two passes, mixed with three singles, two doubles, and a triple, sent over the six runs needed to win. Buckeye was wild and walked eight men. Score:

Babe Ruth Statuettes for Ball Fans Is the Latest

More money for "Babe" and a chance for every fan to have a "Babe" in his home. Two enterprising business men of Chicago went over to Detroit during the last Yankees-Tigers series there and signed a contract with Bambino to reproduce his figure and famous war club in a statuette. Ruth is to receive a royalty on each of the miniatures, which are to be made up in either marble or plaster. The figure stands 7½ inches high. It was designed by Guido Rebechini.

CHAMPS GALORE IN TITLE SHOOT OF TRAP EXPERTS

Entries already received show that at least forty-two states of this country and six provinces of Canada will be represented in the Grand American handicap trapshooting tournament when the first gun is fired Monday morning in the twenty-first renewal of this classic of trapdom in Cleveland.

Among the 540 entries thus far received—for several hundred post entries always are made—will be members of the victorious United States Olympic team of eight, which swept everything before it, first in the English championships and then in the major tests at Antwerp. Also among those present will be the men who represented Canada.

Entries from Illinois.

The Illinois entries are:

T. E. Graham, W. E. McCormick, L. J. Robbson, R. H. Johnson, Spencer T. Olin, L. J. Seed, Chauncey M. Powers, R. DuFay Montgomery, Ben C. Meents, Ide C. Harris, Max Kneussl, C. E. Townsend, C. E. HUTCHINSON WINS FROM EDGAR IN PRO GOLF FINAL Glen View Star Defeats Edgar by 1 Up.

BY JOE DAVIS.

Jock Hutchinson, the blond professional of the Glenview club of Chicago, followed his success in the western open championship by winning the championship of the Professional Golfers' association, defeating Douglas Edgar of Atlanta, 1 up, in the thirty-six hole final at the Flossmoor club yesterday.

JOCK HUTCHINSON. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Jock's victory came after a thrilling finish, as after Edgar had cut the lead against him to 1 down at the twenty-fourth hole, Jock won three more holes and led 4 up at the twenty-eighth. Edgar cut this lead to 1 at the thirty-third hole, and carried the battle to the thirty-sixth green.

Play Under Poor Conditions.

Hutchinson was runner-up to Jim Barnes in the first tournament at Swanoy, where the result hinged on the final putts. Barnes holing and Jock missing. Yesterday he opposed another Englishman and reversed the verdict.

It was a fine duel, fought under tempestuous weather conditions, the wind at times amounting to half a gale, while they finished the last hole in the morning in a driving rain. The afternoon was fine, but heavy rain overnight slowed up the course.

Edgar won the first two holes in the morning, but stymied himself on the sixth green and lost, 5—4. The other two holes were halved, leaving Edgar 1 up at the turn. Jock won the long tenth, 483 yards, and the twelfth, 477 yards, with par fours, but was trapped at the short eleventh, losing 4—3. He won the short thirteenth, 3—4, Edgar overpitching the green.

Edgar's Putting Faulty.

Jock was 1 up at the thirteenth, and the next two holes cut a big figure in the final result. Edgar missed a three foot putt for a win on the sixteenth and lost the seventeenth by missing an eighteen inch putt. These mistakes enabled Jock to lead 1 up at the interval. The cards:

Hutchinson—
Out	5	3	6	3	4	4	2	4	4—35
Edgar—Out	5	4	6	3	4	4	3	4	4—37

Edgar—In	5	3	5	4	3	4	4	5	5—39—76
Par—In	5	3	5	4	4	4	4	5	5—38—74

The afternoon round was replete with incidents. After Jock had won the second hole, 3—4, they both had trouble at the third, which was played into the teeth of the wind. Edgar tried to carry the ditch on his second, but got in and just chopped out. His fifth was a fine chip from sixty feet dead to the pin, which netted a half in six. Edgar was twice bunkered at the fifth, but snatched a half with a fifteen foot putt.

Jock Makes Seventh in Two.

Edgar sunk one of eleven feet at the next green for a win, 3—4, leaving him one down, but Jock got a two on the seventh green with an eighteen foot putt, and was two up.

Three up, with five to play, Jock began his series of pulled tee shots. He pulled his tee shot for the fourteenth behind a tree and had to play out at right angles. Edgar drove 296 yards, but was trapped to the right of the green. He won, 4—5, after chopping out.

Jock Pulls His Drive.

Jock again pulled from the fifteenth tee, and had to play a low shot under a tree short of the creek. Edgar got a wonderful brassy across the creek, which hit a bench on the sixteenth tee. His pitch from fifty yards was short of the pin six feet, but he holed for a win, 4—5, Jock having overshot the pin on his third.

Hutchinson's lead was 1 up, with three hard holes to play. Again Jock pulled his drive to the rough, but made a wonderful spoon shot to the terraced green. This was a life saver, as Edgar was home in two. His approach putt was five feet short, and then he surprised the gallery by being a foot short on his putt. Hutchinson was now dormie two, but he, too, missed a short putt on the seventeenth green.

Edgar was trapped on his second coming home, but reached the edge of the green in three. Jock was home in three. Both ran their approaches close and halved in five. Cards:

ONWENTSIA DEFEATS SOLDIER POLO FOUR

The Onwentsia Blues were returned winners in a well contested polo match with an Army team representing the 6th division from Camp Grant at Lake Forest yesterday. The score was 5 to 4.

Onwentsia was the first to score when, in the second period, well directed shots by Armour and Seaverns gave them the first two points of the game. Rogers of the Army got one of these back by good shooting. Onwentsia scored again in the fourth period when Winston shot one across.

In the sixth the Army came along with a rush and tied the score on goals by Simpson and Rogers. The seventh period saw both sides score a point, which brought them to the eighth and last period all square. In the last few minutes of play Blair of Onwentsia drove a long shot across the chalk line, which spelled victory for his team. The game teams play Monday.

To Play Lacrosse Title Match, Cubs' Park, Sept. 25

BRIEF BITS OF SPORT

Patrick Welsh, 4 years old, of 10351 Avenue O, lost his balance while throwing stones into the Calumet river at One Hundred and Sixth street yesterday and fell into the water and was drowned.

A city all comers tennis tournament will be held at Sears, Roebuck & Co.'s courts on Aug. 28, under the auspices of the Morris Athletic club. Entry blanks can be secured at the club rooms, 210 West Washington street.

The North Italian Cycling club will hold a series of five races in Humboldt park this morning. There will be a 21-5 mile event for girls under 18 years, a 42-5 miles contest for juniors under 16 years, five mile class C, ten mile class B, and twenty mile class A.

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 21.—Joseph J. Lannin, owner of the Buffalo club of the International league, said today that he had decided to retire from baseball at the close of this season, and will sell or break up the Buffalo team. Mr. Lannin says that if the club is not sold as a whole, the players will be disposed of to their own advancement or given unconditional release.

BILLY JOHNSTON AND GRIFFIN ARE CHAMPIONS AGAIN

Tear Roberts-Davis Speed Game Apart in Final.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 21.—William Johnston, national singles champion, and C. J. Griffin won the national lawn tennis championship doubles on the Chestnut Hill courts of the Longwood Cricket club today by defeating Roland Roberts and Willis Davis in the finals in straight sets. The scores were 6—2, 6—2, 6—3.

This is the third time that Johnston and Griffin have held the championship. Last year it was won by the Australians, Norman E. Brookes and Gerald L. Patterson.

Roberts and Davis were outclassed from the start today. Their terrific service went to pieces before the easy returns of Johnston. The national champion consistently stroked the service of both Davis and Roberts, while Griffin frequently lobbed, with the result they opened wide spaces in their opponents' court through which they made skillful placements.

Finals in the Longwood club's women's and mixed championships also were played. Miss Marion Zindersteir of Longwood captured the first leg on the third challenge cup in women's singles by defeating Miss Eleanor Tenant of Los Angeles, 6—4, 6—3. Miss Zinderstein and Miss Tennant won the finals of the women's doubles over Miss Phyllis Walsh of Philadelphia and Miss Edith Sigourney of Longwood, 6—0, 1—6, 6—1.

CHICAGOANS WIN TWO NET MATCHES FROM CLEVELAND

The Chicago team in the intercity tennis competition added another victory to its list for the season, assuring a victory over Cleveland by winning both singles matches at South Side Tennis club yesterday. The doubles contest which makes the third and last of the series, will be played on the same courts at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Ira Reindel and his brother, George, composed the Detroit team. George took the courts first against Al Green Jr., the latter winning by superior speed in the rallies, 6—2, 6—4, Arthur P. Hubbell, representing Chicago, had a stiff tussle with Ira Reindel.

The two fought on even terms to 4—4 in the first set, when Art broke through and captured the match, 6—4. Reindel pressed the play much of the second set, and several times was in sight of a victory which would tie the sets, but he could not shake off Hubbell, who was indefatigable in going after hard returns, and the local player finally wore through Reindel's offense and won the set and match, 11—9.

TENNIS VOLLEYS.

Jackson Park, prospective team champion of the Public Parks Tennis association, will play Washington Park of Milwaukee, champion of that city, at Milwaukee Sunday, Aug. 29. Jackson Park will take both its junior and regular teams.

Wau Tau A. C. of Kosciusko park has scheduled an open northwest side tennis tourney for Sept. 4 to 6, player under 25 years old being eligible. Entries close Aug. 29, and should be made to S. Kaufman, care Kosciusko park, 2732 North Avers.

The third annual city veterans' tennis tournament will open at Ogden Park Tennis club Monday, both singles and doubles being listed. Although the official opening date is Monday, first round matches may be played Saturday or Sunday at South Park or Rogers Park clubs, to give players with business engagements for Monday a chance to play their first round matches instead of defaulting. All players 50 years old or over are eligible.

Springfield Motor Race Postponed Until Today

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 21.—The dirt track championship will be decided at the Illinois state fair tomorrow afternoon, as the rain made it necessary to postpone the event from this afternoon. Only two events on the program were run off today, and Horey, in an Essex, was the winner. The Illinois sweepstakes, which will decide the state title, will be the feature race on Sunday. It will carry a prize of $2,500 with an additional $100 to the leading driver at the end of each five miles. Fourteen cars and drivers are to start.

Nicholson to Design New Lipton Cup Challenger

Montreal, Que., Aug. 21.—Charles E. Nicholson, designer of Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock IV., has accepted a commission to design Maple Leaf, proposed as Canada's challenger for the America's cup by A. C. Ross, promoter of the Maple Leaf challenge, Mr. Ross has announced. In accepting the commission Nicholson was said to have stipulated that the preliminary work of building the yacht should be carried on in England. He then proposed to complete the construction of the challenger in Canada.

YANKEE RELAY TEAMS SHOW FAST FORM IN TRIALS AT ANTWERP

BY JACK MOAKLEY.

[Head Coach American Olympic Team.]

ANTWERP, Aug. 21.—After losing his shotput title the other day, Pat McDonald came back this afternoon and won the fifty-six pound weight for America. McDonald's injured finger only slightly interfered with his throwing, and the big New York policeman was by far the best of the field. His victory was popular, and he was loudly cheered when " Old Glory " was raised.

JACK MOAKLEY. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

" I'm going back to America with at least one Olympic title," said McDonald as he marched out on the field with the other competitors for the event. He was confident of success, and put every ounce of his massive body in the throw, but the turf was soft and hindered chances of a record performance.

We did not do so well in the hop, step and jump. Dan Ahearn finished sixth. He is not nearly the jumper of former years.

After watching the great running of Murchison, Scholz, Paddock, and Kirksey in their heat of the 400 meter relay race, which they won by nearly twenty yards, no other teams in this race look formidable. I also was pleased with the showing of our men in the 3,000 meter team run, H. H. Brown, Mike Devanney, A. A. Schardt, Ivan Dresser, and Larry Shields. We have good chances of winning the final tomorrow.

The games are not drawing well. This is probably due to the fact that Belgium has no great athletes to speak of. Conditions, too, have been against the games from a box office standpoint.

A move has been started to do away with the Marathon race on the grounds that the race is not humane. However, with the proper training a good, sturdy youngster ought to be able to run the full Marathon distance without ill effects. The Marathon race will be started tomorrow morning and the course will measure exactly 42.75 kilometers (nearly twenty-seven miles). The path will be dirt and cinders most of the way.

Whoever wins will deserve all of the glory that belongs to the victory. Joe Organ of the Pittsburgh A. A. and Frank Zuna are the best liked of the American runners.

Roque Title Is Captured by Springfield Player

Norwich, Conn., Aug. 21.—Eddie Clark of Springfield, Mass., recaptured the national roque title tonight in the final matches of the tournament. Clark had to play off a tie with C. G. Williams of Washington, D. C., to win the championship, defeating Williams in two of three games featured by brilliant playing.

ANTWERP, Aug. 21.—Conditions for various events in the Olympic games have brought criticism from the American team. Today, in the running hop, step, and jump, the two Americans, Landers and Ahearn, were unable to do their best in the loose sand of the jumping pit, to which Sol Butler's costly accident a few days ago was ascribed.

Matt McGrath said he injured his leg in the hammer throw because the ring was laid in soft turf instead of clay, causing his spikes to sink deeply, wrenching his knee on the throw. Butler said the soft sand of the jumping pit was responsible for his pulled tendon. Other prominent athletes stated the bad conditions, resulting in numerous injuries, could have been remedied by a live committee.

Relay Teams Disqualified.

Two teams were disqualified in the Americans' heat of the 400 meter relay today, in which the quartet of Yankee sprinters looks a sure winner. The trials brought America against Italy, Luxembourg, Norway, and Spain, but Italy, which finished second, and Norway, were disqualified for carrying the baton too far beyond the next man.

France won the second heat, with England, Holland, and Belgium following, and in the third heat Denmark won, followed by Sweden and South Africa. Harry Edwards, the West Indies Negro, Britain's fastest entrant, was off the English team with a pulled tendon, and the British lost all likelihood of finishing first with him absent.

Three Favorites in Relay.

The finals in the 3,000 meter team race look to be between Great Britain, Sweden, and America, although America finished second to France in a slow trial today. The Yankees romped around the course laughing. Schardt, Chicago; Furnas, Purdue; Dresser, New York; Brown, Boston, and Shields, Philadelphia, compose the American team.

Mucks Will Try for Discus Record at Sears Contest

One of the features of the annual track and field meet of Sears, Roebuck & Co. on Homan athletic field Saturday will be the attempt of Arlie Mucks of the Chicago A. DEMPSEY WEIGHT INCREASES SINCE ACQUIRING TITLE

Must Train Down for Miske Battle.

BY RAY PEARSON.

Two weeks from tomorrow in the arena operated by Floyd Fitzsimmons at Benton Harbor, the fans of the country will know whether or not a year's layoff from ring activity has dulled the fighting speed of world's heavyweight champion Jack Dempsey. Two weeks from tomorrow is Labor day, the day on which Dempsey strips for action in his first engagement since knocking Jess Willard out of the title on July 4, 1919, at Toledo. He finds Billy Miske of St. Paul his opponent this time.

Dempsey already has settled in his training camp at Benton Harbor, and judging from his appearance when he landed in this section of the country a week ago after quite a stay in New York he will need some work to get into the shape he was in when he fought Willard. It might be hard to believe, but the Jack Dempsey of today weighs more than 200 pounds. But that should not worry any of the gents who like to dabble in the wagering business, for despite the poundage the titleholder is in good physical condition.

Height to Carry Weight.

In some fighters weight cuts considerable figure, but in Dempsey's case it is a bit different. Dempsey, with his height of 6 feet 1¼ inches, is built to carry the double century weight without any difficulty. But the work in his Michigan training camp should knock off the excess poundage at present carried by the champion.

There's a perfectly logical reason for believing that Dempsey will be in good shape when he has the padded mitts laced on his hard hitting hands. He is a hard trainer—one of the sort that, with something to do, he can't go at it in easy style, but must rip into it just the way he ripped into Fred Fulton, Jess Willard, and others who stood in his path to the championship. That kind of strenuous training is certain to remove the excess weight and with that his eye will be sharpened for the business of punching.

Jack Has Plenty of Time.

Having watched Dempsey carefully while he was training for his battle with Jess Willard at Toledo, we feel in a position to judge what the titleholder requires in the way of training to condition himself for a battle. Dempsey had something like eight weeks in which to fit himself for the match against the then champion Willard. What he needed was not eight weeks, but about two weeks, for in our opinion—and this is substantiated by the opinion expressed by his chief trainer, Jimmy De Forest—Dempsey was in just as good shape two weeks after he started work as he was on the day of the scrap.

He has two weeks and more in which to get ready for Miske, and it is a safe bet that Jack isn't going to be caught out of condition by the St. Paul opposition. That will be plenty of time, for if one happens to glance backward he will see that Dempsey never entered a ring out of condition. So why should he take that chance now that he is champion and has everything to lose should he fail to measure up to winning the task that faces him.

Arguments of Miske Fans.

The dopesters of this ring game always find some way to give the underdog in the betting a chance to score a victory. Therefore, it is certain that Billy Miske will have supporters when he climbs through the ropes at the Harbor. Some of those who will wager their money on Miske will do so for two reasons. One is that they expect Dempsey's long layoff to affect his fast work afoot; the other that Miske has twice before met Salt Lake Jack and was on his feet at the end of the stipulated number of rounds scheduled.

But there's another thing that boxing fans should not overlook and that is that a boxer usually fights differently as a champion than he does as a title aspirant. It is a cinch that Dempsey will finish his job on Labor day just as quickly as is possible. That's one reason why those two other fights which went the limit can be thrown out as valueless when considering what is going to happen two weeks from tomorrow.

Woods and Waters

by LARRY ST. JOHN

MORE BAIT LORE.

LARRY ST. JOHN.

The reason that minnows should be handled as little as possible is that the roughness of dry hands rubs off the protecting slime and scales, thus increasing the chances of an attack of fungus. For the same reason fishes thrown back should always be taken from the hook with wet hands.

Fungi of comparatively large size, the Saprolegnias or water molds, swarm in all fresh waters, colonizing on ay dead animal matter they can find. They are the white or pale yellow, fuzzy stuff you see on fishes that have been long dead.

The danger to injured fishes and bait minnows would not be so great if actual contact were necessary to spread Saprolegnia, but they reproduce at an amazing rate by throwing out swarm spores that are free swimming by means of cilia or hairlike lashes. Once they attack bait minnows they spread through the entire catch and quickly kill them.

Where conditions permit only enough minnows for a day's fishing should be caught at one time, but in many regions, especially on large bodies of water, the minnow supply varies and they are apt to be absent when most wanted. For this reason it is often advisable to have a live box in which a good supply of bait may be kept.

The best form of live box is rectangular. It may be a framework of light material covered with metal netting, with a hinged door on the top. When the box can be kept in a sheltered spot, free from the wash of the waves, the netting may be just small enough to prevent the minnows swimming through, but if it is to be kept in an exposed place it will be better if one side and one end is made of finer netting—ordinary window screening, for instance—which can be turned to the prevailing wind. Some circulation of water through the box is desirable.

One may go as far as fancy dictates in the elaborateness of a live box. We saw one recently that was partitioned with a compartment for frogs. It contained a sloping shelf with small crosspieces nailed on for the frogs' comfort.

Another good one is owned by a friend who has a camp on a trout stream in Michigan. He anchors it at camp by means of harness snaps that fasten to rings on stakes driven into the bed of the stream. He has rings of the same kind on the side of his boat, so that when he wants to take a day's float he takes the live box with him. There is a partition in this box for the fish he gets, and he brings his catch home alive and kicking.

Neither the minnow box nor pail should be overcrowded. Fifty minnows is the maximum for the large sized minnow buckets sold at the tackle shops; half that many would be better, even if it requires taking two pails along. Means should be provided for aerating the water in the minnow bucket. This can be done by pumping in air with a bicycle pump, by pouring the water into the pail from the height of one's head, or by using an egg beater—make the water bubbly and your minnows will get the air they need.

If ice is used in very warm weather put it on top of the pail, never in the water. Keeping the water aerated and setting the bucket in the shade is all that is necessary, however.

The minow bucket should be washed frequently with strong salt water and an occasional treatment of the same kind is recommended for the live box.

Weak and sick minnows should be taken from the box whenever discovered and destroyed, preferably by fire, and it would be a good thing for any waters if all dead fishes were disposed of in the same way.

If a likely lot of minnows show signs of being attacked by fungus and to replace them would involve much labor or trouble you may be able to save them for awhile by giving them a salt bath. Make a brine a little stronger than brackish, dip the minows in, a few at a time, and leave them there until they show signs of distress; then quickly transfer them to some fresh, aerated water. The same treatment may be given with a solution of permanganate of potash about the color of a grape juice highball.

For bait casting or for fishing for large game fishes the minnow supply may be "stretched" by taking large minnows and splitting them with a sharp knife, using each half as a separate bait. Hook through the head on a small upper hook and through the tail with the main or trailer hook. The double hook affair used by frog casters is good for this rig.

In many waters where there are large trout split minnows are used by local experts, who claim that they are far better than whole ones. Muskellunge, pickerel, pike, and black bass are attracted to split minnows at times when they will refuse them otherwise.

DEMPSEY BUSY ON ROAD AND IN GYMNASIUM

Benton Harbor, Mich., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—Rain forced world's heavyweight champion Jack Dempsey to work inside today. The champion did not seem to suffer much by the handicap, however, and although the public was not permitted a glimpse at him, his workout proved the most strenuous he has engaged in to date.

Dempsey boxed according to schedule, taking on Bill Tate and Panama Joe Gans three rounds apiece. He indulged in his usual gymnasium exercises and was out on the road for five miles this morning before the deluge broke.

On Exhibition Today.

Weather permitting, fans will be given a chance to glimpse the champion in action tomorrow afternoon at Promoter Fitzsimmons' ball park. Manager Jack Kearns was pleased at the showing Dempsey made against Tate and Gans today, and says his condition has reached a point where he will not worry longer on this score.

The date of Billy Miske's first appearance in Benton Harbor has been set for Wednesday. This will give the St. Paul boy a chance to show here at least ten days before the Labor day bout.

Nearly a thousand persons flocked to the ball park today in anticipation of seeing Dempsey work, and at least 2,000 are expected on hand tomorrow.

Pal Moore Picks Jack.

Pal Moore, Memphis bantamweight, arrived today en route to Providence, R. I., where he is scheduled with Young Montreal for twelve rounds to a decision on Labor day. Moore is making his headquarters at the camp of Jack Dempsey. Moore picks the champion to stop Miske.

RAIN HALTS CIRCUIT RACES.

Baseball Is "Deadliest Sport" According to New York Doctor

New York, Aug. 21—[Special.]—Dr. R. E. Coughlin, in the New York Medical Journal, calls baseball "the deadliest sport." His article gives the results of investigation from 1905 to 1915. During the ten years of the investigation a total of 943 lives were lost on the fields of athletic sport.

"Baseball heads the list with 284 fatalities," wrote Dr. Coughlin. "Football is second, with 215, auto racing third, with 128, boxing fourth, with 105, seventy-seven cyclers and fifty-four jockeys lost their lives, fifteen wrestlers perished on the mat, fourteen persons lost their lives playing golf, nine were killed at bowling, and one died while playing lawn tennis.

"Total deaths collected during 1905 were 123; 1910, 206; 1915, 150. There were seventy-eight fatalities directly due to games and contests during 1905; 139 during 1910; sixty-eight during 1915. During 1905, 1910 and 1915, respectively, there were the following number of fatalities in football: Twenty-eight, thirty-three, twenty-one; prevailing injuries being fracture of the skull, dislocation of the skull, dislocation of the vertebræ, broken neck, internal injuries; in baseball, twelve, twenty-four, fourteen; boxing, six, twenty-three, nine, prevailing injuries being overexertion, fracture of the base of the skull, heart blow.

"In 1915 thirty-two athletes at the front lost their lives in action, as follows: Rugby players, four; all-around, five; football players, two; golfer, one; pugilist, one; polo player, one; lawn tennis, one; cricketer, one; bicyclist, one; various, fifteen."

O'DOWD AWARDED WIN OVER ROBSON

Lawrence, Mass., Aug. 21.—A crowd of about 8,000 witnessed twelve rounds of uninteresting milling today when Mike O'Dowd, St. Paul, former middleweight champion, was given the decision over Tommy Robson of Malden, Mass. Robson was outclassed from the start. O'Dowd opened a nasty cut over Robson's left eye in the first round. In the second it appeared Robson would be out, but he staggered through.

JOHN P. GRIER IS A BIT TOO SLOW FOR MAN O' WAR

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—Running as if he resented the mere intimation that a champion of his caliber could have a real rival, Samuel D. Riddle's Man o' War this afternoon disposed of any notion that there is a 3 year old in the country which can even keep pace with him, much less defeat him. This superhorse scored another easy victory in the $12,500 Travers stakes at a mile and a quarter.

Man o' War gave H. P. Whitney's John P. Grier a beating which removed him as a contender. Man o' War beat him at every step, and Upset, stablemate of John P. Grier, and the only other starter, also passed Grier to cop second place.

Man o' War equaled the record made by Sir Barton in the Saratoga handicap on the opening day here, the time being 2:01 4-5. His fractional times were: 11 2-5, 23 2-5, 34 3-5, 46 3-5, 58, 1:10 2-5, 1:22 3-5, 1:35 1-5, 1:48 3-5, and 2:01 4-5.

Essex Breaks New York-Chicago Record

MAKES TRIP IN 24 HOURS 43 MINUTES 50 SECONDS

A stock ESSEX touring car carrying United States mail from New York to San Francisco was diverted to Chicago at Valparaiso, Ind. It lowered best previous record

2 Hours 7 Minutes 10 Seconds

Starting at the foot of 42nd Street, New York the first part of the trip included the time spent on the ferry.

The trip from New York to Chicago was made without a stop except for gasoline and oil and to change drivers. No mechanical adjustments were necessary. When the car checked in at 106th Street and Indianapolis Boulevard the motor was running as sweetly as at the start. Stopping only long enough to have the time checked and be photographed, the car continued on its way to San Francisco. It was one of four Essex cars to cross the continent, each one lowering the former record.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

BIG FIRMS HELP EMPLOYES SOLVE RENT PROBLEMS

List Available Flats, Get Owners' Aid.

Establishment of employes' rental bureaus by scores of large corporations, with a view to curbing profiteering landlords for the fall renting season, has been accompanied by considerable success. That there are a large number of apartment building owners and real estate agents who have no sympathy for "the sky's the limit" landlords was shown yesterday by a survey among corporations that have established the bureaus.

It is estimated at least 20,000 apartments and houses have been listed by the employers, and from these lists satisfactory results are being obtained by the workers. Not only are living quarters being found by the employés, but the movement has brought about a tendency to lower the rents to a certain extent where the landlords have the assurance that the prospective tenants have the indorsement of their employers.

Packer Takes Lead.

Chief among the concerns that have become interested in the renting situation is Wilson & Co., packers. Three thousand apartments have already been listed with this company's mutual service department, and the housing problems of every employé are expected to be solved.

Notice has been sent out to all employés to list with the service bureau all apartments which will be for rent in October. Employés feeling the need of new apartments, due to the pressure of exorbitant rent demands, have been instructed to file their names with the bureau, together with information as to how much they can afford to pay.

Landlords Lend a Hand.

"It is surprising to learn that landlords who have heard of our movement are calling up and expressing their desire to coöperate," said V. D. Skipworth, a vice president of the company. "Many have shown an inclination to reduce their rents when given an opportunity to obtain a tenant in whose welfare the large corporations have shown an interest."

The Chicago Telephone company is another large concern which has established a rental bureau. Officials state their list of apartments has increased to more than 7,500.

DEVINE'S WIDOW OBTAINS REALTY LOAN OF $110,000

To pay taxes and settle the estate of William M. Devins, once city treasurer and wealthy realty dealer, who died Feb. 28, Mrs. Catherine Devine, 4 East Huron street, the widow, yesterday negotiated a loan of $110,000 from the Continental and Commercial National bank.

Mrs. Devine gave as security a piece of vacant land on the northeast corner of Sheridan road and Greenleaf avenue, Rogers Park. The terms are for five years at 6 per cent.

At one time Mr. Devine owned a large part of Rogers Park. At the time of his death his holdings were estimated at between $1,000,000 and $2,000,000. When his will was filed for probate on March 5 friends were surprised to learn the estate was valued at $253,000. Besides the real estate, which was valued at $250,000, Mr. Devine bequeathed his personal property, estimated to be worth $3,000, to the widow.

Gunther Home Leased by Law Correspondence School

The home of the late C. F. Gunther, candy manufacturer and art connoisseur, 3601 Michigan avenue, is to be turned into a correspondence school. Announcement was made yesterday that the American Correspondence School of Law has leased the structure for five years at a term rental of $15,000, with option of purchase within two years for $40,000. The lessees plan to move into their new home on about Oct. 15, according to A. R. Tressler of Rowe & Whitman, who negotiated the deal.

Building Permits

Four building permits were issued yesterday. They included:

COMPLETION of the community house section of the new B'nai Abraham Zion congregation's temple at Karlov avenue and Washington boulevard, shown in the accompanying illustration, is scheduled for Sept. 15, according to William J. Klein of Levy & Klein, architects.

The community house will consist of an auditorium on the first floor and ten classrooms on the second floor. The ground floor will contain a large dining room and kitchen equipment.

The temple itself will not be completed much before Jan. 1, Mr. Klein announced. It is being built in the Byzantine style, the exterior being of stone base and trimmings, with a dark brick for the body of the structure. It will be surmounted by four small corner domes and one large dome above the sidewalk.

The entire structure will cost approximately $300,000, according to I. Marks, president of the congregation and chairman of the building committee.

HENRICI'S TO BE ENLARGED SOON; COST $100,000

Enlargement of the Henrici restaurant in Randolph street and its extension into the Washington Porter building immediately east of the Henrici building next spring at a cost of $100,000 was announced yesterday by Richard E. Schmidt of Schmidt, Garden & Martin, architects. Plans for the remodeling are being completed with the idea of making the Henrici establishment one of the largest in the country.

The Porter structure is leased by the Henrici company, which will have control of the property for approximately eight years more. The remodeling will begin after leases held by several tenants expire next May, it is announced.

With the completion of the improvements the Henrici company will have 75,000 feet of floor space.

World's Fair Apartments Sold by J. P. Pakenham

John P. Pakenham has sold the twenty-one apartment building on the northeast corner of Ellis avenue and Sixty-second street to Hazel Maplit Schuckman for an indicated $75,000, subject to $42,000. The building is among those built during the world's fair period. Richard Curran Jr. was the broker.

Edward J. Sexauer has bought the six apartment building, on a lot 50x125 feet, at 7733-35 North Hermitage avenue, from David G. Swanson, for a reported $34,500, subject to $13,000. Both sides were represented by George J. Gross of Liepold & Hicks.

Borden Farm Products Co. to Erect a New Plant

Bids for the erection of a $250,000 plant for the Borden Farm Products company at Clybourn avenue and West Division street, are expected to be called for this week by E. E. Roberts, architect. Mr. Roberts has just completed plans for the building, which is to be three stories high, and has sent them to New York to the owners for approval.

Forest Preserve Buys Leyden Township Tract

The Forest Preserve district has acquired sixty-three additional acres of land for recreational purposes from John Esch for an indicated $63,000, according to the deeds recorded yesterday in the county building. The land is in Leyden township, an irregular tract between North and Armitage avenues.

LOOP LANDMARK TO MAKEWAY FOR $75,000 BUILDING

Plans to tear down the old five story building at 164 West Lake street, built in 1872 after the big fire by the High estate, and the erection of a modern fireproof six story building by the Chicago Safe and Merchandise company, 72 West Lake street, the purchasers, at a cost of $75,000 was announced yesterday.

The property was secured through O. P. Geudtner & Co., brokers, for a reported $47,500. C. R. Bechtel represented the purchasers.

The site, which is 20x150 feet, was bought from the state of Illinois in 1842 for $27 and passed into the hands of the High estate in 1857. Later it became the property of the Cutler-Clarkson-High estate.

The property is now occupied by E. Hecht & Co., tobacconists, whose lease expires next May, when the new building will be erected.

METAL PROCESS COMPANY LEASES ONE-HALF BLOCK

The Illinois Metal Process company, a new concern organized to manufacture a metal window sash weight and by-products, has leased for a ten year term the entire half block of property on the north side of Arthington avenue from Kilpatrick avenue to the Belt Line railway, for a total rental of $38,000.

The property is owned by the Tuthill Building Material company and comprises 70,000 square feet of land. It is improved with several brick buildings and has a long timber trestle switch track. Machinery and improvements to the extent of about $25,000 are to be installed by the tenants.

A. J. Montague & Son represented both parties in the transaction. The officials of the new company are J. T. Burton, president, and C. W. Tarbet, secretary-treasurer.

Hyde Park May Get New Motion Picture Theater

Negotiations for the leasing of the property at 1423 Hyde Park boulevard, corner of Blackstone avenue, now occupied by the residence of Michael Espert, for the erection of a new motion picture theater, were revealed yesterday through the purchase of the adjoining three apartment building at 1421 Hyde Park boulevard, from Elizabeth H. Smith, and the four apartment building at 1417 Hyde Park boulevard from Adelmar M. Bates. Mr. Espert secured the Smith property for a reported $28,000 and the Bates building for an indicated $36,000.

The deals give Mr. Espert a frontage of 145 feet on Hyde Park boulevard, and 144 feet on Blackstone avenue. In addition to the theater the parties negotiating with Mr. Espert plan to build a number of stores in the contemplated building.

CHICAGO REAL ESTATE BOARD'S OUTING AT RAVISLOE ON SEPT. 9

HEAR ye! Hear ye! Now comes the annual outing of the Chicago Real Estate board, plans for which have just been completed by David S. Simons, chairman of the outing committee.

The outing, which will be a stag affair, will be given at the Ravisloe Country club, Homewood, Ill., on Thursday, September 9. Sixty-five prizes, totaling $700, will be awarded winners of games and contests. Among the events will be a baseball game, tug-of-war, races, tennis, quoits and last but not least—a boxing match.

Many of the members and their guests will go to the scene by automobile. For those not wishing to motor a special train has been chartered, which will leave Randolph street over the Illinois Central at 10:40 a.m., making stops at Van Buren street, Hyde Park, and Woodlawn.

Besides Chairman Simons, the members of the outing committee are Fred A. Gates, A. Lincoln Green, Edwin E. Hartrich, Henry G. Slavik, and G. W. Springer.

7 PER CENT FIRST MORTGAGE 7 PER CENT REAL ESTATE GOLD BONDS

The abnormal demand for investment capital resulting in unprecedented high interest rates enables us to offer investors First Mortgage Real Estate Serial Gold Bonds to net 7%.

These bonds are of the same high character which we have heretofore sold on a 6% basis—the advance in the interest rate being due solely to the present demand for money.

The bonds are secured by guaranteed title First Mortgages on well located large income producing property and are surrouuded by every known safeguard developed during our forty years' investment experience.

Conservative investors should investigate this exceptional opportunity to buy 7% First Mortgage Real Estate Serial Gold Bonds—it may be very temporary.

To buy Real Estate Bonds yielding less than 7% is to sacrifice interest return with absolutely no gain in safety.

Seeing Is Believing

We can't begin to tell you all the merits of this splendid property on paper, so we urge you, for your own profit, in the interest of yourself and your family, that you personally see beautiful Ashwood, the only vacant residential property on the North Side within a mile and a half of Lake Michigan. We are so enthusiastic over the value of our home lots that we know when you see this property you will feel like thanking us for this exceptional opportunity of making a wonderful investment in residential home lots.

Beautiful Ashwood

adjoins the built-up residential section of ROGERS PARK. Land values in this vicinity have been rising by leaps and bounds, and nearby property is already selling at $100 a foot. As an investment you can't afford to let this opportunity slip by. Real money is made in high grade real estate of this character. In making this statement we have in mind a man in this locality who sold his home a short time ago for almost three times the sum he paid for it. BEAUTIFUL ASHWOOD offers you the same opportunity.

Chicago was never so underbuilt as it is today. As soon as building conditions stabilize themselves, there will be a period of very active building. This means much higher prices for vacant property on transportation anywhere in the city. But the drift of population is to the North Side, and Ashwood is the only North Side subdivision on the market.

GRAIN PRICES FINISH WEAK; BUYING POOR

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

An erratic action of grain values, with a tame finish, was the feature Saturday. The grains moved within a good range, but without decided news of any kind other than a little frost talk from Nebraska and Canada, closed tame. Net losses on wheat for the day were 3¼ to 4c, corn ⅛ to 2⅝c, oats 1 to 1⅜c, rye 1¾ to 2¼c, and barley ⅛ to 1c.

The finish of the week was easy and well toward the lowest, with net losses on all grains and provisions. Wheat showed 6c to 6¼c, corn 6⅝c on September, and 3⅝c to 3¾c, on oats 1⅜c to 4c, rye 2c, and barley 3¼c to 3½c, pork 40c to 75c, lard 50c to 52½c, and short ribs 40c to 42½c, compared with a week ago.

Wheat had an easier tone, with a break of 5¼c from the previous day's close and 6¾c from the high point early, the finish being at $2.32½ to $2.33½ for December. Buying was by cash houses on export business, Armour and Nye-Jenks leading, while selling was scattered among large commission houses. Export business was 500,000 bu for deferred shipments. There were numerous comments about the reduction in European requirements and there was filling up of the old business. Winnipeg reported cash premiums 2c higher, with mills and exporters competing for the light offerings.

Rains Help Corn Crop.

Weakness and lower prices prevailed in corn, and, while there was fair buying of September early around $1.43 and December at $1.21, the finish was well toward the bottom, with the local element pressing the selling side. Soaking rains fell over portions of Illinois and Indiana and drought has been removed as a market factor.

Reports of frost in western Nebraska led to buying and an advance, but there was a lack of outside support and the buyers liquidated later.

Official reports indicated there would be no frost in the corn belt for some days at least, and the weekly forecast was for fair and cooler the first half and showers and warmer the latter part of this week.

Offerings of cash corn were small. Withdrawals from elevators in Chicago so far this week have been around 625,000 bu, and the trade looks for a reduction of more than 500,000 bu in stores to be shown Monday.

Oats Lack Support.

There was a lack of the aggressive buying which has characterized the oats market, and, with sentiment bearish and corn weak, it was easy to depress prices, the close being within ⅛c of the low point. Sellers of bids had to protect themselves at the last. Country offerings were not large. Receipts were liberal and premiums a trifle lower. Some cars coming up after the close sold at 4c over September for No. 2 white and 1½c over for No. 3 white. Early No. 2 white brought 4¼@4½c over.

Trade in rye was slow, but there was no great pressure on the market, the strength in cash grain being a factor. Premiums here were 1c higher at 17@18c over September for No. 2 on track. At Minneapolis 24@26½c over was paid.

Barley sold to better advantage, with prices 1c to 2c higher.

Provisions Higher.

Provisions advanced and closed at nearly the high point, with pork 55c to 80c, lard 27½c to 32½c, and short ribs 20c to 30c higher. The big packers and shorts were the buyers, while the offerings were lighter. There are indications of a better cash business from abroad. The week's shipments of lard and meats increased nearly 2,000,000 lbs, and were more than 12,000,000 lbs short of last year.

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

Shipping sales of cash grain at Chicago Saturday were 10,000 bu wheat and 50,000 bu oats.

Exporters who are short wheat against sales abroad continue to cover in the west, and sales of around 500,000 bu were made to the east overnight. No fresh business with Europe was reported. It is said liberal quantities of Canadian have been sold to exporters at equal to 10c per bu under the domestic, and that the demand that previously had been for shipment to Georgian Bay is now mainly interested in Canadian.

Premiums on hard winter wheat at Chicago were about unchanged at 20@21c over December for No. 1 while No. 1 red was 19@20c over, being off about 1c. Gulf bids, track New Orleans or Galveston for No. 1 red or hard were reduced 1c to the basis of 22c over December. Spring wheats showed little change. Receipts 89 cars winter and 10 cars spring. Minneapolis was unchanged to 5c lower, St. Louis 3@5c, Kansas City 2@8c and Omaha 5c lower.

Offerings of cash corn were small, and prices unchanged to 2½c higher with yellow showing the most strength. Receipts 44 cars. Premiums on oats were ½c lower at the last, with sample values unchanged to ½c lower. Receipts 251 cars.

DRY GOODS MARKETS.

New York, Aug. 21.—Lower prices today gave hope of a revived trade in dry goods. Cotton goods were spotty. Raw silk and wool goods inactive and burlaps steady.

CORD TIRE OPPORTUNITY

Rubber manufacturer, established 1857, amply financed, now making cord tires exclusively, is arranging national distribution of its output through responsible agents. Splendid opportunity for established agencies considering a change, or for the organization of a new agency to control this line. Long term contract and exclusive territory. Application being received for Chicago and surrounding territory.

ADDRESS B M 270, TRIBUNE

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

A more fixed sentiment existed in the grain trade, particularly as regards corn. Those who have been bullish were a little more so, while the bear leaders were aggressive and, although admitting rallies were to be expected from time to time, are doing their selling on bulges. Others are disposed to buy moderately on breaks, believing bearish conditions well discounted.

Omaha houses were active in sending reports of possible frost which would damage the corn and one message said there was killing frost in western Nebraska. It said a few Omaha traders are long on corn and would like a little help. At least this is the way the trade here construed it.

Corn receivers are looking for an increased movement from eastern Illinois and western Indiana. Messages from that section yesterday said farmers were satisfied with the condition of their crop and disposed to sell their old corn. There were also reports from central Illinois and southwestern markets of indications of enlarged receipts in the next ten days. The present movement is far below the average and receipts of all grains at Chicago last week were 40 per cent under.

Stocks of corn are accumulating at Argentine ports and some elevators there are filled to capacity. The falling off in the European demand is keenly felt. Interior transportation conditions have greatly improved.

"Abundant crops are a good argument in favor of lower prices," said W. C. Weigand of Simons, Day & Co. "Last year's lowest prices were made before the crop was marketed because future events did not bring forth the visualization of the possibilities it held forth."

PRODUCE MARKETS

Butter and egg prices at Chicago were unchanged on Saturday. Receipts of butter here for the week were 84,240 tubs, against 54,413 tubs last year. Of eggs there were 60,132 cases, against 69,598 cases the previous week, and 66,677 cases last year. Fresh firsts were 40@47½c. Live fowls declined 1c, ranging at 27@33c, and spring chickens were 1½c lower to 34½c.

Potatoes advanced 25@75c a barrel, ranging at $4.75@5.00, and sack stock per 100 lbs moved up 15c to $2.40@2.90 per 100 lbs.

RAILROAD NOTES

Stockholders of the Lehigh and Hudson River Railway company will vote Sept. 10 on increasing the authorized capital stock from $1,720,000 to $5,000,000 and giving stockholders the right to subscribe at par to enough new stock to retire the entire mortgage debt of $2,587,000 and the remaining $400,000 of debenture bonds.

Railroads leading west from Chicago report the aggregate volume of freight traffic larger than a year ago. Live stock shows the largest percentage of gain and grain the largest loss. Coal shipments remain unchanged, while miscellaneous shipments show a material increase.

Filing of blanket schedules to make effective on Aug. 26 increased freight and passenger rates recently authorized was begun by the railroads yesterday. The new tariffs become operative on five days' notice to the interstate commerce commission and the roads have until midnight to file their schedules in order to put the advances into effect next Thursday.

Hearings on the application of the American Railway Express company for further rate increases to meet the recent wage award have been set for next Friday by the interstate commerce commission. The company asks for a 15 per cent increase in addition to the 12½ per cent advance recently authorized.

A petition by minority stockholders for a temporary receivership for the Boston and Maine Railroad company was denied in the federal district court in Concord, N. H.

Standard Oil of Indiana Considers Recapitalizing

New York, Aug. 21.—[Special.]—Recapitalization of Standard Oil of Indiana is understood to be under consideration. Current buying of the stock, which has carried the price up to $700 a share, is based on expectation that a stock dividend will be distributed. It is believed the company also desires to reduce the par value of its stock from $100 to a lower unit.

The belief that special developments are pending in the affairs of this company is increased through the recent transaction whereby 25,000 shares of Standard of Indiana stock were exchanged for 100,000 shares of Midwest Refining stock owned by certain individuals. This exchange gives the Standard Oil company control of about one-sixth of the Midwest company's outstanding stock.

METAL MARKETS.

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—Steel prices easier tone than at any time this year. Structural steel July business reported as showing orders for 91,800 tons, or 51 per cent, against 90,400, or 60 per cent, in June. COPPER—19c, dull. TIN—Easy; buying slack. LEAD—Strong. ZINC—Firm. ANTIMONY—Unchanged.

Owing to a threatened strike among local handlers of live stock, next Monday's receipts at Chicago are uncertain, being estimated at 15,000 cattle, 25,000 hogs and 20,000 sheep, against 25,345 cattle, 30,011 hogs, and 39,689 sheep the corresponding Monday a year ago.

Probable receipts for next week are estimated at 55,000 cattle, 90,000 hogs, and 100,000 sheep, against 74,890 cattle, 122,989 hogs, and 139,479 sheep the corresponding week a year ago.

The closing hog trade was strong yesterday, with prices 10c higher than the close the previous day. Owing to poorer quality some shipping orders for choice kinds went over unfilled. Armour and Swift houses purchased half the 9,900 sold to local and outside packers. Day's top was $15.75 and the average $14.70.

While receipts of hogs last week, barring the strike period last April, were the smallest in nearly a year, the total at 104,500 was nearly 37,000 larger than a year ago, when the total at 67,829 was the smallest during 1919. Estimated average weight last week 249 lbs, against 248 lbs previous week and 256 lbs a year ago.

Better grades of cattle closed fully as high as a week ago, while other kinds finished mostly 50c below the previous Saturday. Week's top beeves at $17.50 was the highest since January.

Sheep and lamb prices closed 50@75c lower than a week ago. The average price of lambs for the week was second lowest since 1916, at $12.40. Top lambs closed at $12.75.

FORMAN FARM MORTGAGE INVESTMENTS

For Those Who Can't Afford to Lose

Maybe you are not satisfied with the low interest received on your savings account and yet you are afraid to make investments which pay higher rates because of the great danger of losing all you have. One form of investment, however, is free from that great danger and pays 6½% interest. We mean Forman Farm Mortgage Investments. Banks, Trustees and Insurance Companies are the heaviest investors in this type of investment because they "can't afford to lose."

If Forman Farm Mortgage Investments are safe enough for them they are safe enough for you, and you can start at once to make your savings earn 6½%.

CHICAGO CURB STOCKS

Following the lead of the New York market, increased activity took place the latter part of the week in the local unlisted securities market, most issues reflecting higher prices at the close.

Butler Bros. advanced to sales at 42, closing in good demand at 41¾, with offerings at 41¾. Burroughs Adding Machine improved slightly to 162 bid, 170 asked. Consumers was quiet at 62@66 and Gossard Corset was neglected at 46@49. Trading in Kellogg Switchboard and Supply was rather limited, stock being offered for sale at 50, with few buyers. Linderman Steel was unchanged at 18@21. Odd lots of Wahl preferred were traded in at 87½, reflecting a slight improvement over previous sales. At the close 87 was bid.

Avery advanced rapidly on small sales to reported transactions as high as 125. Stock was offered at the close, however, at 120 and 115 bid. Moline Plow preferred was more active, selling at 84 ex-dividend.

Little interest was shown in the motor securities, and price changes were within narrow range. Paige-Detroit advanced slightly to sales at 25¾, but the closing was unchanged at 25½ bid, 25¾ asked. Stearns Motor sold at 39, closed easier at 36@38. Sales were made in Packard at 17¾ and Reo at 21¾, which was fractionally lower. Goodyear Tire and Rubber continued to lead the rubber stocks in volume of trade, selling from the high of 116

CREDIT POWER SHIFTS WEST TO MOVE THE CROPS

The shifting of credit resources of the federal reserve system from the east to the west, in preparation for the autumnal demands incident to crop moving, was betokened in the bank statements issued yesterday. The real demand has not yet begun, but from now on the statements should reflect the pressure of legitimate autumn requirements on the credit market. Between Aug. 15 and Nov. 28 last year loans of the twelve federal reserve banks expanded $592,000,000.

The reports of the New York and Chicago federal reserve banks were indicative of the shifting of credit requirements, the former showing a decrease and the latter an increase in loans, while both showed recessions in deposits, although the government increased its balances at both institutions. Both increased their purchases of commercial bills in the open market.

New York Loans Decline.

The New York institution showed a decline in loans of $17,683,612, those on government securities receding $12,225,-732 and those on commercial bills decreasing $5,447,849. Other federal reserve banks decreased their borrowings by $2,864,864, so that the members' banks lowered their rediscounts by $15,586,656. The bank increased its purchases of commercial bills in the market by $3,463,917, so that total bills on hand receded $14,-121,696.

Gross deposits declined $3,403,657, despite an increase of $15,961,747 in government deposits. Total gold reserves increased $10,732,526, reflecting in part gold imports during the week. Total reserves increased $10,909,027. Total earning assets expanded $10,707,696. Federal reserve note circulation increased $1,600,-000.

The ratio of reserves to deposit and note liabilities combined rose to 39.5 from 42.1 per cent in the preceding week, while the ratio of reserves to net deposits, after deducting 40 per cent gold reserves against note circulationfil stood at 39 per cent.

Borrowing Here Grows.

The Chicago federal reserve bank showed an increase in loans of $6,622,022, those on government securities expanding $6,044,280 and those on commercial bills increasing $577,742. Purchases of bills in the market increased $1,922,862, so that total bills on hand expanded $1,146,894. Despite the increase in loans, the member banks reduced their reserve account by $12,010,351.

Total deposits declined $5,921,621 despite an increase of $6,468,896 in government deposits. Total gold reserves receded $8,974,835; total reserves declined $9,049,351. Federal reserve note circulation again increased by $3,394,115. Total earning assets expanded $8,926,854.

The ratio of reserves to deposit and note liabilities combined declined to 41.56 from 42.63 per cent in the preceding week, while the ratio of reserves to note circulation, after setting aside 35 per cent against net deposits, fell to 44.41 from 46.04 per cent in the preceding week.

The report of the New York clearing house banks made an unfavorable showing, the excess reserve being all but wiped out by a recession of $17,147,200, standing at only $1,433,530. This decline was chiefly the result of a recession of $21,989,000 in the reserves carried by the member banks at the federal reserve bank, coincident with a contraction in rediscounts. Thus the reserve position of the reserve bank was built up at the expense of the clearing house banks.

The other principal feature was a drop of $33,089,000 in net demand deposits, reflecting the withdrawal of funds from New York by country institutions. Time deposits increased slightly. Government deposits, which are not figured in the reserve position, increased $25,144,000. Loans expanded $4,178,000. Aggregate reserves decreased $21,458,000. Cash receded $4,498,000.

Status of the 12 Banks.

A moderate increase in loans, some withdrawal of deposits, and a decline in gold reserves were the principal features of the consolidated report of the twelve federal reserve banks. Total loans increased $30,423,000, those on government securities advancing $4,628,000, and those on commercial bills expanding $25,795,-000. Bills purchased in the market remained about stationary. Despite the increase in loans, the member banks reduced their reserve account by $40,867,-000. Total earning assets increased $29,723,000.

Gross deposits receded $6,049,000, despite an increase in government deposits of $43,696,000. Total gold reserves declined $11,007,000, and total reserves receded $11,048,000. Federal reserve note circulation increased $5,544,000.

CHICAGO STOCK TRANSACTIONS

An advancing price trend marked the week end trading yesterday in Chicago stocks. Stewart-Warner and United Paperboard gained major fractions, the latter being influenced by announcement that some of the preferred stock will be retired. Union Carbide closed with a fractional net loss after an early advance. The packing house shares were firmer, Swift gaining 1¾ and Swift International advancing a full point. The motor stocks also were firmer. Edmund-Jones advanced 1½ and Wahl gained a point. J. I. Case Plow declined a point.

Franklin Cars—all models—average 14,000 miles per set of tires and 20 miles per gallon of gasoline.

Beware of little expenses; a small leak will sink a great ship.

—Benjamin Franklin.

Honestly, Now, What Do You Know About the Franklin?

You know a Franklin when you see one, due to its distinctive French style hood. Outside of that, you have a general idea that the Franklin has an air-cooled motor, is a light-weight car, and is claimed to be economical of gasoline and tires.

But what do you really know? It is safe to say you do not know the whole truth or you would be a Franklin owner.

Look Back 22 Years

The original model Franklin was built in 1898. It was the first American 4 cylinder automobile. It was air-cooled. It had valves in the head. It still runs. Yet some manufacturers have, in the last three or four years, made much to-do about the use of valve-in-head motors.

In 1905 the Franklin introduced the first 6 cylinder automobile made in America—also air-cooled, also valve-in-head. And it still runs.

Is Air-Cooling Right?

It seems foolish to ask such a question, let alone discuss it, with Franklin history in mind. But some people will never be convinced.

Do you know that Franklin has produced more than 60,000 air-cooled cars in the last 23 years? Do you know Franklin production is now 18,000 cars yearly? Do you know this is practically the largest output of any car within the Franklin price range?

With this history in mind, it is not possible to question the efficiency of air-cooling, which has been a principle of Franklin construction for about 22 years. The big question is—

Why Prefer Air-Cooling?

Do you know that the stored up heat in gasoline is the source of its power? Do you know that water-cooling steals a large part of this heat?

Water-cooled motors must operate at much less than 212 degrees, the boiling point of water. The Franklin air-cooled motor operates at 350 degrees, nearly 200 degrees higher than the average water-cooled motor.

Obviously, the Franklin steals very little heat from the gasoline, which means that it develops more horse-power per gallon of gasoline than the most efficient water-cooled motor. In every-day language, the Franklin will deliver more miles per gallon.

Twenty thousand Franklin owners reporting to the factory in the last 12 months averaged better than 20 miles per gallon.

Driving and Riding Ease

You frequently read in automobile advertisements that "This car rides and drives like no other car." It is probably true. All cars are different. But the Franklin is radically different.

Do you know the effect of wheel and axle weight on riding comfort? Probably not. Most people think it takes a long wheel base and a heavy car to produce comfort. But they will not produce the Franklin degree of comfort.

Franklin ease comes from light-weight wheels and axles compared to total weight. You have noticed how all cars ride more comfortably when loaded. The extra passengers make the car heavy enough to keep the wheels on the road.

That is the effect you get in the Franklin all the time. Its wheels go in and out of holes with very little bouncing. They never throw the car. That is why the Franklin rides differently and more comfortably on all roads.

Protected from Road Shocks

You recognize the principle that the fewer shocks a mechanism receives the longer it will endure. Franklin engineers have always designed the Franklin to keep shocks away from the motor and passengers.

The preponderance of weight above the springs, of course, reduces shock. Full elliptic springs, with their greater action, further absorb shocks. Finally, the Franklin wood chassis frame, with its flexible construction, yields instead of rigidly resisting, which again reduces shock.

In ten years of strenuous use a Franklin car suffers fewer shocks than the ordinary car in a season's use. The Franklin, therefore, stays in adjustment longer, requires less frequent overhauling, maintains its efficiency higher, and costs less to operate.

There are many more things to know about the Franklin. But these are enough to urge a reasoning man to try out the Franklin before purchasing any other car.

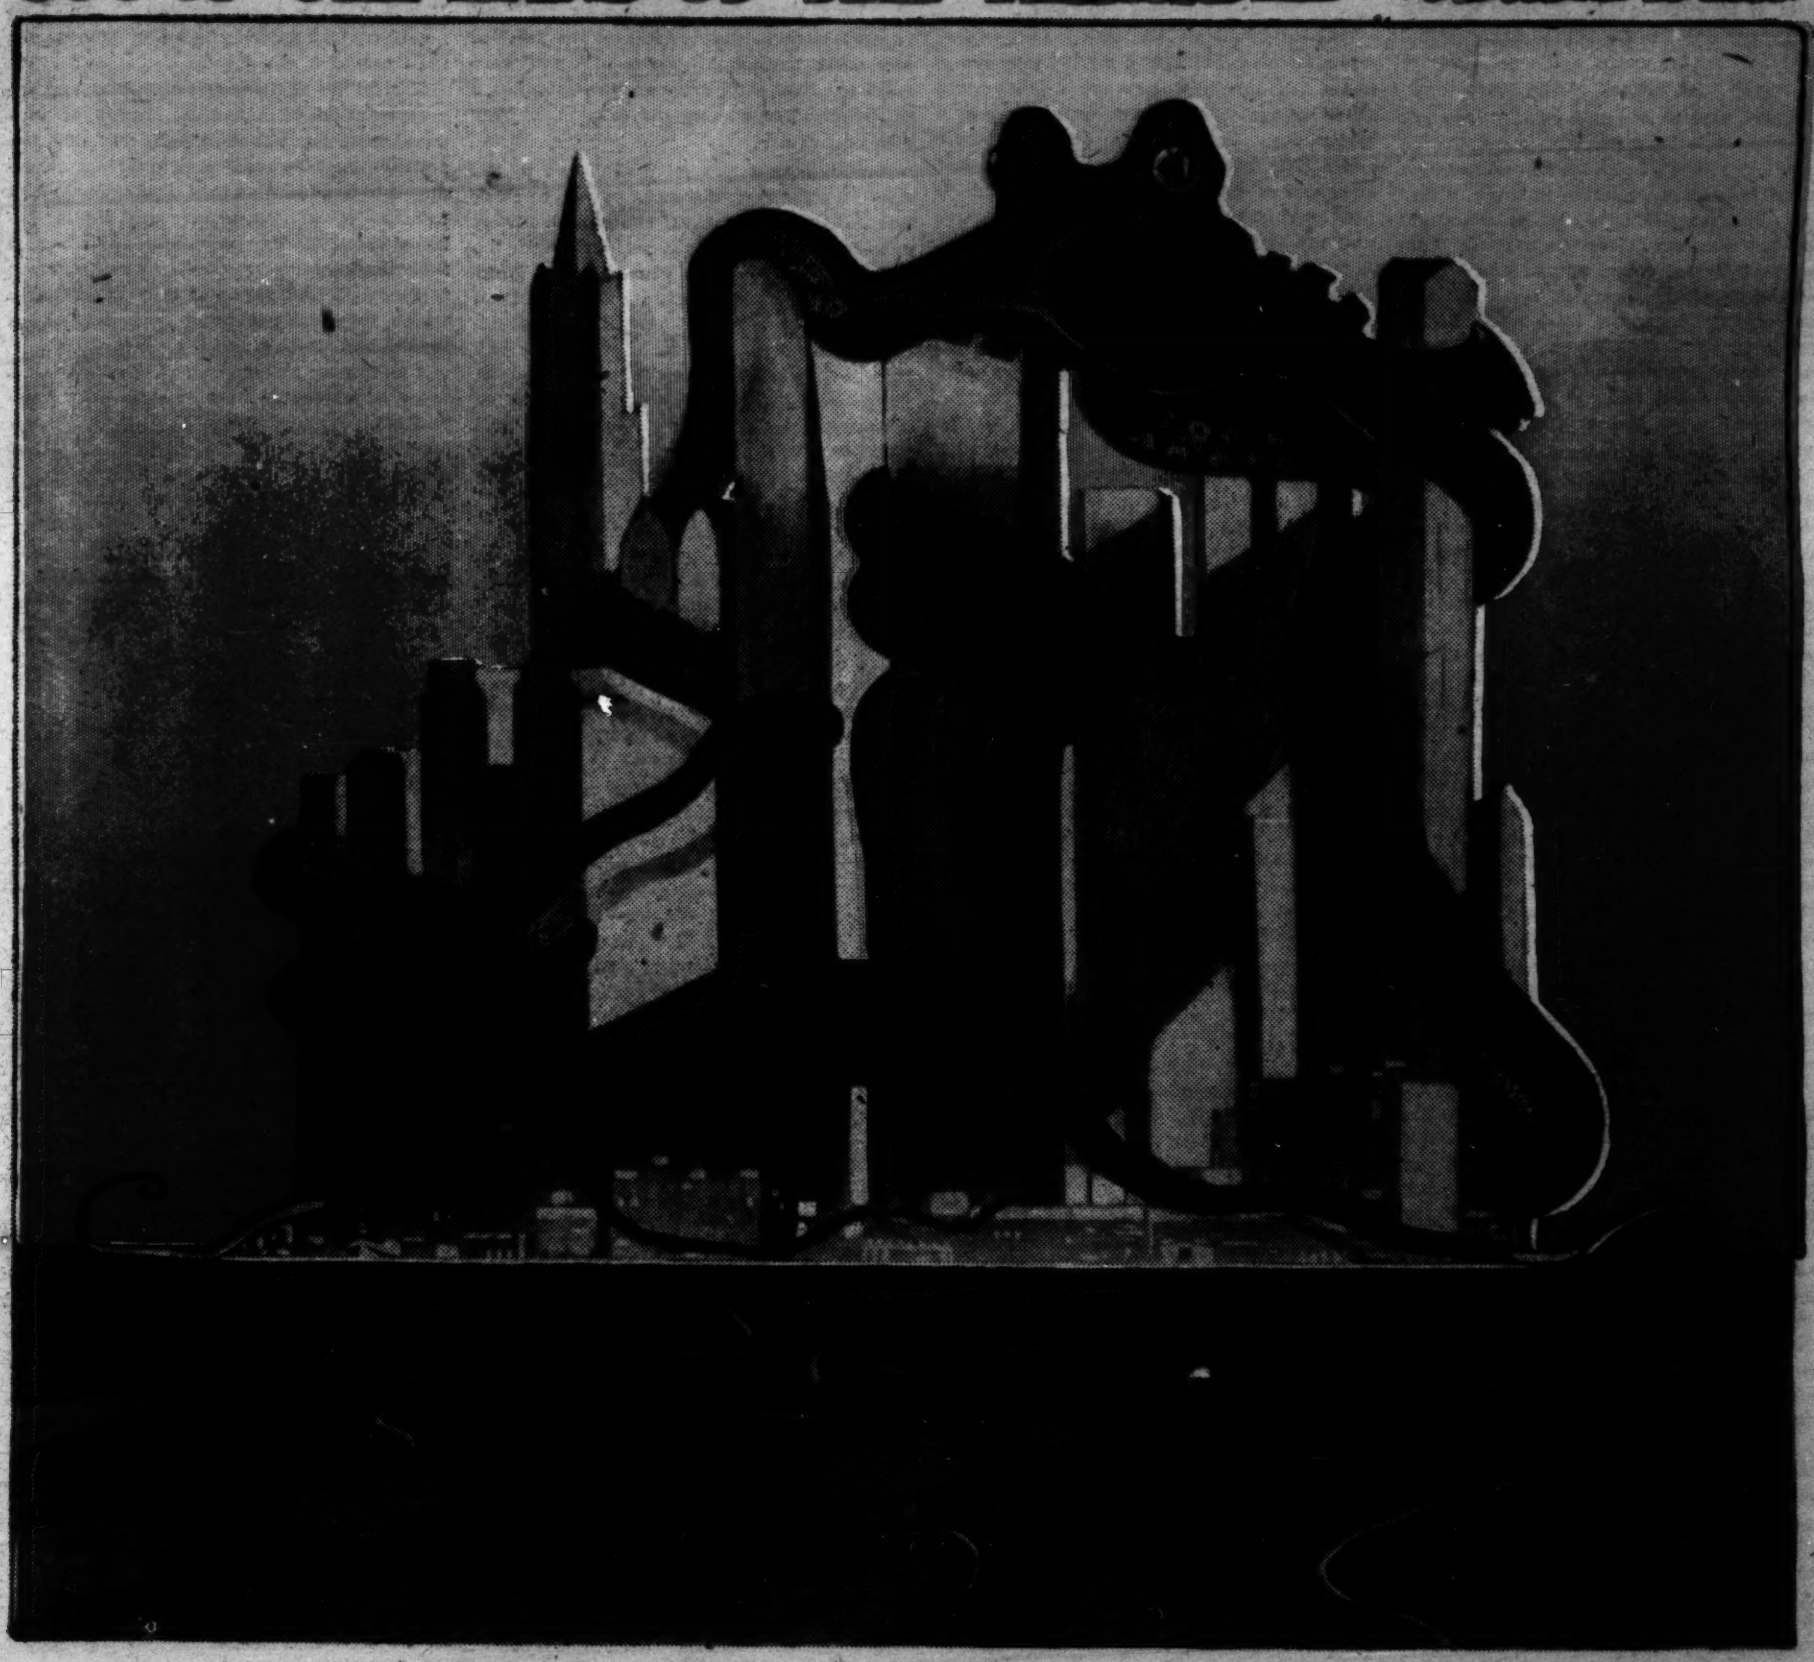
'OUT OF THE HAND OF THE TERRIBLE' — by Arthur Train



A Tale of the Red Terror, and What Befell the City of New York on May 1, 1929

WHERE shall I begin, when there was no beginning? After all, I am about to describe merely a climax, a dénouement, as ironic as it was unexpected, like the wild laughter of steam exploding from a boiler. That is all there is to the story. The three characters of Margaret Hamilton, George Tarnow, and Paul Christopher are the barest incidents, flitting like shadows in the background. The real story is that of the cataclysm in which they figured. Hence, the beginning is of no importance whatsoever; only the finale. But it was part of the very horror of it that it was so gradual that no one—except Paul Christopher (and, of course, George Tarnow)—realized what was going on.

If bread had leaped over night from 10 cents a loaf to $1.60, there would have been a revolution, but when it goes first to 11, then to 12, and so on and up, cent by cent, over a period of years, it passes practically unnoticed. That is exactly what happened. Seven years ago, after the great governmental crusade for lower prices, it was 10 cents a loaf; when Paul Christopher made his appearance the official price was $1.60, if it could be found.

I remember very well when I first saw Paul Christopher, because it was the day that my sister's child, Rosalind, died and we could not bury her because the gravediggers had gone on strike. We were frantic. But it was a locally protected industry, and under the ordinances no one could do their work until the conciliation board had passed on their grievances. Meanwhile—— It took seventeen days to settle the matter. The crematories worked day and night. It was on my way back from the cemetery that I saw what I took to be a crazy man addressing a crowd of women and children in a side street. Beneath its tangle of thick, brown hair his face glowed like a ghost's. I could see the whites of his eyes a block away, but I could not hear what he was saying. Crowds and street-speaking had become so common that I do not know why I paid any attention to him at all. Anyhow, I hurried on, pausing only long enough to notice that the crowd was listening in breathless silence. The man seemed to be using none of the arts of the orator, but was leaning forward, addressing them in a conversational tone. Then suddenly he raised his arms and cried in a shrill voice: "Repent ye! For the kingdom of heaven is at hand."

My first assumption was that the fellow was one of the Reds that were now always haranguing with impunity on the street corners for the purpose of stirring up general unrest. Tarnow had a whole army of them—well paid, too. It was part of his insidious scheme of demoralization. They were carefully taught just how far they could go without running afoul of the law, and they had become past masters in keeping just inside it. They never preached revolution by force; in fact, Tarnow believed force would not be necessary; they simply pointed out the intolerable condition of affairs and prophesied a new order in which "the people" should exercise control.

Tarnow had been clever enough to see that in America he could never get away with the "autocracy of the proletariat" idea, be-

The Secret of Beautiful Skin and Lustrous Hair

EVERY WOMAN has a right to guard most jealously her two priceless inheritances of beauty—her tender, pretty skin and her soft, fluffy hair. But if she is not careful the beauty of her skin and hair may be easily ruined by the use of impure or poorly made soaps or shampoo powders.

She owes it to herself—aye, you owe it to yourself—to consider most carefully the question of keeping the skin and hair clean and healthy, for real beauty only comes from cleanliness and health.

Cheap, opaque toilet soaps—so often used for the face—only clog the pores and keep the skin from 'breathing,' because the materials they are made of are not thoroughly soluble. And often shampoo powders, in order to produce an effect, contain caustics that ruin the hair.

There is nothing like pure soap for the health and cleanliness of the skin on the face or anywhere, or for the hair. And no purer soap can be found than Kirk's JAP ROSE.

In a simple way any woman can prove to her own satisfaction the superiority of JAP ROSE.

We Suggest That You Make This Test:

Use the soap or powder you think is the best and that has been your favorite for a shampoo. Note how much rubbing is necessary, how hard it is to rinse and how the hair remains sticky and stringy. Then shampoo with a cake of the Golden Transparent JAP ROSE. We'll leave the verdict with you.

KIRK'S JAP ROSE SOAP

Golden Transparent

Is preferred by all women who know, for their face and hands, for their bath and for their hair. Its purity can be seen in its Golden Transparency, and felt because of its almost instantaneous, bubbly lather, so clean and refreshing, which dissolves with rinsing at once and completely, leaving no sediment behind.

JAP ROSE is also the children's favorite soap. They love it.

Pure as Gold, Transparent as Truth,
That's JAP ROSE

You'll Like It!

cause in America the "proletariat" was, in fact, the whole American people. Thus he avoided embarrassing comparisons with Russia and gave every disgruntled person a theme to argue about. He had no definite theories. He was merely destructive. The more theories, he used to say, the better.

His plan—and it was simple enough—was to mess things up to such an extent that out of sheer disgust everybody would welcome any sort of municipal government that seemed to offer any relief. If he could get control of New York City, Tarnow believed all the other cities in the United States would follow suit and he would really get a soviet government with himself at the head.

His plot was to see to it that things got so bad in New York that they couldn't be worse. And in this he had been assisted by a natural process of evolution in the city that might, and very likely would, have brought about the same result entirely of itself. That was the frightful congestion in every phase of physical existence, which, apart from industrial disorder, would have made life almost impossible. It had been practically insupportable for years—and yet this had come about so gradually that, as I said before, nobody realized just how bad it was.

You see, there had been no revolution of any sort. Our form of city government had not been changed at all. We were doing business at the same old stand. Or, rather, we were at the same old stand, although we were not doing any business. Every man's hand was against every other man's. Nobody trusted anybody. Everybody was jealous of everybody else. People did not study how to build up, but how to pull down. If anybody managed to prosper; the thing was to destroy his prosperity, not to study how he had achieved it.

There was no coöperation, no sanity. Corporations were taxed out of existence, with the result that thousands had to seek new employment, and yet nobody dared point out the foolishness of such a policy. Everybody had struck for higher wages, and everybody had them, but nobody was any better off. Everything—no matter what it was—simply cost that much more. The affairs of the street railway systems were in such financial confusion that nobody knew whether they were solvent or not, and the trains ran about as they pleased. And the man chiefly responsible for all this was Tarnow, with his Scarlet Eagle, which he published through a dummy corporation, and which had a circulation of 1,300,000. As a matter of fact, his influence was such already that, so far as there remained any effective municipal government, Tarnow was it. But that is getting off again. I was describing the physical congestion of New York.

In the first place, the population had increased from 4,000,000 to 8,000,000, with the result that there was no place to live. Central park was entirely given over to municipal tenement or apartment houses. These were built on a uniform plan, eighteen stories high, and accommodated 1,000,000 people. The same scheme had been adopted with respect to all other parks, and there were no open spaces whatever left in the city where the inhabitants could breathe. Children—although the birth rate had decreased to a nominal figure—swarmed all over the streets and frequently got lost for weeks. The public schools were so inadequate to the number of scholars that education was a farce. The hospitals were swamped; and, if an accident occurred, the victims generally stayed where they were, since there were no hospitals to take them to, and, if there had been, there would have been no way to get them there, owing to the congestion of the streets.

That was the thing that struck everybody who managed to get into the city for business or what was assumed to be pleasure—the aspect of the streets! For the buildings had naturally been increased in height, to meet the existing conditions, so that the thoroughfares had become the darkest of narrow cañons, made darker still by the thousands of viaducts, ramps, and overhead roadways that really gave the entire city a new surface level.

Vehicular traffic was allowed to move only one way upon any street. You went down Fifth avenue at the old level; you came up on an elevated roadway even with the third story windows. Similarly, there were sidewalks at higher levels still—"one way" sidewalks—at the fifth and ninth stories. But the crowds of visitors were so great that they were obliged to move at a snail's pace, and it took hours to get anywhere. Moreover, the air was now so weighted with gas and other elements that habitually to walk on the surface level was a menace to health.

Living conditions were even worse. No family was allowed to occupy more than a certain number of cubic feet of space per capita in any house used for dwelling purposes, whether they owned it or not. Any room not actually occupied was at the disposition of the tenement house commissioner, and could be turned over by him to any worker who had no sleeping accommodations, at a price fixed by the housing bureau. Domestic privacy no longer existed. Cheek by jowl in Fifth avenue residences dwelt old patrician families with these unwelcome guests, obliged to surrender their drawing rooms, libraries, and guest rooms to Armenian peddlers, Sicilian fruit dealers, and Russian sweat shop workers and their children.

This was made possible by a system of outside staircases, but it was not a happy situation. And nobody who owned a house could sell it and move elsewhere, on account of a confiscatory transfer tax on real estate amounting to nearly 75 per cent. That had been one of Tarnow's strokes of genius—to hold the real estate owners where they were and tax them annually just enough so that it was cheaper for them to stay put than to let the property go.

Food prices were exorbitant, but the necessaries of life could usually be obtained at the municipal markets. The condition at the railroad terminals was beyond imagination. Deliveries were delayed months after the shipments had arrived in the city, and there were instances where goods had remained on the docks and in freight houses for several years, smothered under crates of merchandise mountains high. Meat was scarce and at times unprocurable. It was not in jest that coal was referred to as worth its weight in gold. Those who had it guarded it as if it were jewelry or bonds, and it was no longer safe to hoard it in cellars.

Every citizen who possessed fuel, foodstuffs, or private property of value was forced to employ watchmen or guards to protect it, for burglary was the commonest of everyday occurrences, and the police force was utterly incapable of preventing crime. Ten thousand men may have been adequate in former days to a population of 4,000,000, but 20,000 were practically helpless with 8,000,000. They were totally unable to cope with the traffic, or to enforce any sort of order in the streets. Every window was heavily barred up to the third story.

Those who still kept motor cars, and wished to go to a place of amusement, parked them along the side streets and walked to the theaters, where one was admitted only on paying in gold and in the order of arrival. Tickets, in view of the prevalence of counterfeiting, were valueless.

Art flourished, to be sure, because art was the only unregulated industry. You can't make a man sing or act without paying him! But going to the theater had become a hazardous adventure. After the first winter, nobody even tried to go to the municipal opera, the municipal theater, or the municipal symphony concerts, fine as they were, on account of the danger of getting there. On the opening night, when Caruso sang at the premiere of Walter Damrosch's new opera, "Kahlil," thirteen women were trampled to death, two men were stabbed, and there were forty-three felonious assaults and robberies.

It was like medieval times. People did not go anywhere alone, on account of the prevalence of thieves and highwaymen, who often wore evening dress. Hosts and their guests went in parties, the men armed and preceded and followed by husky guards. Dead bodies, lying where they had fallen upon the streets, were no uncommon sight. No woman could venture forth alone in safety. Young girls who laughed at precaution disappeared and were never thereafter heard of. A prominent banker, escorting his 20 year old daughter to the theater, was attacked on Broadway, his neck broken, and the young woman carried bodily off. Street fighting went on all the time, and no one dared interfere. Killings growing out of quarrels occurred constantly, and murder under the guise of self-defense was an ordinary matter.

Of course, I am giving the more sensational side of the picture. Life went on side by side with all this, and in spite of it, just as it did 600 years ago in Rome, Paris, and London, where somewhat similar conditions obtained. You can get used to anything, just as a soldier in the trenches learns to live under fire and think nothing of it. And this had taken a long time in coming. Really, the violence was the least obnoxious part of it.

The deadly thing was the lack of sanitation and the impossibility of securing proper medical attendance. A doctor could not, under normal conditions, answer a call upon the same day. Often it was two or three before he arrived, when, to be sure, there was usually no longer any need for him.

There was also a peculiar aspect of the medical situation that presented an added difficulty. After the great strike of the doctors and lawyers in 1929, which caused such an enormous amount of suffering and disorder, both doctors and lawyers were made public officers, and thus deprived of the power of collective bargaining. Instead, the board of estimate and apportionment undertook to prepare a schedule of hours and rates, which was duly passed by the board of aldermen and approved by the mayor.

A doctor had to come when he was sent for, or he was guilty of a felony and punishable by imprisonment, and he could only charge a specified sum; but you had to wait your turn. He could dawdle all he wanted to. In a word, he could employ the "ca' canny" system, the "strike on the job," or any other method he chose, and you were helpless. You can't drive an unwilling horse to water. The doctors did exactly as they pleased.

A man with a sick child would go to the doctor's office carrying a bag of gold and beg him to come at once. If the bag was large enough, the doctor might go. Otherwise, he fulfilled a call at One Hundred and Nineteenth street at the legal rate of $7.50. Rich people, in fact, carried their family physicians, under fictitious names, upon their pay rolls, at enormous salaries, thus assuring themselves of their service. People died by thousands for lack of medical care. And after they had died they went unburied for lack of transportation and anybody to bury them.

The administration of the law had become a farce so far as the trial or disposition of cases was concerned. The court calendars were years behind. A suit would be reached in about five years after it had been begun. But when it finally came up in court there could be no certainty about when it would be actually disposed of, since there was no knowing if witnesses, jurymen, and lawyers would be on hand.

A case might go on finely for a week, and then, owing to some dislocation in the transportation service, a juryman would fail to appear, and the whole proceeding end in nothing. Even the excellent system of having substitute jurors did not remedy the difficulty. It was made a court rule that no adjournment for such reasons could be taken for more than three days, and while trials were in progress it became customary for everybody to remain on hand, sleeping in their offices or improvising accommodations as best they could. But the pressure of business had become so great that even after the case had at last been tried it took the judge several months before he could sign the necessary papers, and in an equity matter he generally did not hand down his opinion for a year or so.

The result of all this was, paradoxically enough, rather a beneficial one. People did not go to law. They either smashed each other's heads or left the settlement of the dispute to an arbitrator. The Tombs was always crowded, and prisoners charged with crime had to be quartered as private citizens when no other lodgings were available; and the criminal trial calendars were so congested that only prison cases were tried, and if a man could only manage to get bail he might reasonably look forward to half a lifetime of delay before he would be brought to the bar of justice. In a word, the whole system of the administration of criminal law broke down, and there would have been almost complete immunity for crime had the private citizen not taken the law into his own hands.

Every house owner, although it was against the law, had a machine gun to protect his property against looters. It sounds incredible, yet actually the situation tended to adjust itself. It was probably no worse than any western mining camp during the days of the gold rush. Frankly, it was by no means the chief element of discontent. The fact that citizens had to do their own police work, defend their property, and punish evildoers themselves, instead of having it done for them, was vastly less distressing than the inability to procure food and fuel. That was serious. One can manage to protect oneself from the wild beasts in a jungle, but one cannot keep from starving there if there be no food.

I realize that I am still a long way from Tarnow, but, as I said, Tarnow, Margaret, and Paul Christopher were, after all, only incidents. The vital drama lay in the whole general situation. The story of those three was just an ironic touch that does not particularly adorn the tale, even though it may help point a moral. It was merely what gave the laugh to Tarnow's dream. So, before I speak of Tarnow and of Margaret, let me go on with my account of the conditions for which he was so largely responsible and of which he was so nearly the victim.

Am I clear about the seemingly preposterous fact that we had reverted to medieval conditions without appreciating it? I suppose revolutions are always like that. They go "spotty," like a litmus paper changing color or a powder subjected to sulphuric acid. The trick is over and done in one place before it begins in another. And because it is done already in one place the next goes more easily. Certainly we were actually in the throes of a revolution, only we did not know it; and, as it turned out, had we in fact known it, we would not have realized against what we were in revolt. That is the crux of the story—the "twist," as the dramatists say, that makes it worth recording again after all these years. For, while what happened on May 1, 1929, is perfectly well known, I do not think that anybody has ever pointed out the irony of it.

The failure of delegated authority and the reassumption of individual means of self-protection, recaption of property, and the settlement of personal difficulties led naturally to a banding together of those who had interests in common or who held similar political opinions. The prevalence of spites and informers—agents provocateurs as they used to be called—led people to distrust all those whom they did not know well and whose loyalty had not been tested by experience.

A poor man simply had to have a patron to get anything. No city official would move without a bribe. Every sort of vice flourished openly, for it was, in fact, protected (not prosecuted) by the authorities. Private stills would have made drunkenness more usual than it was had it not been for the scarcity of corn, potatoes, or the other simple ingredients essential to the distillation of alcohol. Life was a nightmare of laissez-faire, since those who had enough money or pull could do whatever they wanted and the rest had to suffer privation, cold, sickness, and misery without amelioration.

It is doubtful if there had ever been so much suffering among the great body of people before or since, even in Russia. This was due almost entirely to the terrible confusion, uncertainty as to what was going to happen, and the physical crowding of the city. I have hinted at this before; to describe it would be impossible. The best evidence of the point which this had reached is to be found in the famous "Three Day Shift Ordinance of 1927." Yet at the time of which I write this extraordinary development of metropolitan existence had come to be taken as a matter of course. Over three years before the congestion of the subways had become so great and attended with such a loss of life that tickets were sold for individual seats—as on a Pullman train—and those who could not afford them were obliged to stand in line for hours to get either down or up town.

It was found impossible to keep the old business hours or get more than four hours' consecutive work done by employés. Under the new system a man went to his job only once a week—on Monday or Thursday morning—and when (and if) he got there stayed there seventy-two hours—sleeping on a cot, pallet, or couch in the office or factory—and giving over his place to another three days later.

Owing to the disorganization of business and the closing down of the factories due to confiscatory taxation a multitude of persons were thrown out of employment, and these would certainly have starved had it not been for the free distribution of food. It may have been silly economics to imagine that a workman who had been earning good wages was better off doing nothing except to get in line for his dinner at the municipal restaurant, and it may never have occurred to any of them that this could only go on so long as farms, factories, and workshops continued to produce, since otherwise there would be nothing to distribute. The mockery of the situation lay in the fact that while the municipality did have money—temporarily—in the treasury with which it might have distributed food to the unemployed, it could not, owing to traffic conditions, get the food into the city.

I used to argue with Tarnow about this.

"Look here," I would say, "suppose you tax a factory that has been paying one hundred men ten dollars wages a day so that it has to close, those men are losing a thousand dollars every day, aren't they? Well, how are they going to live?"

"The state will support them," Tarnow would reply.

"Where is it going to get the money?"

"By taxing that same factory—twenty-five per cent, fifty per cent, or even one hundred per cent—for failure to operate."

"All right!" I would answer. "What will happen when that money is used up?"

"O, by that time," he would laugh, "we'll have another form of government."

Now, the joke of it all was that Tarnow did not perceive that he practically had a soviet government already—almost equally successful in its unsuccess with that in Moscow or Petrograd. The only difference was that we were still operating nominally under our old forms. He suffered from the delusion that because on a certain specified day he might, through the columns of the Scarlet Eagle, possibly persuade a majority of the citizens of New York to agree, simultaneously to [illegible] [illegible] nowski, that he was brought up on the east side, and that his mother had red hair.

His existence first became a matter of record when he spoke in favor of the proposed Russian revolution at Sulzer's Harlem River park on the historic evening before York to Tarnow's order. But events proved that he was, as I have said, essentially stupid—an egotistical poseur, a victim of the auto-intoxication of vanity.

I doubt if it had not been for his love affair with Margaret Hamilton whether he ysis, was what made him a "Red." Hitherto intellectually a "Red," now he became a "Red" by temperament.

From that day he devoted himself to the task of trying to annihilate a social order in which he could be disregarded. He would

THE TEENIE WEENIES.

A CALL FOR THE DOCTOR

BY

WM. DONAHEY

AS it was drawing near toward the time for the Teenie Weenie school to open, the General decided they had better break camp and set out for Shoehurst.

The little people had had a lovely time in their little camp and besides they had collected quite enough frog skins to keep the Teenie Weenies supplied with shoes for some time to come.

While the frog skins made wonderfully soft leather, the frogs' legs, when cured and smoked, made delicious ham.

The Cook had cured forty-four hams and made a quantity of sausage, so the Teenie Weenies were assured of plenty of meat through the long winter.

The Indian and the Cowboy between them captured twenty-six caterpillars' skins, and these, when tanned, made wonderful fur gloves, coats, and rugs.

Early one morning the little folks loaded their tents and belongings into the three army wagons, and, hitching up the six mice which pulled them, they set out on the long journey home.

Although a big person could have walked the distance in a couple of hours, it took the Teenie Weenies three days to make the trip, for there were many big hills to climb, some of them being six and seven feet high in our measurement, which is quite high for a Teenie Weenie.

The first day out the little caravan made mighty good time, for the mice had had a long rest and they were anxious to get home.

The second day the little folks made an early start, but they had some very high hills to climb, which made traveling quite slow in places.

Late in the afternoon the little people stopped to rest on the top of a hill which they had just climbed, when Tilly Titter, the English sparrow, flew on the branch of a bush under which they had stopped.

"Great grub worms!" panted the bird. "I've been huntin' the whole country over for you. There's been an accident at the Lovers' 'ouse and the Doctor is wanted at once."

"What's the matter?" asked the General.

"Oh, one of the twins cut 'is foot," answered the sparrow. "'E was choppin' into a peanut and the ax slipped and cut 'is foot."

"Oh, dear!" exclaimed the Lady of Fashion from the seat of one of the wagons in which she was riding. "Tell us all about it."

"Well, it was this way," said the bird. "Mr. Lover 'ad been cuttin' some matches up into fire wood and 'e left the ax there while 'e went into the 'ouse for a drink of water. The twins 'ad found a peanut and one of them took the ax to cut the shell open so as they could get the bloomin' nut out. While they were cuttin' at the nut the ax slipped off the shell and cut 'is foot."

"Is he badly hurt?" asked the Doctor.

"I don't think so," answered the bird. "But Mrs. Lover is very anxious for the Doctor to come at once."

"I'll be right with you as soon as I get my medicine case," cried the Doctor, and he hurried to one of the wagons where he had packed his little valise.

In a few minutes the Doctor returned, and the bird, hopping onto the ground, told the little physician to climb onto her back.

When the Doctor had made himself comfortable on the sparrow's back, the bird spread her wings, and sailing up into the air she soon disappeared in the distance.

The next afternoon the Teenie Weenies arrived at the shoe house, where they found the Twin was not badly hurt.

"He'll be all right in a week or so," the Doctor told the Teenie Weenies, and the little folks felt greatly relieved, for they were all mighty fond of the tiny boy.

You can color this drawing yourself by using either water colors or crayons. The sky line can be either blue or yellow, the leaves of the tree dark green, and the tree trunk a dark gray-green. The bird should be dark brown on the head and back, while her breast should be light gray and her bill orange.

The ground should be light tan, the mice dark gray, and the body of the wagon a dark brown. The top and curtains of the wagon should be light gray.

The Teenie Weenies' hands and faces should be pink, while their clothes can be colored to suit your own taste.

that we were still operating nominally under our old forms. He suffered from the delusion that because on a certain specified day he might, through the columns of the Scarlet Eagle, possibly persuade a majority of the citizens of New York to agree, simply in utter despair, to call themselves an independent commune, they would thereby be any better off.

The great outstanding feature of life in Moscow or Petrograd was that it was a rotten mess, getting more and more rotten every day. Calling yourself one thing rather than another wouldn't put a dollar in your pocket or a bit of dinner in your belly. Life, comfort, happiness depends on production, which is a law of nature. Stop production and you may feed on your hump for awhile, but sometime or other you will starve. New York was feeding on its hump.

Had the water supply failed I do not know what would have happened. Luckily it did not, although the popularity of the reservoirs for purposes of suicide led a good many people—probably without adequate reason—to boil whatever they used for table purposes. The worst curse was the lack of coal. This was intensified by the condition of the windows throughout the city, most of which—in the dwelling districts—had been smashed. It was useless to repair them, only to have some idiot immediately break them again, and hence all the houses were full of cold air. They could not have been heated even if there had been coal. People sat in their overcoats huddled about fires made of twisted newspapers, rags, and broken furniture. I have seen my own sister break up without a quiver a valuable old mahogany arm chair in order to have a little blaze to dress by in the morning.

Beggars roamed the streets like starving cats, searching the gutters for scraps of food.

And side by side with all this suffering there existed a barbarous luxury. People who under different conditions would have saved their money gave themselves over to unrestrained extravagance, for as the state grabbed everything when a man died there was no object in accumulating it even for charity. Therefore, anybody who had money spent it. It was the old frenzy of "eat, drink, and be merry, for tomorrow we die!" The restaurants were full of wasters throwing their money right and left for whatever could be had. The only thing that was plentiful was wine. The hoarding had been so universal in 1919 that so far as alcohol was concerned there seemed to be no end to the supply of drink. Many a man has sat by an empty grate on a freezing night warming himself with a bottle of Krug. And there was a frenzy for dancing that surpassed the antebellum craze of 1913. Even Tarnow danced, if you can imagine it!

The most sinister thing about Tarnow, anyhow, had always been, to me, his youth. One usually pictures an extreme radical—a "red"—as an undersized, black, hairy, gaunt, lowering person. Tarnow, on the contrary, was a pale blonde, well built and above medium height, sleek from good living, with a pair of slightly supercilious gray eyes looking through round, highly polished gold rimmed spectacles. And he was not over thirty! I suppose that was why he was so cruel.

He had a condescending way that somehow flattered people; which proves better than anything else the tremendous impression he created. They hated him and distrusted him, but they perceived his intelligence and sensed his power and could not but be complimented at his notice. Besides, he was well tailored, meticulously clean, spoke with an almost pedagogic precision and elegance, and had the art of significant silence.

No one knew what his origin was, but he spoke English without the shadow of an accent. I have heard it asserted with great vehemence that he was a Russian Pole and equally that he was an Austrian Serb—he might have been either or both. Anyhow, there was something Slavic about him. But he could perfectly well have been Scotch-Irish. I once met a man who had been to high school with him at the College of the City of New York—fifteen years before—but I never really found out anything about his past other than that his real name was Tarnowski, that he was brought up on the east side, and that his mother had red hair.

His existence first became a matter of record when he spoke in favor of the proposed Russian revolution at Sulzer's Harlem River park on the historic evening before Trotzky sailed for Stockholm, taking with him the hundred thousand dollars donated by certain Wall street bankers who were interested in the gyrations of the ruble. A certain Mme. Palmberg had collected it and Tarnow—as Tarnowski—was somehow mixed up with her, although she was nearly fifty. I always suspected that both of them made money in rubles, for Mme. Palmberg afterwards filed a claim against the alien property custodian for three hundred thousand dollars and Tarnow has always had plenty of money. But after this prerevolutionary appearance he never again spoke in public. Also he became Tarnow. That was in April, 1915.

The next thing I know about him is that he attended the peace conference in Paris in December, 1918, as an adviser to the "bureau" upon social and political conditions in eastern Europe, and it was said that at various times during the war he had visited Russia as a confidential agent of the government. He did not go into the army owing to some obscure and polysyllabic pathological disability. At this time he was in high favor in White House circles, and could be seen almost any evening at the Hotel Crillon, conveying rather too much of an air of mystery and importance. The extraordinary thing, however, is that he should have been important. But there is no doubt about it. He was. He knew how to capitalize everything. He never slipped back an inch.

And then, when peace was signed, Tarnow became socially "the thing." These were his three preliminary stages: One, his association with Trotzky in fathering the original Russian revolution of November, 1917; two, his closeness to high places while the administration was alleged to be mildly flirting with radicalism; three, his astonishing social career in New York during the fashionable or parlor period of bolshevism.

It was during this last-stage that I made his acquaintance, and became his legal adviser. He had been one of a group of offensively clever, solemn young men who published a dull monthly paper with a patronizing air of infallibility. I have sometimes thought that for all his seeming brilliance Tarnow was very much like the New Internationalist—at bottom ponderously superficial and without a single ray of humor. For humor connotes kindliness, and he, they, and it had none. Certainly his cleverness was not wisdom.

Posing as a detached and dispassionate intellectual he was, in fact, ravaged by the worm of jealousy, consumed with envy, hatred, malice, and uncharitableness (a fire-eating partisan of revolution). Under the gold rims of his cold, polished lenses, beneath his superior aloofness, and all his talk about simplicity, frugality, "hunger," his condemnation of everything that was luxurious and effete, he was really a voluptuary. It was the garishness of life that attracted him. He loved everything sumptuous. He craved rich food in order that he could make the gesture of refusal, smart friends that he could condescend to them. But this did not prevent his eventually eating the entire menu or spending every week end on Long island. He really had all the love of magnificence of an oriental. He enjoyed emotional music, liked highly spiced dishes and riotous colors, and was a chaser of women.

He believed that he could profit by Trotzky's example and avoid his mistakes. So he had gone deliberately to work to bring about the social cataclysm which has always been the dream of the syndicalist in the expectation that he could, like his old associate, out of the disorder snatch the reins of government. He was adroit, influential, well informed, with a wide acquaintance of all sorts and—he had Lenin and Trotzky behind him.

In payment for the hundred thousand dollars Mme. Palmberg had collected in 1915 they now sent him millions. It was a "glittering" game. And "glitter" was a favorite word of his. Gold torn alike from peasant and from prince poured secretly into New York to Tarnow's order. But events proved that he was, as I have said, essentially stupid—an egotistical poseur, a victim of the auto-intoxication of vanity.

I doubt if it had not been for his love affair with Margaret Hamilton whether he would ever again have advocated violence or risked his hide by trying to play Robespierre. He would probably have remained content, after his Paris vacation among prime ministers and generalissimos, to return to the boudoirs of his Fifth avenue and Long island admirers, a clever young intellectual, competing cigaret in hand with Patience Worth as a drawing room attraction.

But at Paris he met Margaret, whose father had gone there to help reorganize the finances of a ruined world. Had he been successful in marrying her he would have disappeared as a revolutionary and very likely turned up as a conservative diplomat at the court of St. James.

There is no denying that he interested her, not so much the man as the agility and versatility of his intelligence. And he was not backward in following it up. Margaret's father had no time to learn what she was doing and she saw Tarnow constantly. Being a straight ahead sort of girl they were calling each other by their first names in no time. His talk fascinated her. She did not know enough to question his premises and his conclusions seemed unassailable. At his suggestion she read "Fields, Factories, and Workshops," "The Communist Manifesto," and waded through a volume of "Das Kapital."

He crossed with the Hamiltons on the same steamer coming home, and met her father for the first time, under circumstances which were bound to have a definite effect upon the prosecution of his suit. Jack Hamilton saw the situation at a glance. He didn't know a thing about this serene, polite, perfectly poised young man with the gold eyeglasses and meticulous adjectives, but he perceived that he was shallow, self-important, and slightly cheap. He himself, as everybody knows, was a man of profound knowledge and intellectual power, whose native kindliness and courtesy had been intensified and polished by acquaintanceship with the foremost citizens of England, France, and America.

It was the great man meeting the "Smart Alec," and the "Smart Alec" realizing it. In an unguarded moment Tarnow once admitted to me that he hated Hamilton from the first moment that he saw him on the deck of the George Washington. He did not tell me why, but I believe that he hated him because he knew that no matter what he did he could never be like him, the reason that every cad hates a gentleman.

At Margaret's request Hamilton invited Tarnow to sit at the same table with them in the dining room. Then the unequal contest began. I can visualize it easily enough, the sound, experienced, practical financier good-naturedly demolishing the solemn arguments of the superficial theorist and showing him up for a sententious mountebank; the real man of the world taking all the gloss off Tarnow's cheap drawing room patter; the great hearted American forcing faint protestations of loyalty from one for whom loyalty was a meaningless expression.

Before the Washington sighted Sandy Hook Margaret Hamilton was wondering what she had ever seen in either Tarnow or his talk. Tarnow, on the other hand, had no idea of what had been going on. He had capered in his most approved fashion for his future father-in-law and was entirely pleased with himself. His egotism did not admit the possibility that either the banker or his daughter would regard him as an undesirable member of the Hamilton family.

With confidence he proposed to her their last evening on board, and, with the gentlest consideration, was refused. She did not know what Tarnow really was, but she realized that he was something so different from the kind of a man her father was that she did not want to marry him. Tarnow knew it also, but that she should know it was too much for him to bear. That was what turned his soul to gall; that, in the final analysis, was what made him a "Red." Hitherto intellectually a "Red," now he became a "Red" by temperament.

From that day he devoted himself to the task of trying to annihilate a social order in which he could be disregarded. He would bring these proud aristocrats to him crawling on their knees. He would pauperize and if necessary, destroy them. And he would have Margaret Hamilton for a wife, or, if not, for a mistress. What difference did it make what had happened in Russia? He believed himself cleverer than either Trotsky or Lenin. In the present state of things he would—for some subtle reason—always remain an outsider. Well, he proposed to be an insider. Some day Jack Hamilton would come and beg him for the love of God to marry his daughter. When that time came he would consider the matter.

So Tarnow set about making everybody dissatisfied, and, availing himself of the connections he had made when on his tour of investigation for the government, entered into negotiations with his old associate Trotsky and became the actual representative in America of the forces seeking to induce chaos throughout the world. Only, as I have said, Tarnow's scheme was a very simple one—merely to get people so disgusted that they would welcome any sort of change and so almost automatically accept the panacea of government which he would offer them with himself at the head of it.

That was why Paul Christopher seemed to be playing so nicely into Tarnow's hands. Nobody knew who he was or from whence he had come, only that he was preaching the gospel of discontent with the most profound effect, due less to his oratorical gifts than his extraordinary personal magnetism and charm. People were pretty sick of the ordinary harangue on social revolution. What they wanted was flour, coal, sugar, and shoes, not words, words, words. There was great danger that the very conditions which Tarnow had precipitated would defeat his own propaganda, that the "proletariat" would conclude that they were in a sufficiently bad mess already without making it any worse.

But Paul Christopher's appearance gave a new fillip to it. If he hadn't been a zealot burning with a religious fervor Tarnow would have sent him a check, but under the circumstances he couldn't. The man was doing it for love, accomplishing more by the curious force of his strange personality than all of Tarnow's hired agitators put together. And all Tarnow had to do was to sit back and let him go on preaching his doctrine of revolt.

At first he had simply talked on street corners or from the pedestal of some statue in Union square, but before long the interest which he excited grew to such an extent that he was invited to speak from various church pulpits. Soon his vogue became so enormous that he held daily meetings in Madison Square garden. Moody and Sanky, Dowie, Billy Sunday were nothing to him. There was a personal spiritual appeal about the man like that of John the Baptist. And he proclaimed a similar doctrine. The kingdom of heaven was at hand! The people must repent in order that it might come and in order to be ready for it! Present conditions were intolerable and they must change them.

He offered no solution of the problem. He had no formulæ—no new ideas to sell. He pictured no Utopia to ensue upon the adoption of some new political or social rearrangement. His was a voice crying in a wilderness, which had once been the garden of the Lord. God had made the world good, and now it was evil. He contrasted things as they were with what they had been in the past. They were living, he asserted, under a tyranny worse than that of the Pharaohs—trying to make bricks without straw. They must create a new order of things. He did not say what. He was content to preach revolt against life as it was.

But while that was exactly what all the other agitators were doing, Paul Christopher made his hearers realize vividly just how bad everything really was, how far demoralization had gone, and roused them to a frenzy of pity for themselves, wrath and indignation. His name was everywhere. His words were repeated reverently from mouth to mouth. People walked miles on the bare chance of standing outside some building in which he might be speaking, and dozens were daily crushed to death in the press that thronged about him.

"OUT OF THE HAND OF THE TERRIBLE"

By the Lord, it was miserable enough! And daily it grew worse. Had it not been for the mildness of the winter that year and the premature spring, half the population would have frozen to death. As it was they nearly starved, and the unseasonableness of the winter induced a plague of influenza that took the first born of nearly every family. Then came the sensational collapse of the superroads structure of Fifth avenue carrying down with it 4,000 motors and 10,000 human boings, and the great riot as the people tried to extricate their dead. Almost as many lost their lives in the blind effort to rescue others as had perished in the destruction of the viaduct, which in its fall dragged down with it the two skyscrapers on the corner of Forty-second street.

That was the first time that Paul Christopher's miraculous power was demonstrated. Leaving Madison Square garden, where he was speaking, he walked quietly to the scene of the disaster and bade the frienzied crowds fall back down the side streets. Gradually he brought order out of chaos. It was like bidding the waves of the sea to be still and having them obey.

But Paul Christopher could not bring manna from heaven or turn stones into bread. The great tunnels beneath the East river and the Hudson, through which for years New York had been fed, had been allowed to go unrepaired, and now one after the other they cracked and filled with water. The municipal restaurants could no longer furnish even soup to the starving population. Bands of robbers swarmed through the streets looting warehouses and searching private houses for concealed supplies. The lighting system failed for lack of fuel, and darkness added to the horror. Pitched battles went on between the hired mercenaries of the rich and the gangs of freebooters who attacked their mansions, while every man defended himself and his family as best he could from the constant guerilla warfare of the bandits and ghouls who worked singly or in pairs. A huge fire broke out among the tenement houses in Central park and burned down all those west of the reservoir. A fetid stench—one could almost see it—hung over the city.

And yet Tarnow did not make his final move. Sitting in his luxurious apartment in the tower of the Plaza building, in telephonic communication with his lieutenants in the different parts of the city and in the various government departments, he told me over his cigar that he was waiting until a voluntary, simultaneous uprising should occur. Then, and not until then, would his searchlights sweep up and down the streets, the cannons boom, and his aviators hover overhead scattering a million copies of "The Scarlet Eagle" announcing that the people had come into their own and that a new government had been established, with George Tarnow as commissar.

"Have patience" he laughed, leaning across his window sill and gazing down through the soft May dusk upon the weltering city. "Have a little patience, my dear fellow! One must select the precise psychological moment—not an instant before or after! Perhaps it will be tomorrow morning, perhaps tomorrow afternoon. I am ready. But the people—and only the people—must choose the time."

He flecked off his cigar ash and it floated down zigzagging earthwards.

"That is all you care for the people!" I remarked.

And Tarnow laughed.

When I returned home that night accompanied by my two guards I found that my sister and her husband had had nothing for supper but a handful of corn meal and water, which they had boiled in a tin over a lighted newspaper. My brother-in-law had not left the house for five days. I told them that they would not have to wait much longer, that there would be a new government in a day or two. But neither of them seemed at all interested.

"It seems to me that we had had all the revolution we want already," he growled. "Have you got anything to eat with you?"

I offered him a cigar Tarnow had given me and a can of sardines to which I had helped myself as I went out. When they had eaten the last of them my sister said:

"Paul Christopher is to speak in Van Courtlandt park tomorrow. They have installed acouphones so that everybody can hear him. Will you go with us?"

"Why should I walk five miles to hear a crazy agitator?" I inquired roughly. The idea seemed silly.

"I do not know," she answered in rather a queer way. "But John and I are going. They say he is wonderful. Everybody is going. The whole city is going."

"Nonsense," I retorted. "I don't want to hear him. I've heard enough agitators. I'm sick of all of them."

Just then a pistol shot in my front hall called me downstairs. My guard had shot and killed a shabbily dressed man who had tried to sneak in without stating his business.

I awoke in the night in response to some subtle atmospheric change or inaudible noise. It was almost as if some one had called my name. Had some one called? A conviction possessed me that I must go somewhere. But I could recall no duty which required my presence. Some strange influence was drawing me with invisible neurotic wires. The sound of my heart was like the beating of a rug.

As I lay there listening breathlessly, I was conscious all about me of an impalpable —an almost imperceptible rustle, which was neither the sound of footsteps nor of voices, but rather a faint but steady murmur that might have been either or both. I turned over and tried to sleep, but could not. My legs were twitching.

Broad awake, I arose from my bed, and in obedience to the invisible call, put on my clothes and descended to the street. The coming day was just paling the stars. Over by the avenue I could just see something like a dark shadow flowing silently along. Outdoors the mysterious pull was even harder to withstand than within. Almost automatically my feet turned westward. Other feet were doing the same. Lights showed in the windows and here and there doors banged as sleep drugged men and women staggered out into the dawn. The sound of footsteps caught my ear like the chirping of thousands of birds.

Suddenly the darkness changed to light, and I saw that the quietly flowing shadow was a solid procession of people moving up the avenue. They plodded on in silence, old and young, men and women, for the most part with eyes upon the ground—all, however, apparently moved by the same impulse. And as there seemed no end to the procession, I fell in like a file marker and walked with them, much as an iron filing is drawn along by a magnet.

I found myself in a great river of people, which was being augmented at every side street by other streams which joined it from either hand. There was no hesitation, no pause in that human current, flowing fatefully northward. The sun rose as it swept into Broadway, joined here and there by other great columns moving from the east and from the west, all those marching instinctively forming themselves into rough detachments of quadrupled fours. The procession filled the whole avenue and overflowed upon the sidewalks. The air was electric. One felt pulled along as if caught in a mighty current. Now and again one heard the word "Paul Christopher" tossed to and fro.

They were going to Van Courtlandt park —I had known it all along—they were going to hear this new exhorter to revolution. It was true, as my sister had said, the whole city was going. And I was going, too, in spite of myself. Why, I could not tell. I was not curious about evangelists. I had heard plenty of them in the past. But my feet were moving in unison with millions of others to unheard notes from the flute of this Pied Piper. The excitement of it was such that here and there a marcher involuntarily skipped and others almost danced. Yet few of them spoke, seemingly absorbed in obeying the mysterious summons.

The procession crossed the Harlem canal at Two Hundred and Forty-seventh street and, continuing on for another mile, poured into Van Courtlandt park. Already the polo field was black with people and the golf course and adjacent hills were fast filling up. Who was this man who could exert such a mysterious influence? Denser and ever more dense grew the crowd. At regular intervals stood the poles of the acouphones with a small rostrum on the hill overlooking the lake. Working my way through the multitude, I approached this point from behind and gradually gained a place directly in front of it.

It was now nearly the high noon of a perfect day in early May. The air was soft and fragrant with the scent of grass and trees, and in the white woof of the great clouds drifting laggardly across the blue hung Tarnow's aviators, weaving with their black shuttles the invisible web of fate. Reverently—hungrily—silently, except for a faint murmur like the lapping of many waters, the vast concourse waited.

And as I looked at them they seemed to be more like an assemblage of the dead than of the living—a gray sea of expressionless, sunken faces with hollow eyes, of tottering scarecrow skeletons in fluttering rags. I marveled that they could have dragged themselves there. Behind us the city was shrouded in a mephitic pall of smoke and gas, and the breeze that blew from the southwest was tainted with a sickening odor of decay. A shudder trembled through the throng, which now reached in all directions as far as my eyes could see. Then came silence, absolute.

A figure appeared upon the rostrum. I say merely that a figure appeared, because I have never been able to convey the impression made upon me by Paul Christopher. He was, if I remember correctly, a smallish man, smooth shaven, with large, luminous eyes, and rather pale. But it was not his appearance that produced the effect; it was the fire that emanated from him. As well describe an incandescent electric light by saying that it is a ground glass bulb. For Paul Christopher was a white hot flame, a voice in which rang all the sorrow and all the hope of the ages, rather than a man. I do not know what he was. Perhaps he was the Spirit of Truth, perhaps he was the Pied Piper, perhaps he was Moses or John the Baptist come again, or something more. Anyhow he got and held me His eyes and his voice caressed and enfolded me. I would have followed him through the Valley of the Shadow of Death. Was it a psychological intoxication, a delirium, a hypnosis? I do not know.

All that I am sure of is that there emanated from him some sort of magnetic force that was different from anything I had ever felt before. I do not say that it was supernatural, but it was something that was beyond my own experience, and so far as I know of the modern world. He was like a prophet, whatever a prophet may have been, and he spoke in the language of the prophets. He began simply—and the acouphones repeated his words for miles with exaggerated distinctness—with a recital of the woes of his hearers.

They were, he said, like sheep that had gone astray, torn in thickets, and dying of thirst, lured into the wilderness by evil persons, who, in the guise of reformers, had preached unto them false doctrines. Therefore, had unutterable confusion come upon them; labor had ceased; the factories were idle; the market places were empty of sellers and buyers; brother had turned against brother; love and hope had given place to hatred and despair; they had suffered famine, pestilence, and death; the city had become desolate, her glory had departed. Therefore, had they endured a slavery worse than that suffered by the children of Israel under the Egyptians. And as the children of Israel had sighed by reason of their bondage and their cry had gone up unto God, who had seen their afflictions in Egypt, so did God now hear the cry of his people by reason of their taskmasters and know their sorrows. So had he, Paul Christopher, come like Moses to deliver them out of the hand of their oppressors.

While he spoke a groan arose from a million throats, and as he paused to let it die away there came from the south—one after another—a series of heavy detonations and dense columns of black smoke reared themselves in the air and spread over the city. Some new catastrophe had taken place, or, perhaps, Tarnow had decided that the time was ripe for action. A flock of aeroplanes appeared in the zenith, flying in a great "V," and as they descended and swooped low over our heads, they loosed millions of handbills, which fluttered down like a blinding snowfall, announcing the revolution.

Then I heard the voice of Paul Christopher quoting from the Book of Revelation.

"'Babylon the great is fallen, and is become the habitation of devils!'" he cried, as if pronouncing sentence upon New York. "'. . . Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues. . . . Therefore shall her plagues come in one day, death, and mourning, and famine; and she shall be utterly burned with fire. . . . Alas, alas that great city Babylon, that mighty city! For in one hour is thy judgment come. And the merchants of the earth shall weep and mourn over her; for no man buyeth their merchandise any more; the merchandise of gold, and silver, and precious stones, and of pearls, and fine linen, and purple, and silk, and scarlet . . . and all manner of vessels of ivory, and all manner of vessels of most precious wood, and of brass, and iron . . . and wine, and oil, and fine flour, and wheat, and beasts, and sheep, and horses, and chariots, and slaves, and souls of men. And the fruits that thy soul lusted after are departed from thee, and all things which were dainty and goodly are departed from thee, and thou shalt find them no more at all. . . . And the voice of harpers, and musicians, and trumpeters shall be heard no more in thee; and no craftsman, of whatsoever craft he be, shall be found any more in thee; and the sound of a millstone shall be heard no more at all in thee.'"

At that instant of his speaking there was a blinding flash and an explosion louder than any of the preceding made the air shudder. Overhead Tarnow's hundreds of aeroplanes quivered from the concussion. And the silence of the fear of death descended upon the multitude.

Then again out of the horns of the acouphones over the heads of the people rang the voice of Paul Christopher, and from where I stood I could see the glow of exultation upon his pale face.

"'Judah mourneth and the gates thereof languish,'" he cried in the words of Jeremiah. "'They are black unto the ground; and the cry of Jerusalem is gone up. . . . The Lord said unto me, "The prophets prophesy lies in my name; I sent them not, neither have I commanded them, neither spake unto them; they prophesy unto you a false vision and divination, and a thing of naught and the deceit of their heart.

"'Therefore, thus said the Lord concerning the prophets that prophesy in my name, and I sent them not, yet they say, 'Sword and famine shall not be in this land; by sword and famine shall those prophets be consumed. And the people to whom they prophesy shall be cast out in the streets of Jerusalem because of the famine and the sword; and they shall have none to bury them, them, their wives, nor their sons, nor their daughters.'"

At this the people groaned again and lifted their arms to heaven. But Paul Christopher raised his hand to still them.

"'We looked for peace,'" he continued, "'and there is no good; and for the time of healing, and behold trouble! We acknowledge, O Lord, our wickedness, and the iniquity of our fathers, for we have sinned against thee. . . . Then said the Lord unto me . . . Let them go forth. And it shall come to pass, if they say unto thee 'Whither shall we go forth?' then thou shalt tell them, thus saith the Lord: 'Such as are for death, to death; and such as are for the sword, to the sword; and such as are for the famine, to the famine; and such as are for the captivity, to the captivity. . . . Return not thou unto them. And I will make thee unto this people a fenced brasen wall; and they shall fight against thee, but they shall not prevail against thee; for I am with thee to save thee and to deliver thee,' saith the Lord. And I will deliver thee out of the hand of the wicked, and I will redeem thee out of the hand of the terrible.'"

There was a moment's silence and then there arose a shout that made the earth tremble.

"Let us go forth!—Paul Christopher lead us forth!"

Slowly, and as if in obedience to their cry, he descended slowly from the rostrum. Then, with a simple gesture of invitation, he turned towards the north, while the vast concourse fell in behind him and resumed its march. On, on up Broadway, flowed the interminable human tide, vanishing over the rise into the distance. I felt the same twitch of my leg muscles—the same impulse blindly to follow Paul Christopher. The next instant I had joined the procession.

West Wind Drift

THE STORY—His money stolen in a South American port on the eve of his embarking for the United States, Algernon Adonis Percival, American mining engineer, goes aboard the liner Doraine as a stowaway. The adventure begins to be amusing when, as he is at work scrubbing the deck, he is recognised by Ruth Clinton, a passenger, as her dancing partner of a few nights before. Percival's amusement is short lived, however. Before making his presence known to the captain he has observed certain strange goings-on about the ship and given a warning which leads to the finding of several bombs in the hold, evidently planted by German agents, for it is the year of the United States' entry into the great war. The search averts complete disaster, but not all the bombs are found, and those that remain explode, partially wrecking the vessel and setting it afire. The surviving passengers take to the lifeboats while the crew battles desperately with the flames and, after a long fight, succeeds in extinguishing them.

THIRD INSTALLMENT.

The Storm.

THE gaunt, coatless Mr. Mott commanded the port side of the vessel; Mr. Codge, the purser, the starboard. Fighting men in the breeches and leggings of the American navy, blackened and bandaged stokers, sailors, and landsmen comprised the motley company that stood ready to drag the occupants of the boats up into the dank, smoke scented maw of the ship.

One by one, in regular, systematic order, the lifeboats came alongside. There was no confusion, no bungling. They bumped gently against the towering rows of plates, and, made fast by ropes with ample play, gave up in time their precious cargoes. No one lifted up his voice in rejoicing, for there were dead and injured back in the shadows; there were grief stricken, anxious men and women crouching out there in the sunshine; there were limp, unconscious women and half dead children, and over all still hung the ominous cloud of catastrophe fat with prophecies of perils yet to come.

They had gone out from a ship filled with a monstrous clangor and confusion, they were returning to a tomblike hulk, a lonely mass in which echoes would abound, a thing of sighs and silences, the corpse of a mammoth that had throbbed yesterday but never more.

Up in the curving triangle of the forward deck were two long, canvas covered rows. The dead! Forty-six twisted, silent forms lying side by side, some calm in death, others charred and mutilated beyond all possibility of identification. Every man in the engine room at the time of the explosion was now a mangled, unrecognizable thing. Engineers, electricians, stokers—all of them wiped out in the flash of an eye—burnt, boiled, shattered. Half a dozen women, as many children, lay with the silent men.

The injured had been placed in staterooms on the promenade deck, regardless of previous occupancy or subsequent claim. There lay the score and a half of seriously injured, and there toiled the ship's surgeon and his volunteer helpers. Sailor and merchant, worker and idler, scholar and dolt, steerage and first cabin, wealth and poverty, shared alike in the disposition of quarters and shared alike in attention. There was no discrimination. One life was as good as another to the doctor and his men, the poor man's moan as full of suffering as that of the rich man, the wail of the steerage woman as piteous as that of her sister above.

Capt. Trigger was one of the injured. He swore a great deal when the doctor ordered him to bed. Ribs and a broken arm? Why the devil should he be put to bed for something a schoolboy would laugh at? Mr. Shannon and two of the younger officers were killed by the explosion that wrecked the bridge and chart house. Chief Engineer Gray died in the engine room. Cruise was blown to pieces in the wireless house. His assistant, the cripple with the charmed life, was dead.

A few seconds before the first explosion took place he blew out his brains with a big navy revolver. The last seen of Cruise was when he appeared in the door of his station, an expression of mingled rage and alarm on his face. Pointing frantically at the figure of his assistant as it shot down the steps and across the deck, he shouted:

"Get that man! Get him! For God's sake, get him!"

It all happened in a few seconds of time. The shrill laugh of the fleeing assistant, the report of the revolver, an instant of stupefaction, and then the dull, grinding crash.

It will never be known what Cruise had heard or seen in the last moments of his life. No one on board the Doraine, however, doubted for an instant that he had discovered, too, late, the truth about his misshapen assistant. They now knew with almost absolute certainty the identity of the odd man in that devilish trio, the man whose footsteps Percival had heard, the man who stayed behind to guarantee the consummation of the hideous plot. Coward in the end, he shirked the death he was pledged to accept. He knew what was coming. Unlike his braver comrades, he took the simplest way.

The count began. Late in the afternoon it was completed. There were forty-six known dead on board the Doraine, the majority being members of the crew. Seventeen persons were missing, chiefly from the steerage. Twenty-nine seriously injured were under the doctor's care. Some of them would not recover. A hundred or more persons suffered from shock, bruises, cuts, and exposure, but only a few of them required or demanded attention. In spite of their injuries they fell to with the spirit that makes for true heroism and devoted themselves to the care of the less fortunate, or to the assistance of the sorely tried officers and men who strove to bring order out of chaos.

Among the survivors were two American surgeons and a physician from Rio Janeiro. They, with the nurses, all of whom had been saved, immediately went to the relief of the ship's doctor, and in short order an improvised hospital was established. There was a remarkable unanimity of self-sacrifice among the passengers. High and low, they fell to in a frenzy of comradeship and worked side by side in whatsoever capacity they were needed, whether fitted for it or not. No man, no woman who was able to lift a helping hand, failed in this hour of need.

Menial labor fell to the lot of the lordly but uncomplaining Landover, to Block and Nicklestick, Jones and Snipe, and even to the precious Sig. Joseppi, who, forgetting his Carusolike throat, toiled and sweated in the smoky saloon.

Morris Shine, the motion picture magnate, the while he labored amidst the wreckage of the after deck, lamented not the cheerless task but the evil fate that prevented the making of the most spectacular film the world had ever known.

Mme. Careni-Amori, Mme. Obosky and her dressers; bejeweled Jewesses and half clad emigrants; gentle women unused to toil and women who were born to it; the old and the young—all of them, without exception—rose from the depths of despair and faced the rigors of the day with unflinching courage, gave out of a limitless store of tenderness all that their strength could spare.

After the sun had set and the decks were dark and deserted except for the men employed in the grewsome business the dead were lowered into the sea, swathed in canvas and weighted with things that were made to kill—shells from the gunners' hoard. Swiftly, methodically, one after the other, they slid down to the black, greedy waters, sank to the grave that is never still yet always silent, to the vast, unexplored wilderness that stretches around the world. The thin little missionary from the barren plateaus of Patagonia and the plump priest from the heart of Buenos Aires, monotonously commended each and every one of them to the mercy of God!

The sun came up again in the morning over a smiling, happy sea that licked the sides of the Doraine with the tenderness of a dog.

The plight of the hapless steamer could not be disguised. Even the most ignorant passenger knew that the wrecked engines could not be repaired or compounded. They knew that the Doraine was completely paralyzed. The power to move at will was forever lost, the force that had driven her resistlessly along the chosen path was still. The powerful propellers were idle, the huge stern post wrenched so badly that the rudder was useless. She was adrift, helplessly adrift. Of what avail the wheel and a patched up rudder to the mass that lay inert, motionless on the smiling sea?

Every one on board realized, with sinking heart, that the Doraine was to go on drifting, drifting no man knew whither, until she crossed the path of a friendly stranger out there in the mighty waste. No cry of distress, no call for help could go crackling into the boundless reaches. That was the plight of the Doraine and her people on the mocking day that followed the disaster, and unless fate intervened that would be her plight for days without end.

Mr. Mott, temporarily in command, addressed the passengers in the main saloon, where they had congregated at his request. He did not mince matters. He stated the situation plainly. It was best that they should realize, that they should understand, that they should know the truth in order that they might adapt themselves to the conditions he was now compelled of necessity to impose upon them. They were, so to speak, occupying a derelict. Help might come before nightfall, it might not come for days. He hoped for the best, but he intended to prepare for the worst.

Without apology he laid down a rigid set of rules, and from these rules, he made it perfectly clear, there could be no deviation. The available supply of food was limited. It was his purpose to conserve it with the greatest possible care. Down in the holds, of course, was a vast store of consigned foodstuffs, but he had no authority to draw upon it and would not do so unless the ship's own stock was exhausted. Passengers and crew, therefore, would be obliged to go on short rations. Better to eat sparingly now, he said, than not to eat at all later on. He concluded his remarks in this fashion:

"Remember that we are all in the same boat. We don't know how long we'll be drifting like this and we don't know where we're drifting to. It's an everlastingly big ocean we're on. We ought to thank God we're not at the bottom of it now. If we're lucky we'll be picked up soon, if not—well, it's up to us, every one of us, to make the best of it. We're alive, and that's certainly something. We'll find it easier if we keep ourselves busy. That's why I'm asking you, one and all, to do a good day's work regularly, one way or another, from now until relief comes. We can't have any loafers or quitters on board this ship. That means everybody, rich and poor. You may think I'm putting a hardship on you, seeing as how you have paid for your passage and all that, but what I'm ordering you to do ain't a marker to what you'd be doing if you were out there in lifeboats, 800 miles from shore, and—well, we won't go into that. We've got to make the best of it, my friends. We're up against it good and plenty, that's the plain facts of the case. There's no use in me saying it's all going to turn out right in a day or so, because I don't know a da——a blamed thing about it. We're in God's hands. Maybe it will help to pray, but I doubt it. All I've got to say is this: Go down on your knees as much as you like, but don't kick!"

Sig. Joseppi lifted his voice, but not in song. In very bad English he wanted to know how long the captain thought it would be before they were rescued, and when he was informed that it might not be for weeks or even months, he cried out in worse English that he was ruined. He would have to violate his contract! No impressario would think of engaging him again! His wonderful American tour! If he was not rescued within a week—O, my God, the consequences! He did not regret the paltry $2,000 a week—for thirty weeks—but to violate a contract!

Mr. Mott looked rather helpless. He appreciated the fact that Sig. Joseppi was a very great personage, but what was he saying? Was it—could it be mutiny?

"I'm sorry, Mr. Joseppi," he broke in, "but if Mme. Amori is willing to take her regular turn at making up berths, I guess it won't hurt you to help every now and then in the dining room."

Sig. Joseppi did not understand a word of it. He turned to the man at his elbow for enlightenment.

"What did he say?" he whispered.

"He says you have a perfectly marvelous voice and that he'd give $2,000 any time to hear you sing," replied his neighbor in excellent Italian.

Whereupon the signor favored the severe looking Mr. Mott with a beaming smile and as deep a bow as he could make in such close quarters.

"A most courteous officer," he said to his neighbor. "It will be a joy to serve him, my friend. We should, one and all, do what he asks of us, no matter how mean the task. I, Joseppi—you have heard of Joseppi my friend?—I shall be the example for all of you. Should he say, 'Wash the dishes, Joseppi,' then will I wash the dishes, I, Joseppi, who never washed a dish in his life. Should he say, 'Cook the meals, Joseppi,' then will Joseppi, who never cooked a thing in his life, then will Joseppi cook the meals. Should he say, 'Joseppi, scrub the floor,' then will I scrub the floor. Should he say, 'Signor, steer the ship,' then will I do my best to steer the ship, I who have never steered a ship. So! Let me be your example, my friend."

"That's fine," said his neighbor, as they moved off together. "But supposing he asks you to sing occasionally to amuse the rest of us—what then?"

"Amuse?" cried the signor. "Amuse?"

"Well, then, entertain."

The great Joseppi pursed his lips. His brow grew dark with trouble.

"Ah, but that would be violating my contract," he said. "My contract specifically states that under no circumstances may I—" Then suddenly, as if renouncing a sacred principle, his brow cleared, and he cried out: "Damn the contract! Joseppi's voice is his own. Joseppi will do as he pleases with it. Let him but make the request, my friend—and Joseppi will sing till he drops from exhaustion." Lowering his voice to a confidential undertone, he went on: "And that, my friend, is more than you will find Careni-Amori willing to do. There is one cold blooded, grasping woman for you. Money! She thinks of nothing but money. And flattery! Ah, how she thrives on flattery. That woman, my friend, beautiful as she is, has no more heart than a——"

"Excuse me, please," broke in his listener, in English. "I've got to beat it."

He had caught sight of a slim young figure at the head of the stairs—a girl in a rumpled blue serge tailored suit and a tan colored sport hat pulled well down over her dark hair. He made his way through the crowd and caught her up as she passed out on the deck.

"I've been terribly worried about you," he began without other greeting, planting himself in front of her. "I thought maybe you might have—but, thank the good Lord, you weren't."

She looked momentarily bewildered. Then she recognized him and held out her hand. Her face was serious, unsmiling; her voice low and tired.

"Isn't it dreadful, Mr. Percival? What a terrible experience it has been. O!—and I am glad you came through safely, too. But"—as her eyes narrowed anxiously—"you were hurt. Your hands?"

"I can't very well shake hands with you, Miss Clinton," said he. "Scorched a little, that's all. You'd think it was serious, the way they're bandaged. One of the sailors fixed them up for me last night. I can't tell you how glad I am that you are all right. And your aunt? Is she——" He paused.

"Auntie is all right, Mr. Percival. She's in bed. Shock and exposure. We were out there all night. In one of the boats. Katherine"—her voice shook a little—"Katherine is gone. She leaped overboard. I—I saw her go. I shall never forget it, never. Aunt Julia's maid. For O, so many years, Mr. Percival." She spoke in sharp, broken sentences, as if breathless. "You must have been terribly burned. Your hair, your eyes, how bloodshot they are."

"Smoke," he said succinctly. "Singed on this side only. Really nothing serious. I got off very lightly."

"Some of the men were frightfully burned," she said with a shudder. "I am trying to be a nurse. There are two men in my—in my——"

"I know," he broke in hastily. "Don't talk about it, Miss Clinton. It's corking of you to take hold like this. Corking!"

"Tell me about yourself. Where were you when it happened?"

"I hate to admit it, but I was having a bite to eat down in the galley. You see, they'd somehow forgotten to give me anything to eat—in the excitement, of course—and I had been so busy myself it didn't occur to me to be hungry till rather late in the day. I managed to get on deck, but not until after the bombs had all gone off. My friend, Mr. Gray—the chief engineer, you know—was down in the engineroom. That's how I got my hands burned. Not badly, I assure you, but—well, they may be a little scarred. You may not know it, but Mr. Gray and I came from the same place. Baltimore. He belonged to a fine old family there—and he'd been very kind to me. Poor fellow! Penned in. They never had a chance down there. He was—well, he died a few minutes after he was dragged out here on the deck. His clothes were on fire. But let's not talk about it. Tell me, is there anything I can do to make you more comfortable? Or your aunt? I'm what you might call officer of the deck at present. Mr. Mott——"

"You ought to be in bed, Mr. Percival," she interrupted sharply. "You face is burned, too—you must be suffering terribly. Wait! Now, don't tell me you are not. I know better. I've seen those other men who were burned. I——"

"It's nothing, I tell you," he interrupted,

By George Barr McCutcheon

almost roughly. "There are dozens of men worse off than I am, and are they in bed? Not much. This is no time to lie down, Miss Clinton, if you've got a leg to stand on. See that little chap over there with his head and hands covered with bandages and barely able to drag his feet after him? He's an American jockey. I don't know his name. He was blown twenty or thirty feet across the after-deck. Brought up at the bottom of the companionway. He's nothing but cuts and bruises from head to foot. But he's around on his wobbly little pins today, just the same, trying to edge in on some sort of a job. Couldn't keep him in bed."

Miss Clinton's eyes were full of wonder and incredulity. "I cannot understand it," she said. "My brother was with the American Ambulance in France. He says that the slightest flesh wound sends a soldier to the hospital."

"They haven't any choice in the matter. Besides, it isn't the same. Poor devils, they may have been at it in the trenches for weeks and months. A wound of any sort means a pleasant vacation. Still," he went on after a moment, a faint, derisive smile on his lips, "we had a big husky up in camp who insisted on going to bed every time he had the nosebleed."

She was looking into his bloodshot eyes, infinite pity and concern in her own.

"Will you let me dress your hands, Mr. Percival, whenever it is necessary? I am getting used to it now."

"It's good of you, Miss Clinton," he replied gratefully. "But I think you'd better stick to the fellows who really need attention. Don't add an extra ounce to your burden. You'll need all of your strength and courage to face the demands of the next few days. Those chaps have just begun to suffer. They're going to have a tight squeeze getting through, if they get through at all. You have not answered my question. Is there anything I can do for you or your aunt?"

"No, not a thing," she said. "We are quite all right. As Mr. Mott said, we are all in the same boat, Mr. Percival. We've got to make up our minds to that. We can't have the comforts and the luxuries we had day before yesterday. Whatever is left of them we must share with others."

"Even with stowaways," he ventured, but not fatuously.

"No one is likely to forget how our only stowaway came by his wounds," she said simply. "Despite your modesty, I am quite certain who it was that carried the chief engineer on deck, Mr. Percival. While his clothes were burning, too."

Percival turned his face away and many seconds passed before he spoke.

"By the way," he said at last, a trifle unsteadily, "at regular intervals the gun up there in the bow is to be fired. You must not be alarmed when it goes off. There is a chance that some ship may hear the report. The British have a few warships down here, you know. They would investigate if they got word of big guns being fired anywhere in these parts. Mr. Mott will give warning when the gun is to be fired, so that every one will understand. I—I just thought I'd tell you."

"Thank you. Good-by for the present. I must get back to my wounded."

"Keep your spirits up," he said. "That's the principal job now, Miss Clinton. Good-by, and thank you."

He watched her as she moved off down the deck. He could not help noticing that her figure drooped perceptibly. In his mind's eye he saw her as she was but two days before—straight, graceful, full of the joy of living, with a stride that was free and swinging. He recalled her lovely, inquiring gray eyes as she stared at him on that ignominious afternoon, the parted red lips and the smile that came to them, the smartly dressed hair, the jaunty hat, the trim sport suit of tan colored jersey—he recalled the alluring picture she made that day, and sadly shook his head.

"Poor girl," he said to himself, and walked slowly in the opposite direction, favoring his left leg.

He went down to see the captain. The old sea dog was stretched out in his berth, a look of pain and utter despair in his eyes. One of the Russian dancers, a rather pretty girl of a distinctly Slavic type, was cleaning up the room. The ship's doctor had just left.

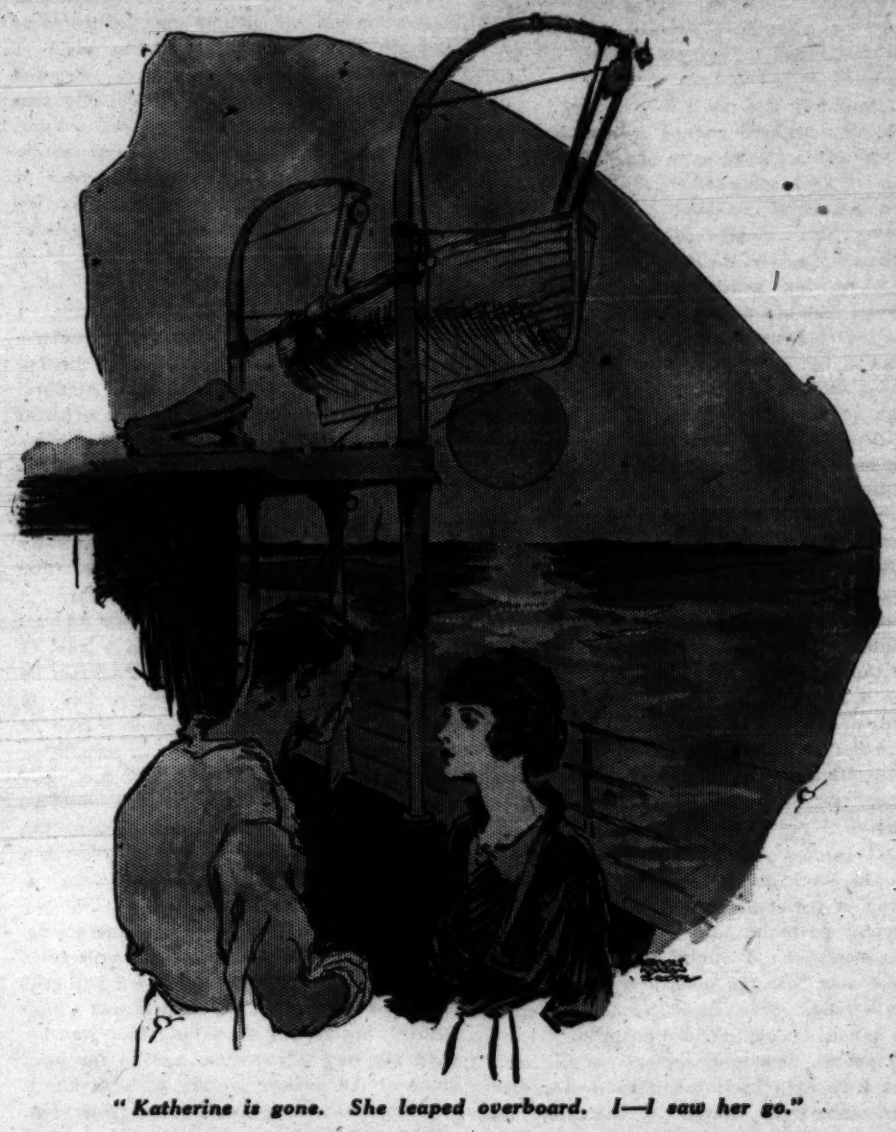
"Feeling a bit more comfortable, sir?" inquired the young man.

"I wish you'd get this girl out of here," growled Capt. Trigger with difficulty. "I want to swear."

"I think it would be all right to go ahead with it, sir," said Percival. "She doesn't understand a word of English."

The captain shook his head. "I'll let it wait." Then, looking at his visitor's bandaged hands: "How are your hands, my lad?"

"Fairly easy. The doctor says the burns are not deep. Mr. Mott asked me to step in and see you, sir, and give you my opinion as to the bombs. You see, I've had a great deal of experience with high explosives. There isn't the slightest doubt in my mind that you found and got rid of the worst of them. The officer in charge of the gun crew agrees with me. They planted the big ones, the ones that were to destroy the ship, down in the hold, where there was less chance of discovery. The others, I am convinced, were much smaller. It would have been impossible to hide a bomb of any noticeable size in any of the places where the explosions occurred. They went about it very cunningly, very systematically. Of course, no one saw the bombs that exploded, but, judging by the actual results, they could not have been very powerful."



"Katherine is gone. She leaped overboard. I—I saw her go."

"And I also," said the captain, "thank God we dug out the big ones." He scowled forlornly. "Dr. Cullen says I am in for a week of this, Percival. You don't think so, do you?"

Percival smiled. "I am more or less of an expert on explosives, sir," he replied.

"Umph," grunted Capt. Trigger. "I see. Just the same, I think I'll be up and about by tomorrow. If I were your age, young man, you can bet I wouldn't be lying here in this bed."

"On the other hand, if I were your age, Capt. Trigger," said Percival, "I'd probably have sense enough to do exactly what the doctor ordered."

Capt. Trigger's mouth fell open.

"Well, of all the damned——" he began, and then swallowed hard.

. . . . . .

For three days and nights the Doraine drifted lazily in a calm and rippling sea, always to the southward. The days were bright and warm, the nights black and chill. It was the spring of the year in that zone. Without adequate navigation instruments, Mr. Mott was forced to rely to a great extent on speculation. He was able to make certain calculations with reasonable accuracy, but they were of little real significance. It was, of course, possible to determine the general direction in which they were drifting, and the speed. They were slowly but surely edging into the strong west wind drift. The Falkland islands would soon be off to the right, with South Georgia and the Sandwich group farther to the south and east, the southernmost tip of Africa to the left.

Not a sail had been sighted, not a sign of smoke appeared on the spotless horizon. At regular intervals the gun on the forward deck boomed thrice in quick succession, startling the lifeless hulk into a sort of spasmodic vitality. Then she would sink back once more into the old, irksome lethargy, incapable of resisting the gentlest wave, submissive to the whim of the slightest breeze.

The ship's carpenter and his men were making slow headway in the well nigh impossible task of repairing the rudder. Attempts were being made to rig up makeshift sails to replace those licked from the supplemental spars by flames that had earned considerable progress along the roof of the upper deck building before they were subdued. Blackened, charred masts and yards, stripped of rigging, reared themselves like pines at the edge of a fire swept forest. Sailmakers and riggers labored stubbornly, but the work was slow and the means of restoration limited.

The occupants of the derelict had settled down to a dull, almost dogged state of resignation. There were several deaths and burials, incidents that made but little impression on the waiting, watchful survivors. Each succeeding day brought forth additional watchers to swell the anxious throng—resolute and sometimes ungovernable men who, defying their wounds and the nurses, refused to stay where they could not have a hand in all that was going on.

Back of all this pitiful courage, however, lurked the unholy fear that they might be left to their fate in case the ship had to be hurriedly abandoned.

Mr. Mott watched the weather. Every seaman on board the Doraine scanned the cloudless sky with searching, anxious eyes. They sniffed the steady wind that blew them farther south. Always they scanned the sky and sniffed the wind.

"It's got to come some time," repeated Capt. Trigger after each report from Mr. Mott.

"I've known weather like this to last for weeks," said the first officer.

"In the south Pacific, yes," said the captain grimly. "But we're in the south Atlantic, Mott."

On the sixth day the barometer began to fall. The breeze stiffened. The sea became choppy, and whitecaps danced fitfully over the greenish stretches, growing wilder and wilder under the whip of a flouting wind. The two patchwork sails on the lumbering Doraine flapped noisily for a while, as if shaking off their torpor, then suddenly grew taut and fat with prosperity. The twisted, half jammed rudder, far from worthy, despite the efforts of its repairers, whiningly obeyed the man at the wheel, and once more the ship felt the carcass of the deep on its cleaving bows.

The horizon to the north and west seemed to draw nearer, the contrast between the deepening blue of the water and the clear azure of the contracting dome more sharply defined. The sky that had been cloudless for days still remained barren, but the sailor knew what lay beyond the clear cut rim of the world. The man of the sea could look far beyond the horizon. He could see the ugly clouds that were even now speeding down from the north, invisible as yet, but soon to creep into view; he could see the mighty billows on the other side of that distant line; he could hear the roar and shriek of the tempest that was still hundreds of miles away. It was the matter of but a few hours before the wind and the billows would rush up to smite the Doraine with all their might under the cover of a black and storm rent sky. And what was to become of the vessel, floundering in the path of the hurricane?

Late afternoon brought the forerunner of the gale, a whistling, howling squall that frantically strove, it would seem, to outrace the baleful clouds. Then the Doraine was in the thick of the furious revel of sea and sky, plunging, leaping, rolling like a monstrous cork.

How she managed to weather the storm, God knows, and He alone. At the mercy of wave and wind, she was tossed and hammered and racked for two frightful days and nights, and yet she remained afloat, battered, smashed, raked from stem to stern, stripped of everything the tempest could wrench from her in its fury. And yet on the third day, when the storm abated, the sturdy ship was still riding the waves, flayed but unconquered, and the baffled sea was licking the sides of her once more with servile though deceitful tenderness.

But there was water in the hold. The ship was leaking badly.

Up from the stifling interior straggled the unhappy inmates. They looked again upon the unbelievable—a smiling dancing sea of blue under a canopy clean and spotless. It was unbelievable. Even the stout hearted captain and the faithful mate, blear eyed and haggard from loss of sleep, were filled with wonder.

"I can't understand it," muttered Mr. Mott a dozen times that day, shaking his head in a bewildered sort of way. "I can't understand how she did it. By right, she ought to be at the bottom of the ocean, and here she is on top of it, same as ever."

"Do you believe in God, Mr. Mott?" asked the captain solemnly.

"I do," said Mr. Mott emphatically. After a moment he added: "I've been a long time coming to it, Capt. Trigger, but I do. Nothing short of an almighty being could have steered this ship for the past two days."

The captain nodded his head slowly, his gaze fixed on something above and far beyond the horizon.

"I suppose it's too much to ask of him, though," said he, audibly completing a thought.

Mr. Mott evidently had been thinking of the same thing, for he said: "I'm sorry to say it's gained about two feet on the pumps since last night."

Capt. Trigger's face was very grave. "That means a couple of days more at the outside." His eyes rested speculatively on the three lifeboats still hanging above the starboard rail. There was another being repaired on the port side. "More than 700 of us on board, Andrew." His head drooped suddenly, his chin twitched. Mr. Mott looked away.

"I don't believe it will come to that," said he, an odd note of confidence in his voice. "'Tain't likely, old friend, that God would see us safely through all we've had to tackle and then desert us in the end. Something's bound to turn up. I've a feeling—a queer feeling—that we're going to pull out of this all right. I know it looks mighty hopeless, but——"

"Just the same, Mr. Mott," broke in the captain, lifting his head and setting his jaw, "you'd better set all available hands to work on the rafts immediately. It's true God has helped us through a lot, but it strikes me we'd better be on the safe side and help God a little at this stage of the game. He is wonderful, Andrew, but He isn't wonderful enough to keep man afloat very long unless man himself builds the raft. So don't lose a minute."

ETHEL CLAYTON
"I like WATKINS MULSIFIED COCOANUT OIL SHAMPOO because it leaves my hair so soft and lustrous and easy to manage."

PROPER SHAMPOOING is what makes beautiful hair. It brings out all the real life, lustre, natural wave and color, and makes it soft, fresh and luxuriant.

Your hair simply needs frequent and regular washing to keep it beautiful, but it cannot stand the harsh effect of ordinary soap. The free alkali in ordinary soaps, soon dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it. This is why leading motion picture stars, theatrical people and discriminating women use

WATKINS MULSIFIED COCOANUT OIL SHAMPOO

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

This clear, pure and entirely greaseless product cannot possibly injure, and does not dry the scalp or make the hair brittle, no matter how often you use it. Two or three teasponfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil.

The hair dries quickly and evenly, and has the appearance of being much thicker and heavier than it is. It leaves the scalp soft and the hair fine and silky, bright, fresh-looking and fluffy, wavy and easy to do up.

You can get MULSIFIED COCOANUT OIL SHAMPOO at any drug store. A 4-ounce bottle should last for months.

ANNA Q. NILLSON is here shown watching the famous yacht race, which was won by the American defender Resolute.

Noting the eager light in her eye you suppose, of course, that she is pulling for the Resolute. As a matter of fact, this picture was taken on board Sir Thomas Lipton's private yacht Victoria, which suggests that there may be two tails to our cat. Mae Tinee.

VERA GORDON is the mother in "Humoresque." Miss Gordon is a Russian, born and educated in Russia. She was on the stage for a number of years in stock and vaudeville. She last appeared with Emily Stevens in "The Gentile Wife." Her first picture was a Universal production called "Sorrows of Israel." "Humoresque," as I understand it, is only her second venture.

She is 5 feet 5½ inches tall, and weighs 165 pounds. She has black hair and eyes—you'd never guess it from this picture, would you? Mae Tinee.

Why War Wounds Healed So Rapidly

New antiseptic healing agent invented in France. Wonderful for cuts, burns, boils, etc. Promptly relieves tender, bleeding gums. Stops dandruff overnight.

A wonderful new healing agent was produced on the battlefields of France, by American scientists. It healed wounds often in one-fourth the usual time, and conquered infection where all old, standard antiseptics had failed. Over 50,000 physicians and dentists now use it.

This same wonder-working antiseptic may now be had in the form of Kloria tablets. It is ready for instant use by dissolving a few tablets in water, and is therefore very inexpensive.

Kloria doesn't smart, is soothing, and absolutely safe. Yet Kloria destroys germs instantly on contact and is over 100 times more effective than peroxide. That is why it heals so rapidly.

In tender, bleeding, shrinking gums, Kloria attacks the germ cause, with amazing results. All gum soreness and bleeding usually disappear in one week. It also makes the most effective mouth-wash for preventing tooth-decay, gum infections, tonsillitis, and contagious diseases.

Kloria takes the place of all old-time healing salves and antiseptics. Cuts, sores, boils and burns often heal in one-fourth the usual time. One application usually stops dandruff, scalp itching—or itching anywhere. Red, inflamed skin, eruptions, eczema, poison ivy, etc., promptly fade away. Kloria also destroys all offensive body odors instantly. Wonderful for foot troubles.

At druggists, or by mail, 50c.

Free Trial: Write for free sample. Learn how quickly and easily Kloria heals. Mark how it stops itching, soreness or pus infections. The results will be a revelation.

Ten years without a corn

Countless people boast that record now.

Years ago they started using Blue-jay. Never since has a corn pained twice. And never has a corn stayed a week.

You can quickly prove that corns are needless. Millions have already done it.

Think what it means.

No more paring, no more pain, no more unsightly pads. Dainty shoes without unhappy hours.

Apply a touch of liquid Blue jay or a Blue-jay plaster.

The corn pain will end. And soon the whole corn will loosen and come out.

The action is gentle but sure. Blue-jay is the scientific method, created by this world-famed laboratory.

It is not like the methods which are harsh and crude.

Try Blue-jay on one corn. Buy it tonight from your druggist. Live the rest of your life without corns.

When lovely hair gives a girl self-confidence

Thin, stringy, oily hair and a dandruff-choked scalp make a girl painfully self-conscious when she knows some one is looking at her hair.

But if she knows her hair is thick — soft — silky—the way nature intended a woman's hair to be—

If her scalp is clean and soft and sweet as a baby's—

The knowledge gives her poise and self-confidence, that adds much to her charm.

Frequent shampooing with the creamy, deliciously perfumed lather of Wildroot Liquid Shampoo is the one sure way to have pretty hair.

Buy Winter Furs Now and Enjoy a Saving

DUE TO the alertness of the House of Bishop, a magnificent saving may be made by taking advantage of their Annual August Sale.

It is no secret that fur prices are high, and will be higher later this season. But at Bishop's the rise is scarcely noticeable. Last December, foreseeing that the chaotic market would force a sharp advance, they purchased their stocks. Fortunately it was the lowest point in the market, when skin prices were much less than they are today.

Therefore, the savings represented in this sale are most attractive, the full value of which cannot be appreciated except by critical comparison. The few garments illustrated can do only slight justice to the beauty and economy characterizing Bishop's voluminous stocks.

The reliable label of Bishop is the guarantee of correct style—finest materials, and skillful workmanship.

Heed the suggestion and make early selection.

No. 4560—Natural Stone Marten Choker Scarf. A new autumn effect, made from two skins. To be worn with suits and dresses. Price, $120.

No. 36710—A silk lined Brown Marten Scarf, trimmed with tails and paws. A beautiful neckpiece, durable and satisfactory. Price, $90.

No. 36926—A new Parisian Mole Wrap of exquisite grade. A wonderful model, wonderfully lined. Price, $625.

No. 36690—An exquisite Kolinsky Cape of excellent fur and desirable mode. Extremely serviceable and durable. Beautifully lined. Price, $850.

No. 37104—Hudson Seal box coat, belted, and trimmed with Brown Marten (Skunk) collar and cuffs; 45 inches long. Lined with Pussy Willow silk. Price, $575.

No. 37053—An exquisite wrap of dark, Northern Mink. This rare fur is considered a genuine investment. It is handsomely lined, and priced reasonably at $2,000.

Purchases made during the August Sale will be stored Free for future delivery. A deposit will reserve your selection.

Beautify Your Hair with

"DANDERINE"

35c a bottle! Freshen your scalp! Stop falling hair! Remove dandruff! Have lots of wavy, glossy, beautiful hair! You can!

IF YOU care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair; besides, it eradicates every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its luster, its strength, and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp, the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy, or too oily, get a bottle of Knowlton's Danderine, apply a little as directed, and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually, why not now?

"THAT WELL-DRESSED LOOK"

A Wooltex wrap developed in Peachbloom and Beaver

HALF the joy of having a new coat is in wearing it on those first brisk, cold days when the less foresighted are wearing chilly summer things.

And this is exactly the time to select our heavy coats in a leisurely manner. It's about the only time during the season when one is certain of combining her favorite style, fabric and color in her particular size. Later on the choice will be more limited and some of the fabrics will have vanished completely.

It's such a comfort to know, too, that no matter how early in the season you buy it, there is a way of assuring yourself that your coat is not a faddish model but a lasting one. That "way" is to look in the collar for the signature of the Wooltex Tailors. No style is approved by the Wooltex Tailor-made Style Studios until it is assured of a long run—not a single season's popularity, but smart for many seasons to come.

The fabrics and tailoring, too, are of the kind to give you a permanent "Well-Dressed Look"! From the simplest sports coat or suit to the luxurious fur-trimmed wrap, each Wooltex Tailor-made has all of the little touches which distinguish the custom made article from the ordinary "readymade."

In choosing your Wooltex Tailor-made, be sure to ask the salesperson for the fashion magazine "The Tailored Woman" — or, if you prefer, write us and we will mail it to you without charge.

Wooltex
Tailor-mades

Remember, no matter how much it "looks like" a Wooltex Tailor-made, it just can't be without that Wooltex signature shown above.

Wooltex Tailor-mades are priced at $45, $55, $65, $75 up to $125.

EVENING FROCKS FOR THE YOUNGER SET

By Corinne Lowe

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—"Why come you dressed as the village maid?" asked Tennyson's Lord Ronald of his cousin, Lady Clare. Times have certainly changed since those in which this Victorian ballad was written. Nowadays Lord Ronald would have colic of the monocle if his lady love did not dress as the village maid.

In nothing else is the present passion for simplicity more evident than in the dance frock. At the ordinary informal dance of the smart resorts debutantes are appearing in guileless little things of dotted swiss, and organdy, and chiffon. Even the young matrons have taken up the creed of a mere pin tuck as a background of just nothing at all. And the most formal affair draws out frocks that are, after all, more recreations than creations.

As to the restaurant dress, nothing could be plainer. The other night, looking over to the table where a fashionable Newport crowd, spending a night in town, was breaking the monotony of seaside life, I saw a certain widely exploited member of the younger set wearing a tulle frock with the simplest sort of little bodice.

"There's the kind of dress that they always wear at a time like this," whispered the fashioneer with me. "Lace or tulle with neck cut in the shyest, demurest way, and a skirt that you can't remember. In fact, when you can't for the life of you recall how a dress was made you know it's smart."

It was really one of the most acute bits of clothes philosophy I have heard—that!

We are showing above a group of dance frocks for the younger girl or matron. They are intended primarily for resort wearing during these remaining weeks of summer, but all of them are bound to have interest for the girl who is looking ahead to her college wardrobe. In such a wardrobe the simple little dance frock is a recognized necessity.

Two of the colors emphasized in recent French imports and given added authority by fashionable American acceptance are pearl gray and flesh tint. Both of these are lovely for the young girl, though it must be admitted that the former sanctions the golden haired Rowena more than it does the dark tressed Rebecca. Nothing, indeed, is more charming on the girl of delicate blonde tints than this very same pearl gray.

Silver lace, or net, or ribbon is used very effectively in combination with both of these shades. For instance, a Parisian frock of pearl gray satin which I saw the othe day had a sash of silver lace mingled with the folds of the gray tulle draping. Another gray frock—this a chiffon—became the cornerstone of a delightful color symphony through the addition of a Nile green sash bordered with silver.

Both gray and flesh are, in fact, as friendly as the famous old dog Tray. They make up with so many different colors and forms of elaboration! Take flesh tint, in particular. This is just as successful with colors as is the neutral tinted wall paper which the kindly home magazines insist that we must have.

With the Parisian designers jet is a favorite embellishment upon the flesh tinted dress, and one charming creation from overseas has a huge sunburst design of jet shading into crystal to almost cover its dawnlike surface. Black was again sounded in the big sash of tulle draping both sides of a girdle of jet cabochons. This combination of black and flesh is charming for the older woman, and is permissible for the young girl. Still, we who like to think of youth as something that should be attired by the fairies will turn from that to the other favored alliance of flesh and silver.

How perfectly exquisite are these touches of silver on frocks that look like Aurora's very first chore of the morning! Embodying this thought was the flesh colored net which I saw the other day that was trimmed with appliqued flowers of silver cloth centered by rhinestones and sashed in the same metallic cloth.

The sash, by the way, is the hero of the summer dress. Not only does it bestow just the right touch of drapery, but it affords all sorts of avenues for color combination—also that of materials. Be ye matron or maid, indeed, ye cannot do better by your summer dress than to give it a big sash of tulle or ribbon.

As for lace, no senorita of Madrid could give this item more consideration. The Paris races held last month confirmed, too, the fact that we are still caught in the lacy web. Combinations of black and white were frequent, and at the fashionable resorts of this country we find the same preference for this ever stunning combination.

What could be loveller, indeed, than the white satin frock draped in black Chantilly? And for those of us who have any of this precious weave stored away in bureau or chest, what possibilities of economy along the most pleasant lines?

Even newer than the black lace, however, is the ecru lace with which Jenny and some of the other big Paris dressmakers scored their big successes at the races. In their wholehearted adoption of this new lace tint some of the Parisiennes even went so far as to use ecru powder for bare throat and arms.

For the young girl darned net is preferable to lace, however, and at the left of this page we are showing a delightful dance frock featuring this weave. The color of the net is pink, and it is draped over a satin slip of the same tint. The rose of mauve and silver gives the one accent of color. Please observe the charm of the simple little bodice and of the diagonal flounces.

CERTAINLY a rose of any other shade would not look so sweet as this of mauve and silver, for it is the one deft touch of color on the charming dance frock of pink satin and darned net at the left. Next, a pearl gray voile poised over a rose satin slip achieves character through silver ribbons and the silver beading upon the appliqued voile roses. Flesh tinted taffeta glace and swiss of deeper tint are combined in the next model, and last comes white voile beaded in jade green and illustrating in its two toned girdle ribbon—silver faded with jade green velvet—one of the fancies of the moment.*

At the extreme right two summary wraps made of three thicknesses of tulle.

The frock right next points to the popularity of pearl gray. For that is the shade of the voile poised here over rose underslip. The ribbons are of silver, and the appliqued voile roses illustrate in their silver beading what I have already said about the favor enjoyed by a touch of silver on these gray frocks.

Next comes the flesh tinted dress already mentioned. This is made of taffeta glace over which is draped a swiss of deeper tint—almost a rose. As for the sash, enter the conquering hero in those draperies of the taffeta which say to the slim, "Come hither," and to the stout, "Beware of me."

The last is a white voile with beading of jade and with silver ribbon ties faced with jade velvet. By the way, sash or ribbon girdle often show these two toned effects, and certainly nothing could introduce color in more effective form.

For the older woman the black frock is continuously good, and for all occasions of the day. Among the forms of ornamentation favored for these black frocks are circles of color introduced through the various agencies of beading, embroidery, and applique.

One of the most stunning frocks in a recent importation of evening models showed, for example, a foundation of black chiffon over which were scattered these circles in jade and cherry tones. They were made here of bands of chiffon sewed on by hand all over the bodice and skirt and even on the loops of the wide sash.

Many of the summer skirts—particularly those worn in the evenings and by young girls—are eleven inches above the ground. The harem skirt is still fashionable for evening, notably so in the flowered chiffons now so popular.

These chiffons are generally made with the long waist line, and their individuality is achieved by sashes of soft silks in brilliant tints. Garlands of flowers intertwined with glossy green leaves are another method of making these filmy frocks distinctive.

THE NEW MODE IN Frocks.

OUR new Fall Frocks have surely captured their share of the "spirit of Autumn" and offer it to you in enchanting forms of billowy, harem, and panel effect skirts, long, loose blouses, variable sleeve lengths, sashes and—Autumn's trade mark—dashing bits of color on somber backgrounds effectively brought out by beads or embroidery.

They have chosen soft, graceful Crepe Meteor, Crepe Satin, Morocco Crepe, Crepe de Chine and Canton Crepe for their materials, and black, navy, couture brown and taupe as fitting colors.

The Autumn Millinery

"AUTUMN'S crowning glory" can be readily applied to the elaboration of trimming and gorgeousness of color allotted to the theme of our Autumn Millinery.

Paradise, Pheasant and Elk Browns, Flag Blues and Dove Grays are offered in Satin Antique, Duvetyn and Velvet, richly embroidered in Paisley colors. Some hats are even bejeweled and embroidered in crusty gold.

And then there is the daring little Russian Toque which will be particularly becoming to the miss with bobbed hair.

Millinery Shop—Fifth Floor.

The New Sweaters

SO suggestive of Autumn is their color and texture that our new Sweaters seem but a part of a Fall landscape. Wool, mohair or alpaca in shades of chamois, nut, brown or rust will easily find first place in the favorite Fall Sweaters.

We also have a special showing of pure thread silk Tuxedo Sweaters.

ART PRINCIPLES APPLIED to DRESS

by Antoinette Donnelly

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

APPLYING the principles of line, color, and form, that are taught the art student is advocated for the woman who wants to look well dressed.

From the Art institute in Chicago missionaries are being sent out under the direction of Ross Crane to present these principles in lectures to the home dressmaker and the professional.

Miss Evelyn Hansen, one of these art dress missionaries, says:

"Every woman strives unconsciously or consciously to be well dressed, but it is the great pity that the average American woman believes that attracting attention is a test of a well dressed woman. This, more than anything else, accounts for the awful creations that frequent the streets of our villages and cities.

Study Your Type.

"To be well dressed does not necessarily mean the exenditure of a great deal of money, for all expensive materials are not beautiful in color or design. It is interesting to note the advanced price of any material in vogue for a certain season. To be tastefully and smartly gowned requires that each woman make a study of her particular self.

"No two women are alike, and still if you go into the average restaurant or café and see scores of women with the same hairdress, the same hat, the same string of pearls to denote her wealth, the same gown, it is difficult indeed to distinguish one woman from another.

"This idea of all women being dressed in one style is enough to make one person tire of a garment in one season. Designers and manufacturers realize this, and as long as women are content to dress alike, whether they are stout or slender, manufacturers will be content to manufacture one style for each season.

How to Know Your Type?

"How can you recognize your type? How can you create a type for yourself? This depends upon several things, whether you are stout or slender, color of your eyes, color of your hair, and one fact very few women realize—the color of your skin.

"Very few women will admit that they are stout if they, in any possible way, can convince themselves that they are slender, and vice versa. Very few women are perfect 36s, but it is something worth noticing to find that the person with a waist line that can be measured by the yard in place of by the inch usually is blessed with a head of lovely hair and with skin of faultless perfection, while the person who is a perfect happy medium may have feet or ankles of such caliber that they would do well to detract rather than attract attention to same.

Color and Color Schemes.

"What does one mean by color of skin? There are people with skin resembling the Indian ruddiness, with an undercurrent of scarlet red forging now and then to the surface. These people need the sympathy of the rest of the fairer sex. Then we have those who throughout the whole year carry a coat of tan, and there are a few more fortunate sisters who have a skin of ivory white with just enough color in their cheeks. Each of these three groups requires a certain color scheme of dress.

"The first, warmer colors—the tans, the browns, rich yet grayed, with now and then brilliant touches of color of bolgarian hues. Let them avoid the purple and red, violets, pinks, and tones of blue.

"Now we have the second class, who think that by wearing a collar or a gown of pure white their skins will lose some of the tan, when in reality all that is gained is a more marked contrast. As far as the use of brilliant colors in small areas is concerned, these people have a larger range of choice than the first group. They may care to bring out the color of the eye, color of the hair, or a note of black as an accidental.

"The third class has no difficulty as far as color is concerned, but the value of the material in the garment of their choice depends upon whether they are slender or stout.

Frenchman's Opinion.

"Mr. Worth, the founder of the house of Worth in Paris, gives the following illustration of the above statement:

"'To put the matter in different words, the beautiful girl whose hair is the color of ripe corn and whose complexion rivals the lily and the rose, may have a waist circumference that is altogether clumsy and gauche. Now, is such a one to choose colors that will throw up the honeyed radiance of her hair and establish the already evident excellence of her fair skin?

"'By no means. She must be governed in her choice of materials, dyes, patterns, trimmings, and even the design in which her frock is to be fashioned, entirely by that thick waist of hers.

"'First of all, however, her money must be cheerfully expended upon good corsets; and she must use her best and most persistent endeavors to induce all the symmetry of figure she can achieve by the use of fencing foils (a splendid aid to elegance, suppleness, and firmness of the figure, especially in middle life), and by other means of acquiring grace open to her in the gymnasium, and, if possible, on horseback.

"'Moreover, she must wear black in preference to color, and have her waist belts carefully modeled with a point back and front to give her figure length.'

Study Good Paintings.

"If women would make a study of paintings and gain color schemes for their garments from these, they would soon learn the meaning of unity in color and composition. The 'Home of the Heron,' by George Innes, is a wonderful illustration of composition in warm color, while "The Lake," by Corot, is equally fine as an illustration of cool coloring.

"Very few styles are suitable for people of all types; what you can wear as far as lines are concerned is governed entirely by the width of your shoulders, the shape of your face, the thick of your waist; not by the fact that Mrs. Brown, or Mrs. Smith or Mrs. Jones can successfully wear a certain gown.

"V-necks, narrow belts (never at the waist line), absence of tucks and ruffles and long lines must be the slogan of every plump woman, while her slender sister may wear round and square necks, ruffles of various widths, tucks, and wide soft girdles to conceal her slenderness.

"A woman may wear a dress of correct color for her type and it may have lines to conceal her defects, but it may be of a material that counteracts all good points. May it be suggested that stout women avoid figured materials, such as the voiles and foulards filling our stores at the present season, materials of heavy nap, such as velours and fur, materials with a sheen, such as satins and pan velvets, thin materials, such as chiffons, soft cotton materials, except for gowns strictly for use in the home; and materials of light value, such as pale pinks, delicate blues, light grays, and white.

Dare to Be Different.

"Study your type. Are you thick or are you thin? Is your skin sallow, ruddy, or clear?

"Dare to be different, and in so doing create your own type. Each woman correctly gowned is a beautiful picture. Wear rich grayed colors; avoid large areas of brilliant color; study nature, and you will soon see that large spaces are dull colors and small spaces are bright colors; a mass of grayed green for the grass, with here and there a brilliant color; a sand beach with here and there a stone of brilliant hue; the dark violet blue of the evening sky with here and there a star of crystal-like brilliance.

"To be well dressed is to be a study in harmonious tones, not a riot of color, a composition of rhythmic lines, not a patch quilt of different values. Better to be unnoticed in the passing throng than to cause passerbys to turn and look. To be well dressed is not to attract attention."

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, pimples, pumples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply send a stamped addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, the Chicago Sunday Tribune.

Your Foot Is a Three-Legged Stool

Your weight rests on three points of support, the heel, the ball of the big toe, and of the small toe. If your posture is correct the weight is evenly distributed over these three points, and the arch is not strained.

Cantilever Shoes are conducive to correct posture. The broad heel and the natural inner sole line keep the toes in their normal straight-ahead position. With the foot in this position the arch is not strained by abnormal balance. Cantilever Shoes strengthen the arch by allowing the muscles to exercise. The shank fits closely about the instep, supporting the arch, but it is a flexible shank which gives the muscles free play. They grow stronger the more you walk.

Cantilever Shoes are good looking, on trim lines, of fine materials. Widths from AAAA to EE. Write for Booklet.

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

By Jane Eddington.

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

COOKING LESSON I.

OF LATE a number of people have applied to me for help to begin to cook. That is, they want, seemingly, not to learn but to go at cooking by main force, as it were. The only way to do that sort of cooking is to watch some one cook, and then imitate them. That is how the art of cooking has been in large measure handed down to us, passed from mother to daughter, and to her daughter, and then to daughter's daughters.

There is a great deal of fine and useful food work being done by pure imitation. Knowledge and even skill in cold pack canning has been handed on to thousands and tens of thousands by this method. A true teacher demonstrator goes through this work so clearly, every step, that girls only 10 years old can imitate that teacher to perfection.

Young girls have been even more successful in this work than older women, because they have nothing to unlearn. So important a part of home thrift is canning that some of the later domestic economy textbooks for the schools take it up first. It is practical, but not highly reasonable.

Each Textbook Different.

A great number of textbooks on cooking have been written, but no two teachers present the subject in the same way. There is no agreement as to what the young student should learn first. A few years back the girls in high schools learned first to cook cereals and to make a white sauce. One or two textbooks and teaching outlines followed this plan.

The first recipes given by Mrs. Lincoln, who was one of the earliest of domestic science teachers in America, in her textbook are for baked potatoes, baked apples, etc. To learn to do these and to cook a cereal, to thicken milk with flour for a white sauce, and with egg for a custard, to learn to make toast and tea and coffee, are to my mind first steps. How to cook sugar in a candy, because of its allurement and interest arousing power, may come almost at first.

In learning to bake a potato a little should be learned as to how an oven behaves, besides learning to do that one thing. In learning to boil water and milk a little is learned about the behavior of fire under a liquid, and a full knowledge of this subject has infinite applications.

It is all right at first to learn to do a given thing just so, with no connection with anything else in the world, but the cook who continues along that line will not get far, and there are too many of that sort.

In learning to cook a cereal something ought to be learned about combining of ingredients, for here are the two main ingredients of hundreds of recipes—a wet and a dry, a starchy product and water, a product that, when wet, will swell with heat and take up moisture, which, however, may be dried out again, with too much fire. In cooking it correctly the idea is to get as much moisture in as it will take up, which softens and, in fact, partly digests the cereal.

Certain First Principles.

If you take a first lesson in a language, with a good teacher, the first thing you must do, willy-nilly, is to learn to pronounce the vowels correctly. If you refuse, you may still get a smattering of the language, or if you are where you can imitate one who speaks it, you may imitate that one, and learn inaccurately what you might with a little will power learn well. There are but five vowels, but they are fairly typical of the barred door to many an accomplishment. People find it a terrible bore to learn to pronounce them correctly, and they will not.

To learn to cook there are certain principles to learn, and once learned they save infinite time and trouble, yet thousands cook by imitation, or in some poor accidental way, without learning them. And cooking is not merely taking something at hand and preparing it for the fire. To learn to cook you must learn to buy and to prepare and to serve food. There are certain sorts of food stores which exist today because women have to prepare food in some way or another, and serve it to their families.

Now it is not easy to tell anybody how to go about learning to cook. It is terribly difficult, if you know nothing about how much will power and mind and willingness to work they have. You ought also to know how much they have to unlearn.

How to Boil Water.

First, I think, I should teach a pupil who was an absolute beginner how to boil water. "Unless the teakettle boiling be, filling the teapot spoils the tea." It also spoils the coffee. The water must be kept boiling if what is called drip coffee is made, that is, the best coffee. A girl may be told how to make this coffee, and yet what she gets may be but slightly colored water, hardly coffee at all. The first water she poured over the pulverized coffee was boiling, but after that it had cooled.

The serving of tea is so much a part of sociability today that every woman should learn how to make a cup of tea—learn the best pot to buy, the kind of tea to buy, and how to boil water afresh. Water is not boiling until its whole surface is disturbed, or the water gallops.

Only a few people know how to make good toast. Good toast has flavor, a fine and tempting flavor, of which one never wearies. If you can make good toast and coffee you can "make" a breakfast of about the best sort for almost anybody.

If you can make good toast you may be able to rescue some one almost perishing of a summer trouble, who needs nothing so much as a renewal of energy through food, and a mild food that can be taken. I have known whole communities who could not make toast, and in which their sick suffered prolonged agonies largely for that reason.

If you can make good toast you are partly able to prepare some of the most celebrated of dishes, like Welsh rarebit, and some of the best and most popular sandwiches.

How to Make Toast.

A fine grained bread, which can be cut in slices not more than a half inch thick, makes the best toast. It will be lighter if the bread is warmed through thoroughly before it begins to brown. Heat it on one side and turn before browning it. This partly dries the bread, as you will notice by the way the first heated surface contracts and the outside rounds out.

Bread contains from 30 to 40 per cent of water, and for invalids this is all dried out, when bread is toasted. For others it should be dried just right, and that is a hard saying, for one has to learn by experience what is the right sort of a fire for making the most palatable, the best flavored toast.

Singed bread is not good—the fire was too hot. The drying out must not be done too slowly or the toast will be like bread or a cake cooked with too slow a fire. The best and most palatable brown surface is got when the bread is thoroughly hot but neither too moist nor too dry.

Do not press down on toast in buttering it, unless it is totally dried out, when it makes no difference. Have the butter a little soft, and butter while hot. Toast weltering in butter is unwholesome. Do not pile one hot buttered slice on another. They sweat.

How to Make Tea.

An unglazed earthenware pot is probably best. Fill it with hot water and let it stand while fresh water is boiled for the tea. Allow for the pot one teaspoon of tea, and one teaspoon for each cup made besides. The most sanitary tea is made by pouring a little boiling water over the dry tea and pouring it off instantly, then adding the amount required. Let stand about five minutes or until drawn, and pour all the tea from the grounds into another hot pot if a second cup per person is to be served.

This makes an innocent drink which, because of its heat, will check a headache brought on by the day's fatigue. It undoubtedly quickens the circulation of the blood, or in some way affects it advantageously. There are other ways, but this is good. Mind, newly boiled water, hot pot, short time for drawing.

Your New Home

will be incomplete without "TRICO" Art Metal Radiator Covers. No doubt you have already wondered how to overcome the problem of the unsightly radiator. "TRICO" is the solution. It makes a strong comfortable seat or a convenient shelf of any radiator. It can be finished in any color or imitation of wood to harmonize with your scheme of decoration.

"TRICO" forms a shield which absolutely prevents streaked walls and soiled draperies.

Furthermore, "TRICO" is a humidifier. It automatically introduces the proper amount of moisture into the room. Hot dry air causes coughs and colds. "TRICO" will prevent them.

Write for our interesting booklet, "Health and Humidity." A complimentary copy will be sent upon request.

My Funniest Childhood Adventure

What was the most amusing thing you did as a youngster? You must have been up to some tricks. We'd like to hear about it. Address Funniest Childhood Adventures, Chicago Tribune. Don't get this contest mixed with Bright Sayings. It's deeds we want to hear about. The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published.

Took Them Out Again.

A neighbor ran into our house one day to see my mother. It had rained, and she wore her husband's rubber boots, which she left just outside the door.

In those days we had a syrup pitcher with a spring top. Taking the pitcherful of syrup, I poured the entire amount into the two boots, and awaited results.

The neighbor soon got up to leave. She put both feet into the boots, and quickly took them out again.

My mother punished me by making me eat bread without butter or anything else on it for one week. That was the longest week that I can remember. H. H. B.

Stolen Fruit.

We lived on a farm, and one summer father gave us careful orders that we were not to pull the one apple on a tree which was bearing for the first time that year. I never saw an apple so big and red as that one became. We used, my brother and I, to shut out eyes and run past it. For awhile—then we reconsidered the matter. Father had said, "don't pull," so we put a box under the apple and took turns eating it, being careful that it did not come off. That was the best apple I ever tasted; what came afterward only increased my appreciation of the stolen fruit. G. G.

A FRIEND IN NEED

In Great Need.

"My husband has been sick for several months. He has gangrene, and I must have clean bandages for him. I use about six pounds of cotton a week. It is also necessary for him to have nourishing food, which it is quite impossible for me to buy, as I am unable to work, my husband and three children requiring my attention. My children are greatly in need of clothes. Their ages are 8, 10, and 13 years. I assure you I should be grateful for any assistance given me. MRS. H."

This appeal carries its own story. Who will help?

Asks Outgrown Baby Clothes.

"I expect to be confined in a short time, and as I have not been able to get some of the things I need for the little one expected, am writing to see if some one who has had children and has laid aside the little clothes would send me some dresses and skirts or kimonos. Would appreciate it very much, as we have several children, and have had quite a bit of sickness the last year. Will gladly pay parcel post. MRS. J. D. H."

Perhaps some one may have tucked away baby clothes their own baby has outgrown and which they would willingly give to this needy mother.

Carries Baby Sister.

"I am 12 years old, and have a sister who hasn't a baby carriage. I wonder if some kind person has one, no matter how old, to give my sister 6 months old, and then I will not have to carry her. G. I. J."

Truly, you do need a baby carriage, and I'll do all I can to help you get one.

Asks Loan of Typewriter.

"I am a young girl, and have written a few plays. No place will accept these unless they are typed. I have no typewriter, and cannot afford to have my plays typed. If some one would only loan me one for a few months I would gladly pay all express charges. "MISS M. T."

Provision Week

OUR fourth floor food market comprises grocery, bakery, dairy goods, fruits and vegetables, the meat market, beverages, tobaccos, and the lunchroom. It prides itself not for size alone but for the high standard of edibles that are sold here. In buying, not only is the merchandise carefully considered, but also the integrity and reputation of the manufacturer. Despite this high standard of quality, our food prices are low. Any family can save from $1 to $5 a week here on groceries and meats alone—an important economy, for a third of the average family's expenditures goes for provisions.

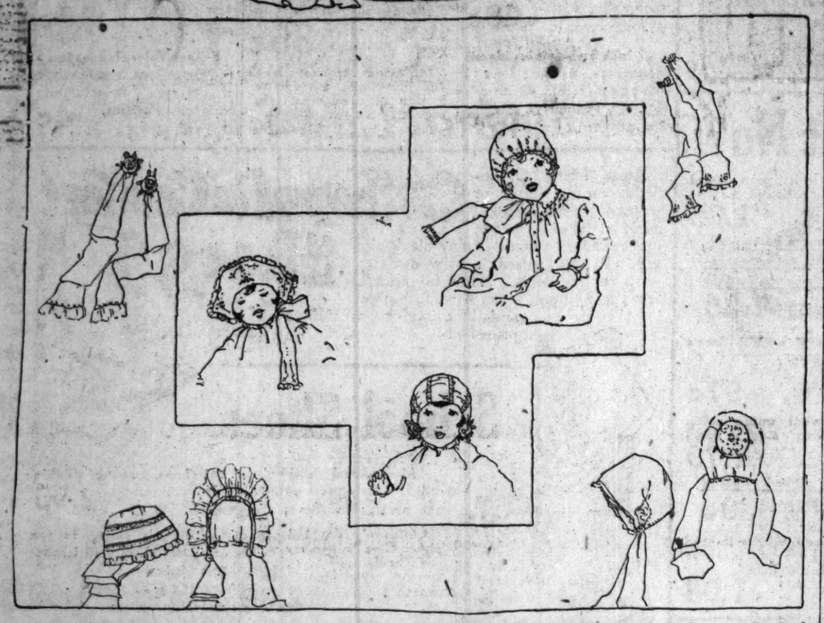
Practical and Fancy Needle Work

By Clotilde



FRENCH BABY CAPS.

A BIT of lace, in the shape of a medallion of some kind, short lengths of lace insertion, and some beautifully sheer handkerchief linen, and you have all that is needed for one of those lovely French caps for the small baby! No more attractive piece of hand work could be imagined than the fashioning of such a cap, and it is work that the prospective mother will surely delight in doing, to say nothing of the friend who wishes to make a suitable gift.

It is possible to buy any sort of a pattern one may desire, but for the very small infant the close fitting cap is the best.

If one has any real lace—Valenciennes or thread—insertion, these will work in well with alternate strips of the linen; these strips being when finished with a tiny hem each side, once and a half the width of the insertion. The cap pattern can be laid out flat and the strips cut the right lengths. Then a round or fancy shaped medallion of the lace or sheerest nainsook embroidery can be set in the back. Around the face should be whipped a quarter inch lace edge.

Of course, there should be several sets of cap strings, and they should always be separate from the cap, fastened on with small gold pins or tiny ribbon rosettes.

These cap strings are usually finished with hemstitched ends, and if one chooses there may be a little embroidery above, or a cluster of the smallest possible tucks, done by hand. But above everything else, they should always be fresh and perfectly ironed with practically no starch. Nothing looks more out of place than to see anything crumpled or in the smallest degree soiled on a baby.

A plain lining of china silk should go with the cap, to be ready to use if necessary.

For cold weather wear caps are sometimes made of heavy white silk, warmly lined.

Then, for the woman who is an adept with the crochet needle, there are attractive patterns for crocheted caps. These of course require a plain lining of thin silk or linen.

In sewing the strips of material and insertion together always hold the lace next to you, and don't try to full it. It will work in just right if you hold it naturally. The rolled hems on the strips of linen would be daintier than the narrow, flat hem. One must not be afraid of using fine needle and thread, for too coarse needle or thread would make nice work out of the question.

The medallion should be basted on a piece of the plain material, being careful that it lies with perfect smoothness. Then hem the edge down with small stitches. Cut the material away on the wrong side, leaving a one-eighth inch margin, and either roll and hem the edge down or turn the raw edge back, making a sharp crease all around at the point of hemming. Then holding the work as though you were going to overhand the medallion and material together on the wrong side, take shallow overhanding stitches through the edge of the lace and material, taking the stitches close together but taking care not to pull the threads too tight. Then straighten the work out, and the setting in work will be almost invisible. The raw edge is practically covered in the overhanding.

While on the subject of caps, it may not come amiss to mention small girl's and children's hats made of pique, linen, or dear little checked ginghams. This is such an attractive home work, and does not take much time.

There is the hat or bonnet brim, and the crown that is usually slightly fulled and buttoned on. These hats can be bound or finished with an embroidered, scalloped edge, and that, with the buttons, will make enough trimming; although of course a little embroidery in the shape of padded, embroidered dots above the scallops, or some other not too large or heavy design will be attractive.

These hats wear and launder well, and if made at home cost but little. It is not a bad idea to plan for these things long before they are needed, and have something of the kind always ready for pickup work. It is surprising how much can be accomplished in this manner, and how remote it is from being tedious when done in this way.

She Was Asleep.

I attended a party which lasted until the early hours of the morning, and consequently next day I was tired and sleepy. The manager asked me to take some dictation during the afternoon. He had dictated for some time when he noticed that my pencil hadn't moved. I was asleep. Thinking I had fainted, he called wildly for help. When I awoke I found him fanning me and a girl was sprinkling water on my face. They all thought I had fainted, as it was a very hot day.

I was much embarrassed, but not half as much as if they'd known the truth. I didn't enlighten them.

Trials of a Beginner.

It was having my first experience in a business office. The first day I walked into a private office feeling that every one's eyes were upon me. I closed the door with a bang. I was embarrassed then, but that word sounded mighty weak when I tried with all my strength to open that door, only to discover that I had recently been pointed and was pushing. I tried locking it and unlocking it, but it only made matters worse. Finally, in desperation, I decided to leave it to fate. After what seemed ages one of the other girls inquired what was keeping me so long. I was obliged to tell her through the keyhole, in such a tone as to make it audible to every one in the office. One of the men went down to the street, called me to throw the key out of the window, and unlocked the door, leaving me to walk out calm and composed? Yes!

WHITE TAILLEUR—SUMMER FAVORITE.

By Betty van Benthuysen.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—The white tailleur, the favorite frock for the summer, is being fashioned in many interesting ways. One that was much admired in the Hotel Ritz during the tea hour was made of white serge. The trim short skirt had finely plaited panels on either side, and the smartly tailored coat was worn over a gilet of white silk jersey heavily embroidered in yellows and browns of different shades. With this milady wore a hat of yellow coarse straw whose uncut edge formed a fringe of straw.

Serge is not the only material used for these tailleurs. Tussah silk, china silk, and taffeta are being fashioned into smart summer frocks for the seaside and country. A fad of the moment is the highly colored waistcoat. Odd bizarre chintzes, colorful foulards, and hand painted silks lend a bit of contrast to the all white suit. Novelties in shoes include the insert of the material of which the gown is made combined with the suede or patent leather.

A black and white serge with many novel features was worn by an American on the Rue de la Paix last week. The bell shaped sleeves and the high white collar were the outstanding features.

The coat had a ripple back, and the white serge vest had buttonholes of black braid with a white pearl button. The pockets of this trim outfit were faced in white, and the smart toque of black had a white feather curled coquettishly on the left side.

Short and long capes are still popular. Black satin is the favorite material, and accordion plaiting remains popular. A fascinating cape of white ostrich uncurled feathers placed in deep flouncings on a white chiffon cape was one of the sensations of the great race week.

Are we to come to the dress of straw? It looks far from impossible. The couturrieres are using a kind of very fine matting in linen color, highly stenciled, as trimming for gowns. Milliners are using this very new material, and purses and parasols are seen in a variety of styles all made up from this latest fabric.

Heavy embroidered net in futuristic colors is the favorite material blouse and gilet for the white summer skirt.

An attractive one piece frock of black satin had as an unusual feature the knitted silk scarf of brilliant orange which was tied carelessly on the left side. Accordion plaited tulle was caught in narrow panels on either side of the skirt.

It is extraordinary how many people are finding out that they can wear yellow. For years we have regarded this color as essentially the one to add brilliancy to a brunette beauty, but now dark and fair women alike are wearing it. The summer gowns are making a drive for popularity in this canary hue; and organdies, crepes, and voiles are being shown in some lovely simple designs.

Some of the tailor-mades of the moment are working half heartedly to attempt to define the waist line.

Brown taffeta is used in one model, a lovely golden brown. The pockets are heavily embroidered in brilliant reds and the upstanding collar is lined with the same embroidery. The purse is fashioned of the taffeta correspondingly decorated. The waistcoat worn with this smart tailleur is of a creamy white kid and the embroidery design of the gown is carried out here. A small toque of silver and red, a sort of glorified tam-o'-shanter, is worn with this gown.

New neckwear or a new wrinkle in sleeves is of paramount importance this season. Something really new in either gives a distinction to a gown. Our collars are growing higher every moment, and the latest thing is a kind of double ruffle, closely plaited, of white net, one frill standing up around the chin and the other lying flat like a collar. A black moire ribbon separates the frills, and ties in a flat bow in front.

White tailleur—blouse of silk jersey; skirt of serge.

Black serge with white vest, pockets, and buttons.

Bright Sayings of the Children

The Tribune will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

Mary had soiled her white shoes so badly that her mother said: "I think I will have them dyed," to which Mary replied tearfully, "First you buy me shoes and then you kill them. I don't want to wear dead shoes.' A. A.

A friend and I took a boat trip. A few days later, as we passed the docks with the children, her son, seeing the boat at the dock, said: "O, mamma, which layer of the boat were you on?" R. S.

Marian had grown tired of the commotion attendant upon the arrival of a new sister in the home and of the presence of the doctor, nurse, and extra housemaid.

One morning she sat down by her mother's bed and said with a sigh:

"O, dear, I wish this baby was finished, so they would all go away and leave us alone with her." M. B.

Aunty had promised to take the children to the park, but the sky looked cloudy and threatened rain, so aunty was very undecided about going.

Suddenly she exclaimed: "I think we'll go, after all! It seems to be brightening up."

And she calmly proceeded to finish straightening up the room.

Tommy watched her in disgusted silence, then hotly broke out: "Yes, it's brightening up all right, but I guess it will brighten down again long before you get ready to start, aunty!" F. J.

Russell and Paul were in the park one day, and decided to take a boat ride. They asked the caretaker at the boathouse for a boat.

He said: "No, you boys aren't old enough."

"How old do we have to be?" asked Paul.

"Sixteen," was the reply.

"Well," said Paul, "this fellow is 8 and I'm 8. That makes 16. Isn't that just the same?" A. B.

Rex had been trained to say an exercise at a Sunday school picnic. Rex's mamma stood near the platform that she might prompt if necessary. At the appointed time Rex stepped bravely to the front, turned to his mother, and said: "Mamma, I am not going to speak my piece; I am going to speak 'Tommy Tucker.'" And he forthwith proceeded to speak "Tommy Tucker." J. W. B.

After spending two weeks with my daughter and grandchild I was about to leave for home and decided to take a few gifts to the girls. When my grandchild overheard me diciding just what I should take he spoke up and said: "Mother, what do you think I could send the girls?" After hesitating a few moments he replied: "O, send them my regards, that's the best I can do." A. G.

ADAPTED TO CHANGE.

A FAMILY is not a fixed, static thing, like a paving stone. It is a living organism which is constantly changing. It begins as a separate entity when two young people take each other for better or for worse, and start to make a home of their own. It increases in size as the kiddies come and grow; and then, in most cases, lessens in immediate numbers as those kiddies, now men and women, go out into the world to seek their fortune.

No set of house plans is complete which does not contain at least one adapted to this changing family.

The house here shown meets that requirement. On the ground floor are five comfortable rooms and a bath—all the space that young folks need when they begin housekeeping. The second story, in these early years, can be left unfinished. But as the youngsters increase in numbers and size, two fine rooms can be finished for them on the upper floor. Later still, as the boys and girls go away from home, the family drops back to the single floor, but always with the reserve space ready for visits from the grandchildren or for family reunions.

This provision for one of the commonest and least recognized of needs would make any house noticeable, but it by no means exhausts the good qualities of this dwelling. It is attractive, inside and out. It is good to look at and good to live in. It is a home, and shows it.

Crossing the pergola porch, you open any one of three sets of French doors, and find yourself in the living room. This is a spacious place, 15x28 feet, lighted from three sides and with two openings in the inner wall. Thanks to the use of the pergola instead of a closely covered porch, an unusual supply of light comes through the French doors; at the right end of the room, as you enter, is a big window group, and at the left end, the fireplace, with windows over the flanking bookcases. It is an airy, spacious, livable room, which wins approval at once.

The chief opening of the inner wall leads to the dining room, 13x12 feet, not counting a large bay, composed almostly wholly of glass, making this part of the house as light and airy as the living room. The door at the back of the dining room leads into a pantry, rather an unusual feature in a bungalow, but one which a good many housewives still appreciate.

Passing through the pantry, you reach the kitchen, 13x8½ feet. Not only has this house a pantry, but at the back of the kitchen it has a large, light closet which is virtually a storage pantry, and the short passage to the service entrance has a place for the ice box.

The second door from the living room opens to the hall, also reached from the dining room. This passage gives access to the two ground floor bedrooms with the bathroom between. The larger of these rooms is 15x11½; the other is 11 feet square. Both are supplied with closets. The stairs to the upper floor likewise are reached from this hall, and directly under them, opening into the kitchen, is the stairway to the basement.

The second floor can be finished in so many ways that it seemed needless to show it on the plan. In any case, two fine bedrooms, with a second bath room, if desired, can be placed on this floor.

Such a house lends itself to individual changes. As it stands, only the left end of the porch is covered; the rest is an open terrace, partly protected by the broad eaves, and shaded by the pergola. If desired the pergola could be replaced by a porch or abolished altogether, and the covered part of the porch could be screened and glassed in.

So, too, if the climate made protection from weather the chief consideration for much of the year, the French doors of the living room could be replaced by two window groups and one large paneled door. None of these changes would make any perceptible difference in the cost. They are matters of adjustment to local conditions and personal preferences, not to pocketbooks.

The chimney as shown is built of cobblestones. If these are not handy, brick will do just as well; and in that case, some brick should be used in the floor of the porch and terrace. For the rest, the walls of the house are of hollow tile, covered with stucco, the gypsum plaster of the interior is laid on metal lath, and the roof is of asphalt shingles.

In other words, the house is built to protect its inmates and to last. It is virtually impossible for such a house to burn, and, of course, it cannot rot. It has the lowest possible maintenance charges and insurance costs, and these economies quickly repay the slight additional first cost of such a structure as compared with a frame dwelling. As for depreciation, there is none whatever for several years, and then it comes very slowly.

FOR AND BY BUSINESS GIRLS

By Loretta King.

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Miss Loretta King, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

ON HER OWN.

I AM answering the following letter here because from conversations I have heard lately among women on the subject of going into business for themselves it occurred to me that there are many who contemplate doing it, as does Miss R., without having had any experience whatever, with no special knowledge or talent for the work they select, and not a vestige of an idea of the investment required.

Something more than the mere desire and belief in one's own ability is necessary to establish almost any sort of business, no matter on how small a scale it is started.

"Dear Miss King: I have been thinking seriously about trying to earn some money. I am 31 years old. As I have had no training for commercial work, I thought I would like to open a little shop of some sort and so go into business for myself. I don't believe I'd care for office work, and I also feel I'm hardly young enough to go as a beginner into that field.

"I kept house for my father and brother for twelve years, but the death of my father two years ago and my brother's recent marriage leave me free to do as I please.

"What I have in mind—and this is what I would like your advice on—is a small tearoom in a growing business section of the city, but outside the business center.

"Do you think my only experience, that of housekeeper for so many years, is sufficient for me? I am prepared to do whatever I ought to fit myself for this work, or something similar.

"I would appreciate any pointers you can give me, and sincerely thank you. L. C. R."

A friend of mine, Mrs. N., who has been making a solidly comfortable living from an infants' wear shop, told me, in talking over her four years' experience in business, that her first consideration when she planned opening the shop was the amount of money needed to equip and run it until it was on a paying basis. She had $2,000, but she was told by several business men, her banker among them, that she would need at least a thousand more, which she was eventually able to borrow. With an original layout of $3,000 her stock was necessarily limited, but she managed to have enough to start on, pay the first month's rent, and buy the necessary fixtures.

The location of the shop was settled after inquiries were made in several localities, and the advantages and disadvantages of each compared and carefully weighed.

Getting the right kind of help for her particular line was the next difficulty, but after one or two experiments she got what she wanted and has had no great difficulty on that score since.

Mrs. N. had had some practical experience in sewing-room management. Her greatest expense in starting out was for designs, and as soon as the establishment was going fairly well she took up a course in designing so that now she designs herself everything that is made in the shop.

If Miss R. has or can easily borrow the capital necessary to equip and run for a while a small restaurant, I would suggest as the most practical thing for her to do, since she is totally lacking in experience, that she take a job—any job she can get—in a restaurant. It need only be for a little while, but I believe that is the best possible way for her to learn about the business.

I think a visit to all the easily accessible tea shops and restaurants would be of value in learning and comparing the different methods of preparing and serving food. And I am sure that if Miss R. followed her intention she would be well repaid eventually for any time and money expended now on a scientific and economic course in cooking.

BRINGS THE LOOP TO YOUR DOOR
Eight Big Stores Located in Convenient Shopping Centers Throughout the City

Save Yourself Money! Shop at Our Nearest Store
Don't take our word for it!—be your own judge—go to our nearest store and ask for prices on the articles you are interested in. You'll find our figures much lower than the downtown stores quote for the very same merchandise. The reason for this is found in the fact that we own our own buildings and you don't have to help us pay rent. Our 8 big stores handle more goods in a day than most concerns sell in a week. The manufacturers always favor the big buyers; therefore, we command their best price and you get the double benefit of our no rent and great purchasing advantages in the form of lower prices, greater credit privileges and bigger stocks to pick from.

You Save Ten Per Cent on Every Purchase
Every time you select an article from any one of our 8 big stores you get a Free Savings Bank Account with the Chicago City Bank & Trust Co. This free savings account is, in reality, a 10% reduction on every purchase you make. It represents the same discount that other furniture houses give you for cash. In other words, we extend you the privilege of buying on time with the same advantages that you ordinarily receive by paying out the money on the spot. There is no red tape to this plan—we deposit 10% of the total amount of your bill in your own name with the above bank to turn this money over to you as soon as you have made six monthly payments on your account. Get all particulars from any of our salesmen or the bank's officials.

Patterns by Clotilde

How to Use the Patterns

IT is surprising how many ways there are to vary the long, one piece apron, and many of the ideas are excellent. Today's pattern, 9347, while it is called an apron, is to all intents and purposes an attractive design for a morning dress. It has the advantage of being very easy to make, and as it is in one piece it can be easily ironed—a point not to be ignored.

It measures a little more than two yards at the bottom, and the fullness at the waist line is held nicely in place by the belt, which, in turn, is held in place by the pocket straps.

The front opening must be well made or it will tear at the bottom. The right side of the opening is finished with a faced hem, cut on the straight of the goods, and the left side has an extension hem stitched to the front in a seam on the wrong side. Then the opposite edge of the facing is turned in and hemmed down over the seam on the wrong side.

In sewing both facings on the seams must run off to almost no width at the lower edge, and the strips should be cut about one inch longer than the opening. After both sides have been finished baste both facings over one another just below where the stitching ends, and from the right side stitch twice across the width of the facings. Of course, this stitching is done from the right side, through the dress as well as the facings. This will keep the opening from tearing.

Binding all edges with some contrasting color, as suggested on the pattern, will trim the apron prettily.

Ninety-three hundred and fifty-two (9352) is a pattern which will be pretty on any small tot, and is suitable for any desired material. If wash goods is used it should be shrunk and the color set before being cut into. It will save work later on. The bolero effect in the front is as becoming to the child as to the girl and woman, and the edges can be piped or bound to outline them, and small buttons set on each side of the front. No further trimming than the collar and cuffs will be needed.

This dress buttons in the back, and it will be a good idea to reinforce both hems with a straight strip of material. Both buttonholes and the sewing on of the buttons will be stronger. If woolen material is used for the dress, baste a strip of percaline or other lining inside the hem.

Ninety-three hundred and ten (9310) is a design especially adapted for stout figures—although the lines will be most becoming to slender figures. The dress is cut in two pieces—front and back—and gores out at the underarm seams so that it measures two yards at the bottom.

If a warm dress is needed tricotine will be good, and no trimming will be better than some stunning embroidery. Crêpe meteors, satins, and silks will any of them be attractive looking, and all materials show such wonderful shades no taste but can be satisfied.

Serge is always with us, and many women choose it in preference to the newer weaves. It would make up well in this design, and the collar and cuffs could be made of satin or taffeta in a contrasting color, rather well covered with eyelet embroidery. Or if white organdie is chosen that can be embroidered in the same way—the neck of the dress being finished with a bias facing and the collar and cuffs made detachable.

The dress is hemmed down both fronts and can be closed from the left to right, or right to left.

If one of the soft materials is used beading would look well and give a little weight to the dress. There are stunning border designs and part of the design could be used on the pockets, cuffs, and collar.

Some cloths do not hold the transferred designs very well, and it may be necessary to go over the marking with a fine basting. A waxed silk thread should be used to do the beading.

Start on the wrong side with a knot, bring the needle up through to the right side, and slip one bead on the needle (there are needles sold especially to bead with). Put the needle through to the wrong side and have a short space between each bead—about the length of a small bead. Sew the beads on one at a time, and while the thread must be pulled enough to lie smooth it must not "draw" at all. Be sure and fasten the thread firmly. Beading is fascinating work and is not tedious at all, as perhaps the directions might make it sound.

9352—Child's empire dress. Sizes 2 yards of 32 inch, or 1⅝ yards of 36 inch material, with ⅝ yard of 32 inch contrasting.

9347—Woman's one piece apron. Sizes 36, 40, and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 4¼ yards of 32 inch, or 3¼ yards of 36 inch material with 3 yards of binding.

9310—Woman's one piece dress. Sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48 and 50 inches bust measure. Size 38 requires 4⅝ yards of 36 inch material and ½ yard of 36 inch contrasting for collar and cuffs.

AT A MOUNTAIN CABIN.

SEVERAL years ago I was spending the summer in the mountains with the family of a college friend, and while wandering through the woods, I became separated from the rest of the party.

Feeling tired, I sat down to rest, and hearing the leaves behind me rustle, I turned, expecting to find some one of our party. Instead I saw a strange young man, who seemed surprised at finding any one in so deserted a spot.

Over his shoulder hung a camera, and later I found he was on the staff of a magazine and had been out taking pictures for it.

I told him of my plight, and he offered to escort me back to our cabin, adding that he knew every inch of ground around there.

The next day I was called home by my mother's illness, and was secretly disappointed at not seeing my young friend again.

Three months later, with my parents, I went to Europe, later going to Cairo. While there, we stayed at a well known, although small hotel, frequented by many American tourists.

Instead of having small tables, there were two long ones, and at our first dinner, after we had been seated I became conscious of the fact that the man across the table was gazing intently at me. At first, I was embarrassed and kept my eyes cast down, but finally feeling indignant, I decided to take a look at him.

Imagine my surprise at finding the young man of the mountains, who told me of his return to the cabin the day after our meeting and of his disappointment at finding me gone.

During our month's stay in Cairo, we spent many delightful hours together, and when I left he had gained a promise from me.

On our return in the spring, we were married, and spent our honeymoon in the cabin in the mountains.

Give It to Family.

"Dear Miss Blake: There is a boy in town who lived next door to me for some time. During that time we became good friends. That was about a year ago. I have seen very little of him since then, although he attends the same school as I do. Lately I have noticed that he is going with a girl friend of mine. Do you think it would be improper for me to give a small gift to him? Or do you think it would be improper for me to give a small gift to him, or do you think that that would make him think I was chasing him? I am 14, and he is one year older. EILEEN."

It certainly would make him think you were chasing after him—a most unseemly manner of conduct for a grown up young woman, and in a 14 year old extremely forward and precocious. Buy the gift, if you must, and present it to some member of your family, upon whom you should fasten your affections and keep them until you have added at least three or four years.

Steak A LA Angelo"

—is a good thick steak, broiled as you prefer it—sent to the table on a hot platter, after pouring over it (just as it was taken from the broiler) a sauce made of melted butter and Angelo Walnut Sauce, a dash of salt and pepper added to taste. Verily, a dish fit "to set before a king." Try it!

Mothers! Your Attention Is Called to Corset Waists

Third Floor—Center

An always important question for mothers to consider is, Which is the proper corset waist? Our experience in solving this question—an experience covering years of practical service—is offered for the upbuilding and preservation of the child's health. Therefore, we recommend for they have just those essential features that properly control the child's development. When the figure is slight, waists that button in front are very comfortable and answer every purpose—the shoulder straps keep the garment in place, so that it can be worn as loosely as desired—for girls 10 to 14 years, at..... 1.50

H. & W. Corset Waists

The H. & W. waist, for girls more fully developed, is a combination of corset and waist, flexible front clasp, sizes 14, 15 and 16 years, buttoned or clasp front—and sold according to waist measure, like mother's, at only..... 2.00

Nemo Self-Reducing Corset

Third Floor—Center

The only way you can make your vacation really worth while is to dress wisely. Especially is this true of your corset, where the element of health and comfort is of equal importance.

Nemo Self-Reducing corset, style 360— made of Usaro cloth, an extremely light weight material, guaranteed to wear as long as heavy coutil; very low bust, that will not "dig in" at pit of stomach. Has the celebrated self-reducing straps that will support and reduce the abdomen, also keeps the corset from "riding up" on the figure—firm hook below the first clasp—four good hose supporters, sizes 22 to 36, at..... 5.00

Nemo "Topless" corset, style 327, as illustrated, for those who like perfect freedom above the waist line, but who need firm control of the figure below the waist line. This model has wide elastic band across front of corset, but is a trifle higher in back, for those who need a little support above the waist line. The self-reducing strap reduces the abdomen, sizes to 30, at 5.50

PART EIGHT

Chicago Sunday Tribune.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

Theaters 1, 3. Movies 2. Society 4. Churches 5. Art 6.

AUGUST 22, 1920.

The Theaters

INSTEAD of opening its season next Sunday, as originally planned, the Blackstone will remain untenanted until Saturday night, Sept. 4, when "Self-Defense," a melodrama by Myron C. Fagan, will be revealed with Hilda Spong, Regina Wallace, Florence Davis, Frank Burdeck, Charles Abbe, and Vincent Coleman in the leading roles. The scenes of the play are laid in Chicago.

At Cohan's Grand, instead of the widely heralded 'Lightnin'" (which remains in New York) will come, on Sept. 6, the musical version of Henry Blossom's old play, "Checkers." It has been decked out in tunes by Albert Von Tilzer, and now bears the title "Honey Girl."

"Welcome Stranger," when it leaves the Grand, will not only have beaten the length of engagement, any play that has ever been at that theater, but any dramatic performance ever presented in Chicago. The play reached its three hundredth performance last night.

More immediate changes at the theaters involve the arrival, next week, of "Apple Blossoms," the operetta by Fritz Kreisler, the violinist, and Victor Jacobi, at the Colonial; "The Wonderful Thing," a comedy by Lillian Trimble Bradley, at the Princess, and "The Storm," a spectacular melodrama, by Langdon McCormick, at the Princess.

Al Hayman, general manager for Charles Frohman, Inc., returned from England on Friday with plans for the presentation of a number of English plays in this country. Barrie's new play, "Mary Rose," will be produced in New York on Christmas night, on which occasion Miss Maude Adams will return to the stage after an absence of several seasons. Mr. Hayman announced also that he had purchased A. E. W. Mason's play, "At the Villa Rose," a dramatization of his novel of the same name. This play is now running at the London Strand, with Arthur Bourchier in a leading rôle. It will be presented in this country, probably with William Gillette as its star. Mr. Hayman said that he had brought two plays suitable for Otis Skinner, and that one of these would be produced this season.

"Sonny," another play by the prolific George V. Hobart, is scheduled for production this fall with Emma Dunn, Ralph Morgan [now playing here in "Buddies"], and Lillian Lorraine as featured members of the cast.

Miss Ethel Johnson, last seen with Montgomery and Stone in "Old Town" some years ago, is to return to the stage. She will appear this season with Richard Carle in a musical comedy entitled "Oui, Madame," which was given a tentative production recently with William Kent and Miss Georgia O'Ramey in the leading rôles.

A London producer proposes to test the willingness of British audiences to accept German plays by offering "Mie-Mie," a musical affair which is chiefly the work of the German composer, Paul Lincke. It was first produced in Germany and its successful run was suspended by the outbreak of the war.

"It is true," says this experimenter, "that German plays are largely available to London managers. There is hardly a London manager who has not one or two in his possession. Their fate may depend on the treatment meted out to 'Mie-Mie.'

"In Italy there have not only been a number of German and Austrian plays and musical plays produced during the last few months, but the composers Lehar, Jean Gilbert, Oscar Straus, and Leo Fall have actually conducted the first performances of their new plays. In America they announce a large number of German plays, and have actually done one by an Austrian and a Hungarian—namely: 'Apple Blossoms.' Even during the war the American public attended performances of such musical plays by Austrians, Hungarians, and Germans as 'The Merry Widow,' 'Soldier Boy,' and 'The Marriage Market.'

"The British government, when announcing the cancellation of the blockade, distinctly and emphatically encouraged British firms to do business with Germany, and it is right to say that there is no difference between importation and exportation of plays and music and that of any other article of merchandise."

Holbrook Blinn will begin playing next week in "The Bad Man," a new comedy by Porter Emerson Browne. His company will include Frances Carson, Frank Conroy, Edna Hibbard, and James A. Devine.

The quest of Mr. Hoppe, the English photographer, for America's five most beautiful women arouses John Murray Anderson, a New York producer, to suspicion. "All my information," says Mr. Anderson, "points to some one coming here to raid the American musical comedy stage for our loveliest girls. The blind of the 'beauties of aristocracy' looks like a smoke screen. I am delighted to say that in my most recent productions each contract with a girl is bonded for execution by a surety company. I had not intended to reveal this, but now that the foreign invader has come I give it for our general profection."

Michel Fokine, who staged the Lesbian ballet in "Aphrodite," will come to Chicago this week to select a number of Chicago dancers for the production. He complains of a shortage of dancing talent in New York.

President Wilson, acting in response to an appeal from the Producing Managers' association to "save the American theater," has directed the interstate commerce commission to take up the question of granting special rate transportation concessions for traveling theatrical companies. Many minor troupes, playing "one night stands," are reported to have canceled previously arranged tours in anticipation of the rate raise which goes into effect this week.

"The Tavern" is the tentative name of the play which George M. Cohan has ensnared for the use of Arnold Daly this season, but otherwise details are lacking. The author is Cora Dick Gant—a new name in the theater. Rehearsals are already under way.

A revival of "The Chocolate Soldier" is on the schedule for this season—to be made by the Shuberts. "The Merry Widow" and "The Belle of New York" are other musical pieces which are in a fair way to be revived this season.

MISS MARION DAVIS in "THE ED WYNN CARNIVAL" ILLINOIS.

Miss Davis is a sprightly and industrious member of the company at the Illinois, singing and dancing frequent duets with Mr. Earl Benham, the "juvenile" of the piece, and otherwise helping to provide adequate background for Mr. Wynn's ubiquitous foolery.

Bracelet Watches

These new cushion shaped watches are the most popular style made today.

The cases are engraved front, 14k gold filled, with solid gold back cap, making them practically as good for wearing as solid gold.

The movements, 15-jeweled Swiss, we recommend as good timekeepers.

"FOUR TIMES FOILED."

By Mae Tinée.

"THAT'S the cleverest thing I've seen in a long time."

The remark is being made by nearly everybody who chances to see the Chester comedy, "Four Times Foiled," which has been playing at the Randolph. And nearly everybody's right, too! You'll agree when you have seen those three star actors, Hubert the monkey, June the dog, and Buster the horse, perform.

"Four Times Foiled" has a regular plot with animal actors to carry it out. That is, it has as much of a plot as you usually find in any comedy. It's about some villains who decide to kidnap a chee-ild, and are utterly routed by three valiants—none other than the above mentioned Herbert, and Juno and Buster.

It's worth anybody's money to watch Hubert in the rôle of nursemaid. He handles the infant with an expression of care and an air of experience. Witness his rescue of the darling from the naughty locomotive that is about to run over it.

Right nobly he battles, but at last the villains prove too much for him. They tie him in the shed, and proceed on their horrible way. One of them, however, carelessly leaves his lighted cigar behind him. Also Hubert has left his voice. While he works, burning the ties that bind him, he shrieks loudly for help.

His calls are heard by Juno the collie.

Juno knows that she could do a lot if she could only get into the shed. But the door is locked—and the open window is too high. She bethinks herself of Buster, the horse.

Now Buster is enjoying a wonderful meal of oats, but when Juno rushes in he proves himself a friend and a gentleman. With clever teeth he unties the knot that holds him in his stall, and gallops to the scene of incarceration. He noses a box to a place near the window and places himself just right. Juno leaps to the box, from there to his back, and into the shed.

By the time she gets in Hubert has severed his bonds. As they come out they discover the baby being sent out to sea in a box. Hubert screams; Juno throws a fit—but Buster gets into action.

MISS JANE CARROLL in "THE GREENWICH VILLAGE FOLLIES" STUDEBAKER

He runs up a hill that overlooks the ocean, leaps off, swims out, and drags baby and box, comes back to shore.

You not only want to see this "Four Times Foiled" yourself—you want to take the youngsters to see it. They'll love it to death.

Ask Me! Ask Me!

BARNEY O.: You go right ahead and kick all you want to. As aptly declared on the menu card of a loop drug store, "We strive to give the best possible service. A complaint from a customer is considered a favor to us."

J. U. R.: Almost had heart failure for a minute! Thought your last initial was going to be something else. Anna Q. Nilsson? No, she is not the star of "Humoresque." Alma Rubens is featured. But she isn't the star, either. Vera Gordon walks away with the honors. Universal produced "The Devil's Pass Key." Y'wekkum.

EVANSTON: Don't let the signs bother you too much. Half the "Adults Only" things are wishy-washy things, not bad enough to waste a criticism on. And not good enough to draw trade legitimately. On general principles, save your money when such signs make their appearance.

EVA: Hugh Thompson is the "handsome fellow" who played with Miss Normah in "The Slim Princess." I could tell you a lot about him if I had time.

M. M. M.: Ah, m'dear, life is just one thing after another, isn't it? You shouldn't use the curling iron so hot. If Eugene O'Brien marcels his hair, he's not talking about it. Jack Pickford has gone to Europe. She wouldn't mind autographing one if she had one to autograph. Brown organdy? Lovely! Trim it with bands of cream! (Cream organdy.) Or anything else you want to.

B. J. T.: Yes, the Richard Travers in "The White Moll" is the same who was once with Essanay. O, vurr' well. Smile when you say it!

FRANCIS O.: That's hard to say. Everybody likes somebody best. Norma Talmadge at present heads her own company. No, Conway Tearle doesn't always play with her. Naomi Childers is not married that I know of. They do say she's wearing a new diamond, though.

LOUIS: Where's Mrs. Sidney Drew? Why, she's just been engaged by Vitagraph to direct Alice Joyce. I'll bet she's glad to be back there again! It was with Vitagraph, you know, that she and her late husband, Sidney Drew, achieved their first success.

CURIOUS: Yes, quite likely you did see Charles Meredith the other day. Reliable authority informs me that he was in town with his wife. His WIFE? Yes, dessert!

KALAMAZOO: You make me feel pale! How do you get like that?

EILEEN R.: I can't speak from "personal experience" because I never wrote a senario. But if you're asking for advice, I should say, keep away from stories that demand unusual costumes. You'd have to have a whale of a plot to get a company to even consider anything of the kind. But perhaps you have. If so—go to it! I'll send you a list of the producing companies if you care to mail me a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

DAISY: No, Maurice Costello is not dead. You're due to see him soon in a Selznick picture, "Wilderness Fear." He will take the part of a half breed trapper. No trouble at all.

Music and the Musicians

A Word for the Small Orchestra—Wherein the Movies Advance Symphonic Art

By Eric DeLamarter.

NOW is the time for some one to rise up and indite an appreciation of the "movie" orchestra, in its larger manifestations, and to show not only its influence and the public's interest, but the possibilities as well. For our theater managers and their clientèles have gotten beyond the hobble-de-hoy stage enough to comprehend why a cornet, a piano, a fiddle, and four drums do not constitute an orchestra. These points we can sketch in, only, in this place. For the Sunday morning screed must not be longer than two cigarets and one cup of coffee.

It is of the groups of from fifteen to twenty-five men, whose ministrations in the larger "movie" homes have been no small factor in persuading the audiences to enter and stay, that we chat. Of course the youngsters among our serious musicians—and composers, especially—will turn up the nose at the suggestion that there is unlimited possibility in such small ensembles. The younger they are, the higher will go the noses. Of such fanaticism is youth, and it is a blessed fanaticism, for it means impulse to the art. But I say again, and with the emphasis of a conviction, that the most significant thing among the newer influences in our musical activity is this growing popularity of the better class "movie" orchestra.

It is to our hurt, as a nation, that the idea of orchestra has been associated only with ensembles of some eight or nine dozen men. This means an avalanche of a salary list. It means that only the largest cities may hope to maintain any considerable "season" of symphonic music. It means, in a secondary sense, that the hearers of orchestral music must be relatively few, and, in a still greater degree, that our composers' chances for hearings and experiments are less with the smaller number of such institutions.

Now, the lack of comprehension of what an ensemble of two dozen players is able to do, is equalled only by the unthinking contempt for such an ensemble on the part of your "serious" musician and music-lover. I have heard, in this city, such a band give a delightful performance to one of the classic overtures, and to one of the most popular classic symphonies—a performance which, for nicety of color and balance, for spirit and accuracy, far surpassed a performance by a visiting orchestra not so many years ago.

For, look you! the standard repertory has been fitted into orchestral programs between "reels" and—this is a tragedy, but it is also a fact!—cut to fit the dramatic action of some scene made eloquent by Fatty Arbuckle and his ilk.

So, the modest ensemble, toying with the standard repertory, has been a fact for some time. It is a popular fact. Now let us see what its possibilities are.

Most of these combinations of a couple of dozen players are groups of skilled musicians, not a few of them from the symphony orchestras. In such an ensemble, there is to be found every standard tone-color of the orchestra. You will hear all your strings, probably one flute, one oboe, one or two clarinets, and a bassoon, probably, a pair of horns, and another of trumpets, and mayhap another of trombones. Here are the essentials of the symphony orchestra, with a preponderance of brass, of course—for our day is a day of brass, a day of heavy color, not of finesse.

Given these skilled players, two factors determine the result—first, the demands of the score; secondly, the wisdom of the conductor. Now go back over the classic scores and note from Shubert, even, and before him to the beginnings of Italian opera, how strikingly large the proportion of the elder literature is written for just such an orchestra.

This small orchestra is a legitimate instrument. It has its artistic place. It is possible to maintain in a small community. It has a large, classic literature from which to draw repertory. With slight adjustment as much more might be added. And the justification of tampering with a score is in the fact that works for small orchestra of necessity must drop out of our large symphony orchestra's repertory, for the reason that they sound too small and too thin in our halls and to ears accustomed to the tonal opulence of this latter day, and, if "fattened up" by doubling the number of players required for a part, they take on bulk and noise at the total loss of their intrinsic color values. Therefore, it is suggested that a dainty master work like Haydn's "Midi" symphony should be kept alive by readjustment to the conditions obtaining today.

This next paragraph you may skip, as it concerns composure. It requires much more technical skill to write interestingly for our ears with such an ensemble than with the "full" orchestra. And yet here is the market, a commercial market, a place for special effort where special effort will find its opportunity; here is the whole range of fantasy, from the inspiration of a custard pie thrown against a Parisian complexion to that of chills and fever tragedy in the haunted castle.

To sum up all this breakfast literature, then, we suggest that the small orchestra is a worthy instrument, with a commercial place, with an artistic place—and only the future can say as to how great an artistic place—with possibilities of development for the medium sized city which, from a cultural angle, cannot be overestimated. It needs and merits the services of expert musicians, as conductors and as composers. It has its great opportunity of community service. The "movies" gave it its first home, and it is capable of greater assistance to the jiggy drama than it has given. But beyond that is the opportunity of carrying to the city which cannot afford an orchestra of "100—count 'em—100" a remarkably large treasure from the choicest pages our art possesses.

Broadway Admires Playwright's Pluck if Not His Play

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—Special Correspondence.]—The chap with the courage to back his own convictions inspires a certain admiration. Even with the Broadway cynics. He may be a fool, but he isn't a quitter.

Periodically such a person appears in the ranks of the newer playwrights. Having won a measure of success with the help of a collaborator, or with a play altered by direction of the man who bought it, he gradually becomes convinced that he is being denied his rights as a creator. His stuff should be played as it is written—or not played at all. He tells the manager so, and the manager agrees—that it should not be played at all.

Thereupon the pride bruised playwright determines to show certain people how unfair they are, and how dense. Out of his own bank account he produces the funds necessary to cover the cost of production, leases a theater, and bravely presents another play.

Occasionally he proves his case. I can't at the moment recall an instance in which he has proved it—but I believe there have been such experiences.

The late Paul Armstrong was always spending the royalties he received from one play on the production of another, and losing his investment.

Samuel Shipman, the wisest little collaborator of them all, was so convinced his last season's comedy, "First Is Last," should be a success he financed it through a run of several weeks before he would admit its failure.

Last season it cost Anthony Paul Kelly $50,000 to learn that the judgment of his managers was better than his own when they said "The Phantom Legion" wouldn't do. And so it has gone.

Now we have Wilson Collison, co-author of "Up in Mabel's Room" and "The Girl in the Limousine" and sole author of "The Girl With the Carmine Lips." The first two he sold to A. H. Woods, who bought them for the ideas they contained and turned them over to collaborators to rewrite—Otto Harbach serving as "Mabel's" doctor and Avery Hopwood officiating for the lady of the limousine.

On the strength of the success of these Collison gave up being a druggist in Columbus, O., and determined to devote all his time to writing successes for the stage. Also, he agreed to submit each opus in turn to Mr. Woods, who was to hold a thirty day option on it, and have the privilege of returning it if he did not think it good enough to keep.

Under this agreement Collison wrote "The Girl with the Carmine Lips," and submitted it to the manager, who refused it. Then it was that the author decided to back his own judgment. He leased the Punch and Judy theater, engaged a cast, and rehearsed his play. Last week he presented it. It proved a pretty awful farce, and seems headed straight for oblivion. But the Collison courage still holds, the Collison money still flows, and the Broadway crowd is admiring but not supporting the young man's nerve.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Medinah Temple Taken for Jewish Holiday Services

PLANS are being formulated by the Temple Sholom for what is expected to be the greatest and most largely attended Jewish religious services of modern times, the Rosh Hashona—the Jewish New Year—and Yom Kippur—the Day of Atonement—will be celebrated. The sacred high holiday will be celebrated the evening of Sunday, Sept. and the morning of Sept. 13. Yom Kippur services will be held on the evening of Tuesday, Sept. 21, and all day Sept. 22.

The worshipers will congregate at Medinah temple this year, since the natural growth of the Jewish population has found the Temple Sholom inadequate for the fall holidays. Forty-two hundred seats will be provided, and for the first time in local Jewish history, 1,000 of these will be set aside for the free use of deserving persons who wish to worship.

The services will be conducted by Rabbi Abraham Hirschberg of Temple Sholom. Special music will be provided by a chorus of fifty professional singers under the direction of Prof. Joseph Zwieherath, with an additional double quartet of eight soloists.

"These extraordinary plans constitute an attempt on our part to reach the many Jewish people of Chicago who are not at present members of congregations," Benjamin M. Engelhard, president of the Temple Sholom, states. "We are endeavoring to democratize the synagogue in an attempt to bring religion to the people and to make it a more vital factor in their lives.

"The tendency in recent years has been to grow away from the religion of Israel. Outside factors have diverted the attention formerly given to religious matters. As a result of our plan to hold services at Medinah temple thousands of Jewish persons who formerly could not be accommodated at the synagogues will find an opportunity here."

Temple Sholom was founded in 1867 by the North Chicago Hebrew congregation and for years maintained a temple at La Salle avenue and Goethe street. Because of the gradual drift of its membership it was removed in 1911 to the present site at Pine Grove avenue and Grace street. From a membership of 105 families in 1898 the congregation has grown until today it numbers more than 750 families.

The pastoral conference of the northern Illinois district of the Missouri Synod Lutheran church will meet in semi-annual session Tuesday and Wednesday at Crete, Ill. 200 Lutheran pastors from the northern part of Illinois are expected to attend. The Rev. Charles A. Waech, J. E. A. Muller, Alfred Heerboth, Richard Piehler, and William J. Kowert are scheduled to address the meeting.

The midwest province of the Protestant Episcopal church has asked the bishop of Milwaukee and trustees of Nashotah college to allow them the use of that institution for three years more as a training school for church project workers. A pledge of $7,000 has been subscribed toward paying the interest on the indebtedness of the college, which will be undertaken by the church should the request be granted. The college has been used as an experimental station for the training of city workers, conferences, schools of method and demonstration schools for the last year.

Because of the failure to provide in the provincial budget for a continuance of the plan a special meeting was held this week at Warsaw, Ill., at which the action was indorsed.

The executive council of the Episcopal church announces a nation-wide preaching mission to be held in every parish during the first two weeks of the coming advent season, beginning Nov. 21.

The presiding bishop and council have issued a statement in which it is declared that "the supreme need of the hour is a revitalized Christian faith.

"On its spiritual side the recent nation-wide campaign revealed the fact that there is a latent potentiality in our church that would effect results of incalculable value, not only to the church itself, but to the nation," the statement conntinues. "No one can observe, even superficially, the trend of things following the world war without feeling gravely concerned about the church and its ministry.

"We are called upon today as never before to make our faith a living reality in the life of the nation. In many respects the call is more imperative than the 'call to the colors.'"

The Dean of Westminster, England, has appealed to the "people of the English speaking world" for funds to save the most historic sacred building in the empire, "especially appealing to the American people." The dean looks across the sea for money, since he states, the "war has depleted the resources of his countrymen to the point of not being able to preserve without assistance relics that they hold dear."

The sum needed to restore the fabric, which, in modern times has suffered heavily from the vibrations of street traffic, is set at £250,000 sterling, roughly $1,250,000.

In the last thirty years $500,000 and more has been spent in caring for the abbey.

ALMOST CREDIBLE

By Guy F. Lee

I doubt that dripping water ever wore away a stone,
Or that a woman lives who works her fingers to the bone.
It's past belief a bucket o'er was filled by the last drop,
Or that a girl would spend a day sans purchase in a shop.
I must be shown that haystack that has hid a needle—snork,
I scorn the charge that you can hear a pin drop on the floor.
I'm skeptic that a drowning man would monkey with a straw,
And that that self-same straw would break a camel's back—hee haw!
I'll tell the world a feather never knocked a person down—
I even think they stretch that yarn of Eve's fig-leafy gown,
Although as her fair daughters at present I perceive
That latter fallacy is not so darned hard to believe!

ART

School Children in Art Classes of Cleveland Museum

By Eleanor Jewett.

IT is sometimes interesting to go for a moment outside of our limited local circle and find what other places and other people are doing along our own lines of endeavor, but yet perhaps with a difference. Often suggestive hints may be gleaned in this way which will strengthen, in the long run, our efforts.

The following account I clipped from the New York Times because it seemed to point the way for making our institute art school possibly a little more effective. At all events there is food for thought in the story it tells.

The Cleveland Museum of Art is interested in providing opportunities for children of special talent to take drawing lessons in the museum building. These children are selected from the large number who by arrangement with the schools make daily visits to the museum and are brought together in after-school classes. The current bulletin describes the novel arrangement as it was developed in practice during the last school year:

"The plan finally reduced to a working possibility found a group of fifteen or more eager boys from nearby schools assembled in the classroom each Wednesday from 4 to 5 p. m., while on Saturday mornings an equal number of boys and girls from more remote schools were gathered from 9 to 11.

"Parents' consent was required for enrollment and the assurance of the classroom teacher that school standards were not lowered because of this added work. Since not more than 60 per cent of the pupils desiring membership could be enrolled, the children decided that two absences for avoidable causes should warrant the withdrawal of that member and the entrance of another. Absences were watched with unbelievable keenness by pupils eager to bring in chum or classmate.

"One of the best sketchers, who had reminded the teacher frequently of two friends, was questioned by her as to their relative ability. With utmost candor he answered: 'Herman does better than I do and John not quite so well.' Later the boy's estimate of ability proved entirely correct.

"The work of each class was quite informal except at the beginning of each period, when principles were discussed and quick sketches made for criticism. Certain sketches were required during the early lessons of the course, leading to a comprehension of accent, light and shade, texture, and the composition of a page.

"The classroom supply of baskets, helmets, pottery and carved wood furnished ample challenge for the first lessons. Later pupils were permitted to choose subjects for their sketches from the galleries. Proof is in evidence that they did not always choose wisely, also that time for sufficient suggestion and criticism was wanting; but there was seldom lack of persistent efforts to master a difficult, self-appointed task. The final lesson of the series was a meeting of both classes and the exhibition of all portfolios to the students and their visitors."

"The Pageant of Spring," by Henry Caro-Delvaille, a charming, decorative canvas in the exhibit of foreign paintings at the Art institute.

It is always pleasant when an honor comes to a Chicago woman, and when that honor strikes ever so little near the line of art we hastily seize it for mention in this column.

Mrs. Archibald Freer has recently accepted the nomination as chairman for Chicago of the "Marie Elizabeth Shelter for Tubercular Children" at Ostende. Mrs. Freer's work for Belgium began with the visit of Mme. Marie Depage, whose irreparable loss on the Lusitania may be remembered.

Dr. Vermeren, Belgian consul in Chicago, has just presented Mrs. Freer with the "Medal of Queen Elizabeth." This decoration was awarded her by King Albert on Dec. 22, 1919. The face of the medal is a beautiful profile of the queen, the reverse a bending figure of Charity with the inscription "Pro Patria Honore et Caritate." The medal is in bronze, one and one-quarter inch in diameter.

It is remarkable what some people consider as suitable in the way of art for the decoration of their homes. I received, not so very long ago, a notice to the effect that a certain sculpture group in bronze by a New York artist, Bashka Paeff, is to be put in the sun room of one of our larger homes. The group represents a young mother with her child, ready for the bath.

A photograph of the piece was sent to me. The mother and child are in the nude. It seems a charming bit of work for a museum or gallery or exhibit—but for a sun room? I doubt its appropriateness.

The figures are graceful—there is much to be said in appreciation of the beauty of the modeling, as far as the photograph speaks truthfully—but, to my mind, the group as a group would be better placed were it in a flowered, sunken garden, or perhaps on some pedestal to beautify a fountain. I cannot see it at all within the confines of four conventional walls of a family sun room.

We all know that the Chicago Historical society has done and is doing a splendid work in the preservation of many various things dealing with the past. Also we know that throughout the country other societies and other people are keenly interested in saving for the future the traditions and landmarks of what has gone before.

One of the newer of these societies and one of the most active is the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities. Recently a bulletin from their headquarters was sent to me, and the following paragraphs were so interesting I thought it worth while to place them here.

This society was organized in 1910 for the purpose of saving for future generations the rapidly disappearing architectural monuments of New England and the antiquities connected with its people. Since its foundation the society has been responsible for the saving of at least twenty-five buildings in various parts of New England, and of these seven have been acquired outright.

Naturally included with the houses of our ancestors are their furnishings—the furniture, household decorations, and utensils used in the bygone days, the clothing worn at various periods, the tools used in the trades—in fact, everything needed to preserve a complete record of the life of our forefathers. The society already has installed in its headquarters an interesting and comprehensive exhibit filling five rooms.

It is planned ultimately to have in a fireproof building in Boston a New England museum of the same general scope as the great national folk museums in Europe. In the library of the society is preserved a collection of photographs and engraved views of New England houses and scenes numbering over 30,000 examples. It also possesses measured drawings of many buildings erected during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries.

If such organizations could be brought together in each state of the union the value of their joint work would be enormous to future generations. Europe claims interest principally on the strength of its past and of those things which remain from its past. We have not lived long enough yet as a nation to have a past, but each century will build us one, if we treasure the significance of each with care.

MRS. GORDON A. RAMSAY

MRS. JOSEPH B. LONG

Mrs. Joseph B. Long of 48 Banks street has allied herself with the movement launched recently by Miss Emily Larned whereby women will stamp all their outgoing mail and checks with an "I'm for Harding" slogan. Mrs. Long has not opened her house in Wheaton this summer, preferring to remain in the city.

Mrs. Gordon A. Ramsay of Glencoe is another who has promised to aid the Republican cause by using and boosting the rubber stamp, which will be sold and the money devoted to the campaign fund.

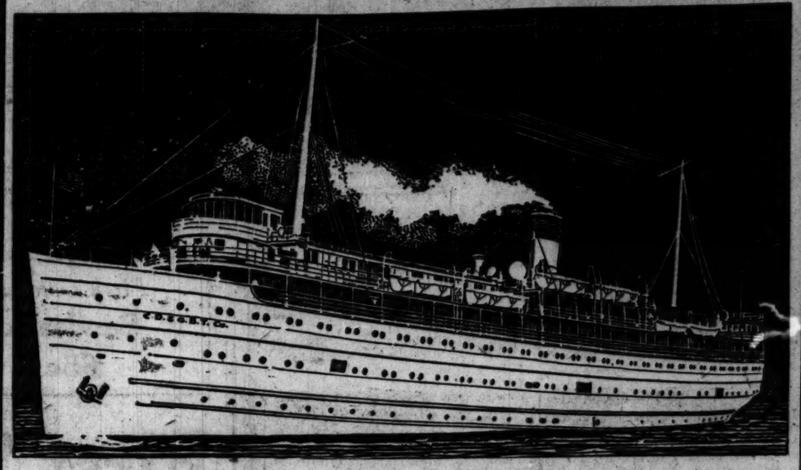
3 Days' Cruise $35

TO THE "SOO" AND RETURN Meals & Berth Included



The Big, New Passenger Steel Steamship "North American"

This three-day lake trip of joyful recreation, interesting and instructive sight seeing, offers a last opportunity this summer for a delightful vacation outing on the water. Leaving Chicago (Municipal Pier) at 1:30 P. M. (Chicago time), Monday, Aug. 30th, and gliding out into the cool refreshing waters of Lake Michigan, to arrive at the "Soo" on Tuesday. To see the great freighters raised and lowered in the immense locks is a sight to be remembered; to watch the Indians shooting the rapids is an exciting scene, and never to be forgotten is the all-daylight sail of 40 miles up the beautiful St. Mary's River.

Upon the return trip, arriving at Mackinac Island on Wednesday, where four hours stop will be made to allow passengers to ride around the island and visit the many historical points of wonderful interest. From there the steamer will cruise, slowly during Wednesday afternoon, through charming Green Bay studded with islands and lined with quaint, interesting towns. Then back into Lake Michigan, arriving Thursday at about 2:30 P. M. (Chicago time).

These are only a part of the many attractions offered and you will return fully rested and invigorated. The S. S. NORTH AMERICAN is one of the largest and most modern exclusively passenger steamships operating on the lakes, carries an orchestra, has beautiful ballroom, children's open-air playground; in fact, all you would expect to find on the largest Atlantic liners. Take advantage of this opportunity to take the family on this wonderful, inexpensive vacation cruise.

So many of our regular patrons having failed this season to secure accommodations on account of the great demand and therefore, been disappointed, we suggest that application be made early, as we can only carry as many passengers as berth capacity will permit.

IF WE COULDN'T TELL A LIE

"Where do you live now?"
"On a farm."
"Who's your nearest neighbor?"

"The Widow Maloney."
"I thought so."
"Why do you say 'I thought so'?"

"Because when I met her today she told me you had stolen one of her pigs. Is that correct?"

"It is. On account of the high price of pork, I killed and ate it."

"Well, well, there is a woman who is actually homelier than I am. Look over there to the—No, see if you can't find her for yourself."

"I can't seem to find her, dear."

"So, she's a business woman. What business is she interested in?"

"Everybody's."

"Maud says she uses lemon juice for her complexion."

"She'd look sweeter if she used orange."

"Why do you wish to get a divorce?"

"Because I'm married."

"Here's the report of another naval engagement."

"More fighting?"

"I suppose so. The captain is engaged to the admiral's daughter."

"Did the fashionable Mrs. Derich make you feel at home at her tea?"

"No. She made me wish I was."

"Have you any reason for wishing to marry my daughter?"

"No, I haven't any reason. I'm in love."

Semi-Annual Sample Shoe Sale

15000 Pairs Children's Shoes at Factory Prices

begins tomorrow 8:30 A.M.

For Young Women, Misses, Boys, Girls and Infants

Bear in mind, every pair of shoes offered in this sale are factory samples—shoes that the traveling men have exhibited to the wholesale trade—shoes that have been made with the greatest care, of the very finest leathers, by the most expert workmen. Also remember that only the best makers of children's shoes have contributed to this wonderful assortment—makers who use only the very finest of findings and leathers—makers with national reputations for quality merchandise. And also remember that every pair of these children's sample shoes were purchased by us considerably below makers' costs and are offered at prices that present extraordinary savings.

We Scooped the Market—A Stupendous Purchase of Six Carloads of Fine Granulated

SUGAR

Again the Leiter Building Stores step out in front—leading Chicago—leading the entire United States—with an astounding purchase and sale of fine quality granulated sugar, to be sold as follows: A pound with every 50c purchase made in any section of the store. You can go from one section to the other, purchase a suit, a hat, a pair of shoes, a necktie, a trunk, a lamp, yard goods, suite of furniture—in fact, anything in the store and every 50c of your purchases entitles you to buy one pound of sugar at 12½c per pound. If you spend $1 you may buy 2 pounds. If you spend $100 you may buy 200 pounds. There is no limit—no restrictions to the quantity you wish to buy whatsoever. The only reason that we make it necessary to make purchases before buying sugar is to prevent dealers from buying. Sugar will be sold at sugar booth at south end of Bargain Basement—no mail or phone orders accepted.

MISSISSIPPI WILDERNESS FALLING BEFORE GOOD ROADS ARMY

Work on Historic Trail Opens Vast Farming District

Grade Crossing Menace Also Cut in Heavy State Campaign

BY J. L. JENKINS.

LA CROSSE, Wis., Aug. 00.—[Special.]—What of the roads? Is Uncle Sam fully awake in this age of high speed he has created? Is he keep abreast of the Joneses in ...e for commercial development? ...e keep his head in the interna... marathon of after war recon...ction?

Let the world's greatest river valley ...ade factory answer your ques..., speaking from its grass roots, ...w they overcome national prob... every harvest season. He is. He ... But he is in the middle of the ...est job he has tackled since ...ham Thierry.

...d now one of the chief battle lines ...e new transportation fight runs ...h from St. Paul 155 strenuous ..., hammering its path through the ...y cliff fortifications of the Missis... salvaging the great waste places, ...aking to real life thousands of ... of rich farm lands from their ...enth century existence.

...r far back as 1680 the first fifty ...s of today's state highway played ...part in human affairs of the north... Then Father Hennepin, adven...ing far into river fastnesses and ...e smouldering civil war between ...ppewa and Sioux, found it winding ...eward to the lakes, a ribbon river ...d for Indian feet. Later it carried ...e grain of the valley to the first roller ...r mill of Minnesota in what is now ...astings, capital of Dakota county, ...d tapped the beauties of the Vermil... river dells. Winding on, far down ...e stream, it passed the stanch old ...ne built in 1830 at Wabasha, by ...ugustine Rocque, and bore its load of ...visions to and from the early trad... posts. It is hard surfaced today ...r some twelve miles out of St. Paul ...d graveled to Hastings, while new ...ecrete is being laid to help it carry ...e heavy traffic into Red Wing, where ...h fast becoming chief rival to the ...ad.

It continues a good road, fairly grad... and graveled along the foot of the ...autiful river bluffs for seventeen ...es into Lake City, with here and there stretches where it has been lifted from the marsh lands and carved into the bluffs side in easy grades. The engineering problem lies south of Lake City where the road climbs high into the hills and where sand and gravelly dirt make a heavy, sticky surface. Here the state and county forces are laboring, relocating lines and grades and cutting a way through the rock to open the important artery. Little or no work has yet been accomplished on Minneiska hill, a precipitous grade, impassable in bad weather and one of the most dangerous and difficult points in the state road system. All down the valley to Rolling Stone where more level going begins, nineteenth century farming and life is noticeable. Few trucks can negotiate the grades. Farmers at many points are practically marooned on their bleak hillsides, and progress has halted in her march. A similar hill is being battered by road forces south of Winona, where gangs are cutting a new grade line along the face of the worst of Winona county's river bluffs, working against time in order to get the crops down to La Crosse. The old road line drops down the sheer cliff face, and for years has dominated the farming community.

"That new road means bread and butter to me," declared an old timer proudly, stopping his mules to watch the work high up on the hill. "Seems like I been a thousand miles away from everybody for years. Couldn't git up or git down for provisions without a day's work. This is like puttin' in a new railroad to bring money into our pockets."

While waiting for paving prices to come down, the Minnesota highway department with the help of the railroads, is also centering its attention on the vital problem of eliminating grade crossings. On the St. Cloud road near Elk river a big fill and 27,000 yards of material have done away with two grade crossings which in the last few years have cost fourteen lives. On the Twin Cities-Duluth road 160 miles of paving is under way and eight grade crossings have been eliminated.

"Our truck transportation is still way ahead of the state," confessed State Engineer Mullen. "The truck transport lines operating in the northwest are now issuing monthly tariff sheets and operating exactly like the railroads. There are fifty lines maintaining truck service out of the Twin Cities, one operating trucks on schedule all the way to Fargo. On the trails in the touring season we find that an average of 500 vehicles a day are carried, and in a check recently we discovered that 25 per cent of the traffic is made up of foreign cars. We realize that Minnesota is growing to be a big part of the national transportation system that is vital today, and we are doing our best to make good in the new local and national development of roads."

Uncle's Stolen Car.

For any special occasions I could always depend on my uncle letting me borrow one of his cars. A classmate of mine in a nearby town was being married and we had arranged that I should drive over and take three of our friends. On the day of the wedding when I went for the car my uncle told me that the other one had been stolen late the night before.

We had started early to avoid the heat and were driving out of town when we were stopped by a policeman. We were enjoying ourselves and no doubt looked suspicious, for he wasted no words in telling me that was a stolen car. I explained that my uncle had a car stolen, but it was a different one. He was not much impressed and proceeded to take charge of us. I finally persuaded him to let me drive to my uncle's house first to prove I was right.

It turned out that my uncle had made a mistake in reporting the theft and had given the number of the wrong car. We were glad they had caught us so soon for we still had time to get to the wedding. MRS. F. J. C.

A Popcorn Blowout.

It was late Saturday night when three of us started from town with three bags of popcorn and a weak tire. I was driving and my brother and his pal were in the rear seat. Having left the pump at home, I was driving slowly and carefully.

All at once there was a sharp report from the rear which caused my heart to sink as I slammed on the brakes. My thoughts were too deep for words, but I managed to exclaim. "There goes that tire!" I got out to inspect the tire and found nothing wrong. Twice again the noise occurred, and each time I made an examination and rejoiced to find my tires in good shape.

The mystery remained unsolved until the next day, when several friends asked me if I had any more popcorn blowouts. The boys in the back seat had blown up the popcorn bags, held them over the side of the car, and broken them, giving a first class imitation of a blowout. F. J. C.

Too Slow for the Tire.

Driving down a hill at a rate considerably beyond the speed limit, I was surprised to see a tire on a rim go spinning by. It beat me to the foot of the hill and when I arrived was nowhere in sight. An inspection of the car disclosed that the tire had parted company with the off hind wheel. There was a stone fence near and I found the tire had gone over it. G. B.

Log of Two Tourists by Jenks

BEATING BACK.

THIS is the fifth and last chapter in a rambling yarn of the open road that has drifted casually over 3,000 miles of midsummer countryside. All journeys must end and all travelers must, in time, come home again. But the road goes right on wandering over the hills and far away into the sunset west—alluring, fickle, but ever new. The same wide fields are lying out there, stirring happily to the fresh flush of early morning, drowsing and growing under the noonday sun, hushed and mysterious at twilight. The old home towns bustle or loaf or just sit and wait under their great shade trees. On Wednesday night is prayer meeting. On Sunday people rest. The other days are calm, unhurried, clean.

If you are weary, worried, cheerful, gay, or just alive and well, it's a good old road to take. J. L. J.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 11.—There's such a thing as too much pep. Most of the energy of the great northwest has spilled over into Minneapolis. However, a goodly part of its lake wonderland has wandered in too, and people have certainly learned how to live to the nth degree in the summer time. It is a city crammed to its brim with pressing business and beautiful homes, each one of the latter harboring its own lovely lake. There is depth to St. Paul, and the old adventurous romance of early days still clings to its ultra modern life. Somehow you know that on the spot where the tea dancers shimmy there always has been a town. In the magnificence of its great cathedral and in the beauty of its Summit avenue drive remains the memories of its brave log chapel and the fearless tenacity of its original fifteenth century voyageurs.

Winona, Minn., Aug. 12.—Another story has been written of the good roads battle with this mighty old river and its hills. The river is slowly retreating and the hills have almost given up the fight as far south as Lake City. The first rain since early in July conspired with the hills against us after that first seventy miles. The senator supported our wambling roadster on the side of a precipice in five inches of clay mud while I fitted rear chains and a few minutes later a front spring broke. That I believe happens to be the only part about this contrary beast that has not yet given way and been rebuilt. We still retain a fair windshield and semi-efficient horn. An old man driving an old horse passed us and two other wayfaring cars in our first miring and both grinned.

"Howdy!" said the old man. "Ain't got time or I'd give you all a lift."

In the next ten miles we—all three cars—passed him three times and yelled "howdy." The old horse grinned each time he caught up with us then, and the old man bided his time confidently. We found him drawn up at the Wabasha filling station. "Howdy," said he.

Town of Minneiska looks harmless and the natives never breathe their secret. They let you go on blithely and start up what seems a gentle grade at mileage 100.7. At 100.9 you turn a sharp corner and run your nose into a perfectly perpendicular cliff. After awhile you realize it is still the road and start up through the mud. At 105.1, if you are still alive, you may turn another corner and look down on the wide world through dizzy space and readjust your brakes for the winding climb down. That, dear folks, is Minneiska hill. It is a wonderful feeling to roll at last through soft darkness into pretty Winona, nestling at the foot of her splendid bluff picture frame and climb wearily between clean sheets in a comfortable, high ceiled room of her comfortable old hotel.

La Crosse, Wis., Aug. 13.—Thirty-five miles of sheer beauty lies along the Minnesota side, beginning with "Sugar Loaf" at Winona's southwest

Left Hand Drive Called Dangerous on British Roads

Argument in Campaign Against American and French Cars

ACCORDING to a London newspaper, the British government is taking steps to decide whether more motor cars with steering wheels on the left hand side shall be allowed on the roads. The newspaper has made this an excuse to direct a campaign against American and French vehicles.

Col. Fred Cardway of the Packard Motor Export corporation has taken the matter up with most of the American manufacturers with the object of uniting them for concerted action. The feeling prevails that the agitation in England is against American and French cars in general and that the question of left hand steering is introduced merely to give a touch of disinterestedness to what might otherwise be thought a purely selfish movement.

"As manufacturers," says Col. Cardway, "we may safely rely on the common sense of the British public, which will not allow itself to be prejudiced against American products if it can be shown that the people back of the propaganda are guided by ulterior motives.

"It is obvious that if the left hand drive is dangerous for England, then the right hand drive must be equally menacing to the safety of Americans. Yet thirteen American motor vehicle companies are building cars or trucks with right hand steering. If you care to count the right hand drives you meet in American traffic, you will be surprised at their number. The Fifth avenue [New York] busses are all steered from the right hand side, and certainly should show an alarming number of accidents were the contentions of the propagandists true.

"It has been pointed out that traffic in Paris is nearly three times as fast as that in London, and 75 per cent of Paris cars are fitted with right hand steering (the rule of the road being to the right). Furthermore, many British cars were used in France during the war."

In an open letter to Gen. Sir Henry Maybury, director general of roads, Col. Cardway states:

"We have quantities of imported right hand drive vehicles in America, and no doubt British manufacturers expect to ship their product to this country as soon as they are in a position to do so. The thought came as to whether we should take in this country similar action—a matter which would be relatively easy, inasmuch as the automobile industry holds quite a prominent position in our country's business. However, such action would be very narrow minded, and not a gentleman's way of doing business. Therefore, I have suggested that in our efforts to clear the situation we avoid methods which are not dignified or which should not be used by men thinking internationally."

THE FAST MAIL.—A new record for a transcontinental automobile trip was made this month when a five passenger Essex touring car carrying United States mail made the trip from San Francisco to New York in four days, fourteen hours, and forty-three minutes. This beat a Hudson car record made in 1916 by twelve hours and forty-eight minutes. The Essex car, soon after its arrival in New York, started west at 12:01 a. m. (eastern standard), Tuesday, Aug. 10, and arrived at Chicago on Tuesday at 11:44:50 (central standard). Elapsed time, twenty-four hours, forty-three minutes, and fifty seconds. This lowered a previous record by one hour, six minutes, and ten seconds. The picture shows the car at Valparaiso, Ind.

Oil Production Rushes Forward to Meet Demand

Large gains in oil production and record figures for gasoline refining are shown in the latest government reports

Oil output during June was 37,219,000 barrels, or at the annual rate of 454,000,000 barrels. Last year the oil output was only 377,719,000 barrels.

Gasoline production for the month of May (June figures are not yet available) was 381,079,291 gallons. This is the highest yield on record. The April output was 355,597,451 gallons, and the figure for May, 1919, was 354,472,377 gallons.

Another interesting feature of the fuel situation is the continued increase in imports from Mexico. The June shipments from that country were 8,118,991 barrels, or nearly at the rate of about 100,000,000. This is nearly double the output of 1919.

Improved refining machinery which will get a greater yield of gasoline from oil is being widely introduced, which will, according to the officials of the American Petroleum institute, materially increase the supply of fuels suitable for motor vehicle use.

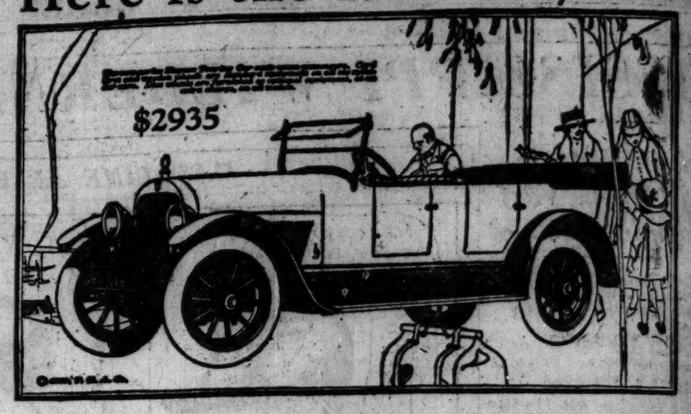
Here is the 1921 Haynes!



The NEW Series HAYNES TOURING CAR
A Car of Distinct Character

DISTINCTLY the latest and most advanced automobile—the new series Haynes Touring Car is presented just at the time such a car is uppermost in your thoughts.

Ninety per cent. Haynes built, it is a masterful exposition of the four factors of character which Haynes established and maintained—beauty, strength, power and comfort.

Its comfort is ideal—Haynes engineers have provided a 132-inch wheelbase and Haynes designers have created a wonderfully roomy tonneau, with deep, broad seats as comfortably inviting as the easy chairs and divans of a restful home.

Its beauty is distinct—the higher hood, with the majestic sweep of the body lines, the neat, artistic fittings, the fashionable upholstering of genuine leather—all these blend into a most dignified picture.

Its strength and power are such as always characterize Haynes productions. The famous Haynes motor, with its apparently unlimited reserve of velvety vigor and potent power, is the heart of its mechanical construction.

A new electric starting system simplifies the act of getting under way to the mere detail of pushing down a small lever on the instrument board instead of pushing a foot pedal.

Spacious compartments are provided for carrying various articles; large auxiliary chairs come into use when you wish to carry two extra passengers; a high arm rest enhances the comfort of the wide rear seat.

A Great Opportunity—Come in and See What You Can Buy With $300

If You Act at Once

The Lex-Sedan, at only $300 more than the Lexington Thorobred Sport model, is one of the greatest values ever offered to the motoring public.

In view of the general increase in motor car prices, the Lex-Sedan, at its present unraised price, is nothing short of a bargain.

IT will be months, if not years, before you can again get such automobile value as this opportunity offers.

The Lex-Sedan is partially or wholly convertible. Thousands of owners enthusiastically declare it is the finest and most satisfactory type of closed car.

It has all the advantages of the built-up type—Yet it is hundreds of pounds lighter, not clumsy and top heavy, but trim, easily handled, and economical of gas and tires.

To get this beautiful closed car means a wise investment now—and next year you will have the leading style vogue for closed cars.

We must be frank, however, and warn you not to delay.

Only Lexington can offer such value because of manufacturing advantages this company enjoys as a result of close co-operation between body and top builders. We believe you will agree that no other closed car anywhere near the price has a finer appearance.

And we are ready to demonstrate that no other car anywhere near the price can excel the Lex-Sedan in the quality of its construction and the fineness of its performance.

For only $300 more you can get the highly desirable and fashionable advantages of the closed car—if you act at once.

With the rainy fall and winter days just ahead, we urge you not to delay.

Note how the top and body merge into one harmonious unit. This big value is possible only because ten factories, specializing in motor car parts, are closely affiliated with Lexington.

When Lexington designers originated the Lex-Sedan they solved the closed car problem. They reversed the old order of simply putting a top on the body by building the body for the top. The result has been an unparalleled success.

It is perfectly appointed also. The head lining is of heavy velour, and the upholstery is of soft Spanish leather. The interior delights the heart of the most fastidious woman.

Two features, the Moore Multiple Exhaust System and the Lexi-gasifier, are found on no other car. They increase power, but use less gasoline. Many other features are equally notable, such as Anti-skid Cable Brake and the 2-Way Head Lamps, that prevent blinding glare.

Our allotment of these cars is limited. Avoid disappointment. Telephone, write or call upon us at once.

Highway to Connect 12 National Parks Now Being Planned

Road Scout on 3,500 Mile Trip to Look Over Routes

THE National Park to Park highway is in the making. Pathfinder A. L. Westgard is out scouting for roads to connect twelve national parks that lie between Denver and the Pacific. When he completes the 3,500 mile circle Dinosaur, Stephen T. Mather of the national park service and an official party will start the trail and put in two months' work, making a choice of routes. After visiting eight states and many counties, conferring with officials, and organizations and getting busy and help fix up the roads, the federal government will be asked to do its share. Within two years a magnificent scenic highway will be completed, to give with good Americans a chance to see America first in their own cars.

Denver is its natural starting point. Denver lies right in the middle of where three great continental highways hit the Rockies. These three highways are the Lincoln highway, the Pike's Peak ocean to Ocean highway, and the Santa Fé trail. And from each of these there is a cut-off to Denver. That's why the Rocky Mountain national park, seventy-five miles northwest of Denver, led all the national parks last season with an attendance of 111,492 visitors. It is nearest center of population and the easiest to reach.

Leaving Rocky Mountain and heading on to the north and west, the park to park motorist arrives in the region at Yellowstone, in the northwest corner of Wyoming; Glacier, in Montana, up against the Canadian line; Mount Rainier, in Washington, within sight of the Pacific. Then he turns to the south and comes to Crater Lake, in southern Oregon; Lassen Volcanic, Yosemite, Gen. Grant, Sequoia, in California. Here he cuts east and works back to Denver by way of Zion, in southern Utah; Grand Canon, in Arizona, and Mesa Verde, in the southwest corner of Colorado.

The Park to Park highway will ultimately connect with several more national parks, which are still in the making. Idaho has ambitions for an area in the Sawtooth range. Washington has two projects—Mount Rainier and Yakima. A "Save the Redwoods league" is promoting Redwoods national park in California, to preserve redwoods along the coast north of San Francisco. Lake Tahoe, on the California-Nevada line, wants to join the system. Utah wants another national park in and around Bryce canon, 200 miles north of Zion. New Mexico has been working for several years for a National Park of the Cliff Dwellers, Mount Evans, adjoining Denver's two national mountain parks on the west, will likely to be added to Rocky Mountain.

Roads by which these national parks can be visited are already in existence. They are good, bad and indifferent. And there is here and there a gap, demanding a detour.

The official party which is to travel over the pathfinder's route in September and October will make a triumphal progress, it is expected. Meetings will be held at the principal towns along the way. Local enthusiasts are planning to turn out and escort the party to hotel capacity. The make-up of the party will be something like this: Officers of the National Park Highway association, Director Mather and other representatives of the federal government, "Dirt General" Westgard and others of the A. A. A., official representatives of Colorado, Wyoming, Montana and other states; members of various interested organizations, and a public staff.

...d Scout on 3,500 Mile Trip to Look Over Routes

...HE National Park to Park highway is in the making. Pathfinder A. L. Westgard is out scouting for roads to connect the nine national parks that lie between here and the Pacific. When he finishes the 3,500 mile circle Director Stephen T. Mather of the national park service and an official party will hit the trail and put in two months making a choice of routes. After that the states and many counties, municipalities, and organizations are to survey and help fix up the roads. The federal government will be asked for its share. Within two years this magnificent scenic highway will be open for first in their own cars.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

What is the reason for the queer antics of my car? After running for an hour O. K. the motor will jerk powerfully five or six times, and unless the spark lever is pulled way down to the bottom it will stop dead. If the spark is retarded it will run along at a loggy gait. Have had a new pair of points put in recently.

H. G.

From the brief description given it is difficult to ascertain the exact cause of this jerking. If the engine is inclined to overheat we should attribute the difficulty to the cooling system, but if everything seems to operate satisfactorily it is possible that the spark coil becoming heated due to continuous operation is causing the trouble, and a test of this is advised.

Will you please let me know the best route from Chicago to Los Angeles by way of Phoenix, Ariz.? F. J. D.

After leaving Davenport take the River road to Des Moines, going south through Winterset, Bedford, Savannah, St. Joseph, and Platte City to Kansas City. From Kansas City follow the Santa Fé trail to Santa Fé, N. M. Go south to El Paso, taking the borderland trail to Los Angeles through Phoenix.

Non-Skid Tests Feature of Coming Safety First Show

PRACTICALLY all the big tire manufacturing companies will participate in the non-skid tests that are to form an important feature of the Safety First expedition, Aug. 23 to 27. This exposition will be held in conjunction with the traffic officers' convention in San Francisco.

Importance of success in the non-skid tests from the standpoint of consequent value in national avertising has influenced a number of the larger companies to enter the competition.

Of interest will be the complete working model of the new signal system which the New York police department delegation is to take west.

Other events of interest of the convention-exposition program are the air brake tests, both of trials within the exposition hall and of outdoor tryouts on some of San Francisco's steepest hills, and the headlight control tests, which will try out various new devices for giving adequate light at night without dangerous glare.

Before You Buy Another Tire

you owe yourself this investigation

More than 1,000,000 motorists in the United States have found a way of cutting their tire cost in half.

They are getting 10,000 to 15,000 miles out of the same kind of tires that you have been throwing away after 5,000 to 6,000 miles.

You too can benefit by the same kind of a saving if you will take advantage of it.

The tires now on your car—even though they are tread worn and scarred with service—can be made to double their mileage.

It's the Gates Half-Sole Tire that has upset all the old extravagant and wasteful ideas about tires and they are revolutionizing the tire business.

Business houses and car owners everywhere—now over a million of them in the United States alone—have taken advantage of this big saving.

There are now 2,153 authorized Gates Half-Sole Tire service stations in the United States. There is one near you and there's a trained expert there ready to give you service.

MOTORDOM

Gasoline Saving Initial Duty of Modern Motorists

Tricks in Economy Are Outlined to Aid in Campaign

BY HIGH SPEED.

THE present situation in the motor fuel field is such that all of us must bend every effort to conserve gasoline in every possible way, not only by obviating actual waste, but by getting the utmost out of the gas that we do use. There is no shortage in most sections of the country, but there may easily be one if we are not careful in our use of this new precious fluid.

Economy, like charity, begins at home. If we can impress on the individual car owner the fact that every fuel waste must be multiplied by 8,000,000 to arrive at the grand total, he may see why the spoonful or so of gas he wastes per day is really important. If each of the 8,000,000 car owners in the country wastes half a pint of gasoline per week, the total amounts to 500,000 gallons each week, or 21,000,000 gallons per annum. That is why each of us must do his individual best if we are to avoid a shortage of motor fuel in the near future.

The first point of attack in the campaign to cut down fuel consumption is the carburetor. It has been said that the average car owner runs his engine on a fuel mixture nearly twice as rich in gasoline as it needs to be; in fact, the engine will give its best work on a mixture as lean as possible. Practically all modern carburetors have a wide range of adjustment, so that all the air needed may be got by adjusting the instrument itself. It is a very simple matter to set the carburetor for more and more air until the mixture is too thin for operation and then turn back until the engine is running smoothly again with maximum air intake. This question of fuel mixture is a very important one, since, if American motorists habitually ran on a mixture that was twice as rich as need be, the consumption of gasoline would be just twice as great as the actual needs. In the interest of patriotism, then, let every car owner make sure that he is using a mixture just as lean as is consistent with proper operation. Moreover, the engine may actually run better on the leaner mixture, to say nothing of the reduction of carbon deposits that will ensue.

Having adjusted the carburetor to supply the proper fuel mixture, the entire fuel system ought to be gone over. Dirt in the pipes, rust in the strainers, or foreign matter in the gasoline tank help to cut down the efficiency of the whole engine. Leaks in the system should be carefully hunted down and eliminated. This means not only actual leaks, but power leaks, for wasted power means additional consumption of fuel to make good the deficiency.

In this category will be found a muffler clogged with soot, resulting in back pressure, which cuts down the efficiency of the engine. Carbon deposits in the cylinders cause waste of power and excessive consumption of fuel. It will be noted that this problem of fuel waste is cumulative in effect. If the fuel mixture is too rich, it not only wastes fuel directly, but produces carbon deposits in the cylinders and soot in the muffler, which cause further useless dissipation of the fuel energy. In connection with carbon deposits, it might be desirable to install one of the vaporizing devices, which inject water vapor in the combustion chamber. While these vaporizers do not remove carbon deposits that have already formed, they do tend to prevent future formations.

Improperly seated valves are another source of power losses. They should be accurately ground in, at intervals or whenever any doubt is felt as to their condition.

With the present day grades of fuel, it is important that all possible heat shall be used in the process of carburetion. Various methods are used to carry the heat of the exhaust to the inlet manifold to insure the thorough vaporization of the heavy gasoline that we get today. The motorist who is using an engine without equipment for utilizing the heated air for the processes of carburetion should have a device of this sort installed.

Now good carburetion and all the rest of the list will be of no avail unless the ignition system is functioning at maximum efficiency. The battery must be kept fully charged, the connections at plugs, ignition unit, and coil must be kept clean and tight to insure a good hot spark in the combustion chamber.

The foregoing suggestions deal with fuel leaks and power losses at the fountain head in the engine. But power losses do not end here, for other parts of the mechanism exert on influence on the performance of the car as a whole. If the lubrication of the various parts of the mechanism is not properly attended to, friction results, which causes wasteful consumption of power. A clutch that slips wastes an enormous percentage of the power delivered to it. If the wheels are out of alignment a dragging is set up, which consumes power. Brakes that drag or are otherwise out of order consume power. So it will be seen that this question of fuel waste is a fairly wide one, and reducing waste to the minimum involves keeping the car generally in efficient running condition.

A good deal of gasoline is wasted in the garage before it ever gets into the tank. For instance, many car owners wash small parts in gasoline. Kerosene is better for this purpose and does not cost so much.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

FORMAL opening of the new salesroom and executive offices of the Elgin Motor Car Sales company, 2427 Michigan avenue, last week took hundreds of motor enthusiasts to the Elgin building and new service station. A fifty foot bay window, replete with colored illuminating effects, proved the most novel of many modern features in the sales plant, which, less than a year ago, began as a twenty-five foot store on Chicago's "motor row."

The Jaffe Radiator company, Lytton building, has taken over selling rights in Illinois and contiguous territory for the Mayer carburetor for Fords.

Walter Daly, sales manager for the Columbia Motors company, has announced the appointment of the Dorris Chicago company as distributor for the new Columbia Six line of cars in this district. Louis J. Sherland is president, Franklin L. Beck is vice president, and S. G. Ingraham is secretary-treasurer of the Dorris company.

The new Marmon 34 speedster, the first two passenger car built by the Nordyke & Marmon company, is now coming through production. The car, low hung and racy, has numerous refinements and comfort features.

The Chicago branch of the Kelly-Springfield Motor Truck company was turned over to H. S. Dunlavy, its new branch manager, last week.

J. Paul Doherty, a veteran of Detroit factories and the army technical and engineering division of the air service, has been given charge of the Reo Motor Car company's service station in Chicago, according to announcement made by Harry Unwin, Chicago branch manager.

THE ITINERARY.

gateway into the ridges and ending at the La Crosse iron bridge. The state road, excellent gravel, graded clay and fair dirt, climbs to the tip top of the tallest ridge and rides it all the way, breaking through tall corn and great trees to its sheer edge periodically to throw open splendid, breath-taking vistas of beautiful valley, tiny white towns a score of miles away and the cool depths of wooded ravines. If Europe had half of this road a thousand innkeepers would make a thousand fortunes and Americans would come home to tell about it breathlessly to the Art club.

Tightened the windshield when we got in and it cracked all across at the first bump in the pavement!

Kilbourn, Wis., Aug. 14.—Folks with a taste for landscape loveliness, heavy timbered hills, wandering little brooks of cold, clear water and the best of Wisconsin scenery will do well to take state highway 33 east from La Crosse over the hills to Baraboo. It is a new road, very new and still under construction in the highest hills, a road that before long will add twenty per cent to the already bright luster of the state's splendid highway system. Old log houses still hide along the way. You'll find a busy, fussy little branch line train blocking all of the crossings it can about Reedsburg, and you'll meet hill people who will go barefoot and have pleasant, tanned faces and clear eyes. Baraboo overflows with Illinois cars and the smallest town in Wisconsin is ready to serve the tourist in every possible way both mechanically and in all other phases of traveling comfort. Table smooth gravel runs everywhere after one leaves the west hills, where very soon the same sort of patrolled road will invite all travelers. Macadam and concrete runs north from Baraboo to the Dells. Here, too, Illinois pretty nearly crowded Wisconsin off the automotive map.

Madison, Wis., Aug. 15.—Wisconsin roads can't be very bad. We came over the worst via Baraboo and Portage, then south on No. 10 trunk, and found them fair to good leading to this, the prettiest state capital anywhere in the middle west. The cathedral chimes at high noon throw a fitting loveliness over the white, lake bound city.

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 16.—You'll find all you are looking for in a road by taking highways 12, 41, and 19 west to the city of erstwhile beer. We have finished an evening run climaxed by reinforced concrete surface good enough to carry its 1,000 cars a day all the way from Waukesha.

Chicago, Aug. 17.—Home on Sheridan road in three hours and a fraction, stopping en route to lament on the illness of the old home macadam in spots and to grin and bear the road in Zion City, where that new concrete stretch is under contract, and may, eventually, be laid.

And now, if you care to, bunch all the desirable traits in cities we have talked about, add 50 per cent, and write Chicago, grand an' glorious feelin' and your own—

Finis.

Bows to Chicago.

The Lafayette motor car, heralded abroad and throughout America as the most conspicuous contribution to automotive engineering of recent years, made its Chicago début a few days ago, when a Lafayette touring car, powered by the advanced eight cylinder engine, was placed on display by the Lafayette-Smith Motors Co. in the McCormick building, pending completion of their South Michigan avenue building. Local motorists, appreciative of fine automobiles, inspected the car and found many features upon which to focus their admiration.

Make Highways Safe by Observing the Rules of the Road

Secretary Emmerson Wants Motorists to Know and Obey the Laws

A CAMPAIGN in the interest of safety on the highways has been started by Secretary of State Louis L. Emmerson, who administers the automobile laws. Mr. Emmerson has issued a pamphlet containing a digest of the safety first laws concerning automobile drivers, and calling attention to the necessity of the strict observance of these laws if the highways are to be safe.

"Failure to observe the simple rules of the road results in the death or injury of scores of persons in Illinois every year," Mr. Emmerson says in the pamphlet. "These rules have been incorporated in the automobile and road laws of the state. Their observance is not only advisable for safety on the highways—it is enjoined by statute and penalties are provided for violation.

"Proper administration of the automobile laws is one of the first concerns of the secretary of state. Under authority of the law, he appoints annually several hundred men from various sections of the state to act as voluntary automobile investigators. These men, who serve without pay, are leading citizens in their communities, interested in the safety of the highways. Much good has come from this service, but if accidents are to be avoided every driver of an automobile must familiarize himself with the laws of the road and strictly adhere to them."

Secretary Emmerson points out that according to the interstate commerce commission there were 2,270 automobile accidents at railroad grade crossings in 1918, with 1,131 fatalities. During 1919 420 persons were killed in automobile accidents in Chicago.

Among the provisions of the law to which attention is called in the pamphlet are the following:

The automobile must be driven over a railroad grade crossing at a speed exceeding ten miles per hour, and at all grade crossings where "stop" signs are placed the car must be brought to a full stop before proceeding over the crossing.

The speed limit at which an automobile may be driven is ten miles per hour in the business sections of cities, fifteen miles per hour in the resident sections, twenty miles per hour inside city limits, but outside the business or resident sections, and not to exceed thirty miles per hour on the public highway. Every motor must be equipped with good brakes and a suitable signaling device.

The license of a chauffeur may be revoked on the ground of drunkenness, and a drunken driver may be fined $200 and sentenced to jail for sixty days.

No person under 15 years of age is permitted to drive an automobile on the public highways unless accompanied by the owner of the vehicle or a licensed chauffeur.

A vehicle approaching from the right has the right of way.

Keep to the right in passing a vehicle coming from the opposite direction.

Signal and pass to the left of a vehicle going in the same direction.

The driver must signal his intention of turning or stopping by outstretched arm, or otherwise.

The pamphlet contains statistics showing the frequency of accidents due to failure to observe these rules. Copies will be sent to the automobile drivers of the state. The campaign is launched at this time because it is the beginning of the season when there is the greatest amount of travel on the roads.

THE EXPERTS SAY—

In overhauling the car the wise owner keeps a pail of kerosene at hand in which to immerse various small parts. An ingenious owner recently hit upon an excellent idea. He fitted in the bottom of this pail a strainer with legs lifting it about three inches from the bottom of the pail. In this way dirt and sediment are caught and the kerosene keeps cleaner for a longer time.

An easy way of replacing valve springs consists of compressing each spring in a vise until it is short enough to go easily into place and allowing the holding key to be inserted, and, while in this compressed condition, tying it with wire so that it cannot expand. After it is in place and the key is put in the wire is clipped and removed.

Castellated nuts have a way of tightening up between notches. If the nut is screwed up to the notch ahead it is too tight, while the notch back is too loose. This trouble can be cured by careful filing of the face of the nut, so that it can be screwed to the notch ahead.

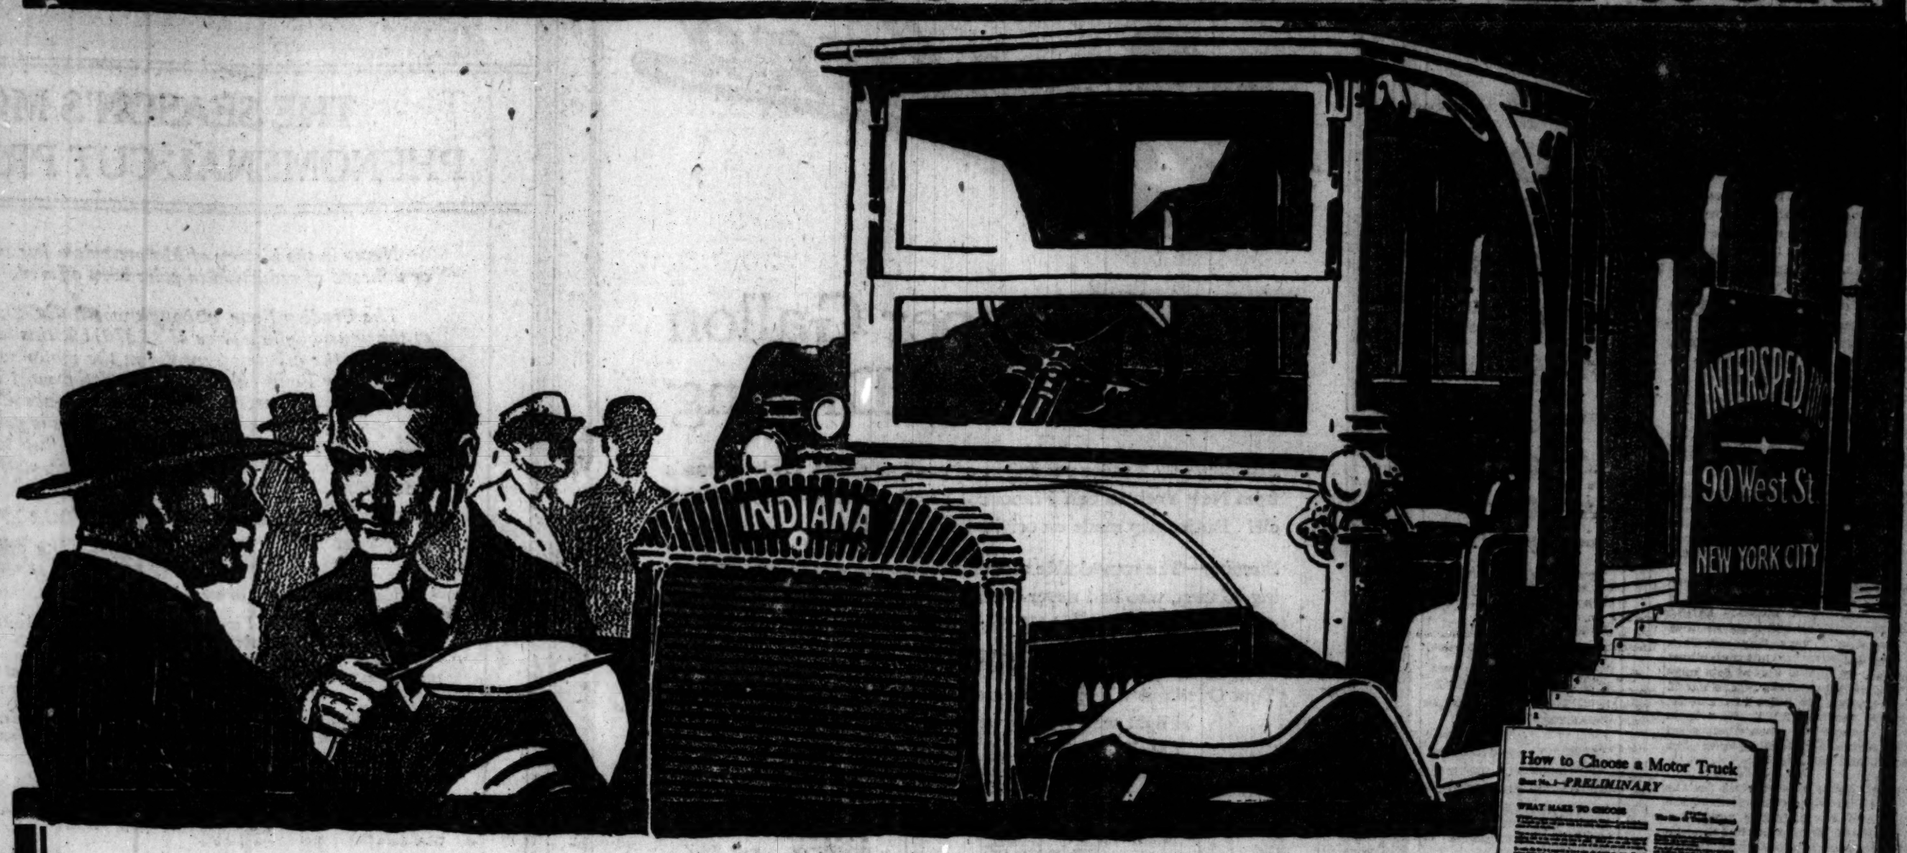
How to choose a Motor Truck



BEFORE you choose a make of truck you must decide what size truck you need. All truck makers do not make all sizes. Your size requirement limits the list of trucks you can choose from.

There is wastage in oversizes and danger in undersizes. We will gladly send a representative to help you settle this important question, or write for our guide, "How to Choose a Motor Truck," which explains how the problem is solved.

When you know the size, make a list of the leading trucks produced in that size. Then ask the maker of each truck six questions and compare their answers. The following six points cover the fundamentals of selection. The truck you choose should satisfy all six.

1 Compare the Factories Behind the Trucks

Any machine shop can assemble a truck and sell it. But there is no security behind such a truck. The factory may go out of business at any time—leaving an orphan truck on your hands. The make is discontinued. You can no longer secure the necessary parts or obtain service of any kind.

And if a factory is suffering financially, they must skimp on the value built into their trucks. You will find a shortage somewhere in the mechanism. The quality cannot be there.

In choosing an INDIANA TRUCK you know the INDIANA factory dates back to 1898. You know this factory has devoted full capacity exclusively to INDIANA truck production for the past nine years—always in the most robust financial condition. You know this record means security. Financial rating AAA-1.

Investigate the other factories before you choose.

2 Compare the Service Behind the Trucks

Buying a truck without a reliable service station behind it is like buying a Swiss watch. Nobody can fix it without importing the necessary parts.

You will need parts. No truck can run forever. Waiting too long for parts or any other delay in service means loss of time and money. An idle truck is a losing truck. The length of time your crippled truck is idle depends altogether on the service stations back of it.

The INDIANA Service Stations are as thoroughly equipped as any of the best truck service stations in the United States.

These stations can quickly supply you with any one of 75,000 parts—every part for every INDIANA model.

And the INDIANA Service Stations are manned by mechanics who know the INDIANA bolt for bolt.

Investigate the other service stations before your choose.

3 Compare the Number of Truckmen Owners

You are a better judge of the machinery you use than the man who knows nothing of your business.

The best judge of a motor truck is the man whose business is trucking—the man who makes his living operating trucks—the man who must make each truck pay a daily profit. So ask the truckman when you investigate experience of owners. His advice counts most.

Of course it is significant that so many trucking concerns operate INDIANA MOTOR TRUCKS exclusively. They have their reasons which they will gladly explain to you. We will be glad to send you their names.

Find out how many truckmen use the other trucks you have in mind.

4 Compare the Prices of the Trucks

The price of a truck means nothing. It's the price per mile of service that counts. Many trucks—even the highest priced trucks—deliver less than 50,000 miles of service. The first INDIANA built is still running in good condition. It has covered more than 100,000 miles.

INDIANA prices are low per mile of service and low by direct comparison.

In an INDIANA you purchase more than 100,000 miles of service and pay the same price (or but little more) that you would pay for a truck which can only deliver 50,000 miles of service.

Compare the first price of those other trucks—compare the price per mile of service.

5 Compare the Specifications Point for Point

Just as a precaution—to see if the other trucks are as thoroughly standardized in all points as the INDIANA. The INDIANA TRUCK CORPORATION makes trucks exclusively and all INDIANA TRUCKS are standardized throughout. There is a total absence of "special features" and other "Special" parts, so often found in trucks made by factories with divided interests, who find it necessary to offer something "Special" to the buyer.

We will gladly send you the INDIANA specifications. We are proud of them. We know the INDIANA mechanical score is equal to any and bettered by none. No truck has ever delivered more miles of uninterrupted service. More money could not build a better truck or the INDIANA factory would build it.

Compare the specifications of the other trucks you have in mind.

6 Compare the Reserve Capacity

Reserve capacity is that surplus of structural strength which stands between your load and the road.

But reserve capacity does not mean you can overload your truck. It is rather like your reserve of physical strength—not to be taxed, but there when you need it. Without this reserve, a truck loaded to full capacity will break when it meets an extra strain.

There is 113% reserve capacity in every INDIANA TRUCK, no matter whether it is a 1½, 2, 2½, 3½ or 5 ton truck.

This may explain how INDIANA TRUCKS have done what no other trucks could do. There is an INDIANA record over rough Kentucky roads where many other trucks were tried. They failed. An INDIANA TRUCK was tried and is still running on those roads which it has traversed for 93,600 miles.

Investigate the reserve capacity behind those other trucks.

To help you choose the right truck

—we have prepared an analysis of the motor truck market. This loose sheet analysis, or buying guide, makes it easy for you to compare the trucks you have in mind by the six principles described above.

On each sheet one of the six questions is answered for the INDIANA. Blank spaces are left for the answers of other truck makers. You simply fill in these blanks—add up your results like a column of figures—and the truck best suited to your purpose stands clearly before you.

It is the simplest, yet surest method of truck selection ever devised. Write today for a complimentary copy of "How to Choose a Motor Truck," and answer once for all the question of what truck to buy. Write us on your business letterhead.

THE SECONDARY PLANETS.

THERE are two moons in the solar system that are larger than the planet Mercury. One of them is almost the size of the planet Mars. There are five moons among the planets that are larger than our moon, and three that are only slightly smaller.

The two satellites that exceed Mercury are Ganymede, a moon of Jupiter, and Titan, a moon of Saturn. Three moons of Jupiter and two of Saturn are larger than our own attendant; while one of Jupiter, one of Saturn, and one of Neptune are only a score or two of miles less in diameter.

A moon is the attendant of a planet. The sun is the absolute ruler of the solar system, and no planet, not even the giant Jupiter, is strong enough to influence him. The sun holds eight planets and a host of lesser planetules in subjection, and forces them to revolve around him.

Counting outward, the planets are Mercury, Venus, the earth, Mars, the Asteroids, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, and Neptune. Although a slave to the sun, each of the planets is supreme in its own orbit. Six of the eight have attendants in their turn, which they force to revolve exactly as they themselves are forced to circle about the sun.

Even a few of the little asteroids have moons. The earth has one moon, Mars has two, Jupiter nine, Saturn ten, and a cloud of moonlets shaped into a ring, Uranus four, and Neptune one.

Jupiter is 1,300 times as big as the earth, and so it is natural to find him holding the largest moons. Saturn comes next with an odd assortment of very large and very tiny satellites. The earth is a rather unusual planet to be able to handle a moon so large in proportion to its size. The earth, you know, is 8,000 miles in diameter, while the moon is 2,163. Seen from space, the earth and moon would seem much more like a double planet than a planet and satellite.

One of Mar's moons rises in the west and sets in the east. Both of the satellites of our neighbor world are very small, no larger than huge mountains. Some of Jupiter's and Saturn's moons are also in this class and, as they so nearly resemble the free asteroids which travel nearby, there is reason to believe that they are really asteroids taken captive and forced to obey two masters.

Neither Mercury nor Venus have moons. They lay too near the sun as they were formed, and that huge ball pulled their moons away, and swallowed them up himself.

G. F. Cramer:, If all light rays emerged from the sun in sets of strictly parallel beams we should have zones of light and darkness in our sunshine. Light is radiated in all directions, however, and beams from all over the sun completely fill every space, so that daylight is continuous.

G. E.: Mars has seasons like the earth. The average temperature on that world is about 46 degrees Fahrenheit, about like that of a clear, cold, sunshiny day in spring. The longest canal is 4,000 miles long. Canals often are as long as the Mississippi river. Open water on Mars is rare; the planet is mainly a desert world. Certain regions are thought to be covered with plants by the way they change color with the seasons. We have no idea at all of what the Martians may be like.

J. B. B.: The meteor, that struck Lake Michigan last fall occurred on Thanksgiving eve. It broke a great many windows in Michigan and damaged electrical stations. Observers saw it plunge through the clouds (it was raining at the time) and fall into the water. The light from it illuminated the surrounding state for many miles.

B. B. C.: No telescope larger than nine feet across is practical at the present development of mechanics. The difficulties of casting and grinding the glass and the waves of wind and heat in the air are the features which now baffle the telescope engineer.

R. R. T.: It is doubtful if the earth ever was strictly molten in the liquid sense. It is too full of lumps deep in the interior to have ever been very plastic.

Why Does Packard Service Save the Truck Owner Money

IF motor truck owners here in town would spend an hour or two in the different service stations, they would learn a lot of things about keeping their trucks on the job—and cutting down excessive service charges.

They could see for themselves the trucks as they come in for repair—the parts that break—and who is to blame.

• • •

Come around to our service station and personally meet our Service Manager.

Have him explain Packard's unique service methods. See for yourself how thoroughly we first inspect each vehicle as it comes off the road.

And how you agree with us, on a fair charge before repair work is started.

The Uniform Stock-keeping Method which we use not only prevents running low on any item, but accelerates delivery and prevents waste.

BACK of Packard Service is a unique Factory, devoted solely to the production of Packard repair parts.

When you own a Packard there is no delay in waiting for parts. Orders received by the factory in the morning are shipped that night.

Our new $800,000 Service Building at 37th and Princeton, completed August 1, absolutely insures the quickest possible attention at this end.

Inspect our service equipment—our labor-saving machines and special tools. Every Packard mechanic is Packard trained.

• • •

Those not acquainted with Packard trucks will be surprised to see how little work has to be done on the average Packard in for repair.

Some Packards right in this vicinity have operated for two, three, four, and even five years, and have never been in for overhaul.

We say a Packard truck will not only give you more miles for your dollar, but a lower operating and maintenance cost than any other truck we know of.

America in Great Need of Expert Agriculturalists

By Frank Ridgway.

TODAY America's most important industry, agriculture, faces a shortage of trained men. Agriculture must be improved greatly or the United States must increase its imports, or the people of this country must eat less. Farming must be put on a substantial and economical basis.

To do this the best brains of the country will be needed. The sweeping changes that have been taking place in the economic world during the last few years have brought farmers to a realization that haphazard methods of producing and marketing will actually result in loss. Science and business must be combined to make a success of farming.

With more than half the inhabitants of the United States in cities and towns, and a tendency toward unsettled farms demanding more intensified methods of cultivation, farmers have a big problem to solve in order to furnish an adequate supply of food. America has no problem to solve which surpasses in its far reaching importance that of providing for a national food supply," is the opinion of B. H. Hubbard, agricultural economist of the University of Wisconsin. He is thoroughly convinced that it would be fatal for the industrial leaders to continue to assume that what happens to agriculture and rural life is not of their concern.

"America cannot afford to have cities and towns built at the expense of the country. Economic conditions must be such as will permit standards of living in the country to keep pace with the city. It is the duty of every thinking man to interest himself in keeping America a food exporting nation, rather than to allow her to become dependent upon others for her food supply," he says.

More Science Needed.

Agriculturists who are attempting to analyze the present day farming tendencies and recommend means of correcting conditions, say that more science and business principles must be injected into operations on the farm. Educating the men who take charge of the farms in the future is the solution, they believe. All forces must be put to work. Agricultural colleges are being called upon the stage to play the leading rôle.

The future generation of farmers must be equipped with a thorough knowledge of marketing as well as production. "A farmer who is developing the fine farm that he hopes to turn over to his boy some day should devote as much time to the boy as to the farm," says Alfred Westfall of the Colorado agricultural college. "He should make the boy proud of his business. He should develop in him an early interest in agricultural matters."

The business of farming is becoming more complex all the time. The day when a man goes out to work on a farm when he can't do anything else is gone. He must use more or less science if he is to get the greatest yields of corn, wheat, oats, clover, or other crops; produce more milk in the cheapest and most efficient way, and fatten cattle and hogs by the quickest and most economic methods.

The farmer must know a lot of facts if he is to continue in the business successfully. The best place for him to get these facts and learn the business of farming is in the agricultural colleges. It takes time and patience to study out all the fundamentals of farming, just as it takes times and patience to master medicine or law.

Farming Is Lifetime Business.

"The young man who has finished a four year course in high school and expects to devote his life to farming should take a four year course in agriculture." This is the advice of Prof. M. L. Fisher, Purdue university. "Graduating at 18, he has an active future of forty to fifty years," he said. "Farming is a lifetime business, and four years in college is none too long to prepare for such a future.

"Although agriculture has been studied in high school in some cases, it is usually of a very elementary nature and does not involve many of the underlying sciences. Scientific agriculture is founded upon the principles of chemistry, biology, and physics; and the future farmer must know more of the fundamental principles of the sciences and their application to his work than the present generation of farmers. Farming is becoming more specialized and competitive every day, and the young man going into it without complete preparation will find in twenty years that he is far behind the procession of progressive farmers."

Most of the state universities of the corn belt can give high grade instruction in agricultural lines. Some of them have special features in which they excel. Agricultural colleges are generally growing, with boys and young men attending them from both the farm and city. The large sized classes graduated each year from the various agricultural colleges throughout the country indicate the importance of such schools. For instance, the agricultural college at Purdue had 804 students enrolled and 128 graduates in 1917. In 1897 only twenty-five students were registered in the college, and four were graduated, which indicates the rapid growth the school has made in recent years.

Experts in various phases of agriculture are in great demand. Last year every man of the eleven graduates in dairying at Iowa State college had located a position before graduation.

While this is only their first year out of college, some of them are receiving salaries of $4,000 a year, and the average for the entire class is $2,258. Four of them are in educational work, one is in charge of the dairy department of the University of South Africa, one is state dairy inspector, and the other six are in commercial work.

Demand for Dairy Experts.

"There is an unusual demand for men who have been properly trained and educated in commercial dairying," says M. Mortensen, head of the dairy department at Iowa State college. "The department gets one or more calls for such men daily."

In discussing the opportunities on the farm for young men today, E. T. Meredith, secretary of agriculture, says: "Many young men in the various occupations of the city find their minds turning to thoughts of the outdoor life of the farm, but they do not know how to start farming.

"Living conditions in the country are not what they were a generation ago. A lot of our notions about farm drudgery and hard living and isolation are ideas carried over from an early period, where there were no electric lights, no bathtubs, no rural free delivery, and when an automobile on the farm was as rare as an airplane today." All of these things that Mr. Meredith mentions indicate the knowledge that a farmer must have in order to run his own business without calling in an expert to help him.

Farmer Must Be Versatile.

"As a matter of fact," says A. W. Jamison, University of Illinois, "a farmer has to know more different things than any one else I am acquainted with. A farmer must know about the weather, grain, machinery, gas engines, power plants, and live stock. He must be able to follow the markets and sell and buy at the right time; otherwise he will lose money."

The methods that have been employed in agriculture in the past cannot be depended upon in the future. Many problems are yet to be worked out, and more trained men will be needed to do it.

Dr. H. J. Waters, former president of the Kansas Agricultural college, says: "Most of the farm wealth which has accumulated within the last quarter of a century has come from an increase in the value of farm land. This is a source of income to the farmer which many believe cannot be depended upon in the future. If we are at the end of this advance in a large way, then the farmer of today must begin to look to other sources of gain."

If We Couldn't Tell a Lie

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

"THERE'S MORE A-MARRYIN' THAN'S A-DOIN' WELL."

When I receive a stately note
Which seems in solemn words to gloat
Beneath the formal notice sent
By two on matrimony bent,
I visualize a radiant pair
And savor orange blossoms fair;
And then my thoughts they kinder stray
To what my mother used to say
When she would hear the wedding bell:
"There's more a-marryin' than's a-doin' well."

And when they pass me two by two
Like Noah's immemorial crew,
I gaze upon them in distrust
And murmur, "Surely now there must
Be some mistake . . . it can't be so,
They're wed, but to each other? No!"
And yet the quaint procession wends
And never pauses, never ends . . .
While low I hear this anthem swell:
"There's more a-marryin' than's a-doin' well."

A misanthropic flout and jeer?
A carpers' croak? A cynic's sneer?
I do not think nor ever thought
In cynicism this was wrought,
No, mothers have to live a heap
And all their days are full and deep,
And oft their simple speech will show
A wisdom rarer than we know—
On mother's words, how one might dwell:
"There's more a-marryin' than's a-doin' well."

VALPARAISO, INDIANA

Departments—Education, Arts and Sciences, Engineering, Pharmacy, Law, Pre-Medicine, Dentistry, Home Economics, Public Speaking, Music, Manual Training, Preparatory, High School, Commerce, Phonography and Typewriting.

While the expense in all departments is exceedingly low, this reduced cost has not been brought about by sacrificing a high grade of instruction but by applying business principles to the management so that the most satisfactory accommodations for board and room may be had at $30.00 per quarter of 12 weeks. Tuition, $25 per quarter of 12 weeks or $65 per year of 48 weeks, if paid in advance. If the entire tuition is paid in advance for a year, it includes instruction in all departments except Law, Dentistry and private lessons in Music.

COST OF LIVING

Total expense of board, tuition and furnished room for regular school year (36 weeks) need not exceed $320, or for 48 weeks, $430.

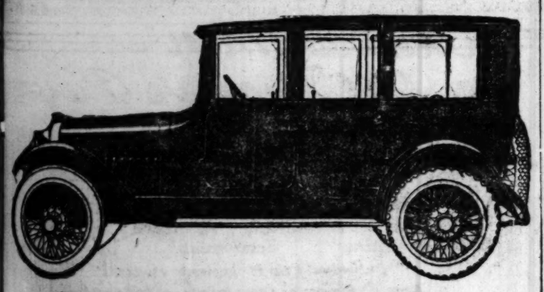
Oakland

OAKLAND OWNERS REPORT RETURNS OF FROM 16 TO 25 MILES PER GALLON OF GASOLINE AND FROM 8,000 TO 12,000 MILES ON TIRES



THE advantages to be gained from lightweight construction combined with high power receive greatest emphasis in the Oakland Sensible Six four door Sedan.

The car has the rugged strength to withstand the punishment of long and arduous use. The frame, for example, measures 6½ inches in depth, and forms an uncommonly strong support for the spacious body that rests upon it.

The forty-four horsepower developed by the Oakland overhead-valve engine is smoothly transmitted through double universal joints and tubular driveshaft. The car creeps with traffic in high gear or accelerates instantly at the touch of the throttle.

The satisfaction that is had from this strength and power, however, is not offset by high operating expense and maintenance costs, the Oakland Sensible Six Sedan being exceptionally sparing of gasoline, oil and tires.

It is a handsome car, designed for exacting day-in and day-out service, and fitted with every essential appointment contributing to riding and driving comfort.

MASTER OF THE GREAT HIGH WAYS

LIKE its namesake of the skies which requires no fixed orbit for its travels, the Comet Six negotiates all roads without discrimination. It breathes of that superability characteristic of things beyond Earthly control, yet its mechanism is so responsive that it immediately complies with every whim of the driver.

The Comet Six is built of the best standard units throughout, and is the only car of its price with a series 9-N Red Seal Continental motor. This is the largest six cylinder Continental motor built and is noted for its reliability and extreme quietness. Cars with this equipment are usually sold for $3000 to $4000.

The 125 inch wheelbase allows the comforts of spaciousness and only adds to the many other quality features that make the Comet Six—"A more for your money car."

Knowing that our price is right, we gladly quote it.

Teachers' Normal Training The demand for teachers and Director of Music in Schools and Colleges is much greater than we are able to fill. The positions pay good salaries under ideal conditions. The Columbia School of Music offers an excellent training and assists its graduates to secure these places through the School Employment Bureau. The course includes thorough and practical work in Elementary Teaching and Advanced Pedagogy by means of a comprehensive course of lectures on Psychology and Teaching as well as practical lessons on teaching both class and private as it applies to children's work. Classes are also held in History of Music, Dalcroze and Harmony. A novel feature of this course is the Model Practice School. In this school are more than two hundred children receiving instruction in Ear-Training, Sight Reading, Preliminary Technic and Dalcroze Eurythmics, under the direction of a Faculty teacher. Each Normal student is required to attend these classes every Saturday morning through the School Year.

"Experience is the name so many people give to their mistakes"

There was a time when raw office material was left to get "experience" blindly, when previous training for accuracy was not required. That time is no more. "Experience" today, is the ability, through training, to avoid mistakes.

Every firm has records to be filed. Associations, corporations, government offices have material to be filed—correspondence, orders, invoices, pamphlets, trade catalogs, public documents, books, etc.

Business men have learned that the best filing system they can purchase and install may be spoiled by poor file clerks.

There are positions in the filing world for grammar school graduates, high school graduates, college graduates, experienced clerical workers and librarians.

Trained Men Get Higher Pay

Hon. F. A. Vanderlip says: "The changed scope, character and methods of modern business have united to demand men with a training superior to anything that was ever needed before. The practical school of experience is too wasteful as a teacher of general principles. The new conditions demand a superior training such as only the schools can give." The Test for Quality

You feel of a fabric, you listen to the golden tone of a musical instrument, you live in a book—and you judge of a school.

That judgment you base upon the type of student body attracted to its classrooms, its reputation among the general public, and upon the special reputation its graduates have created in the minds of business men, whose word, in the end, must carry deepest conviction. There is, too, a subtle satisfaction, not accounted for by reasoning, in allying oneself with what instinctively seems best.

Gregg School, home of Gregg shorthand and its business training associates, welcomes an investigation, secure in the quality of its teaching and the fruitfulness of its results.

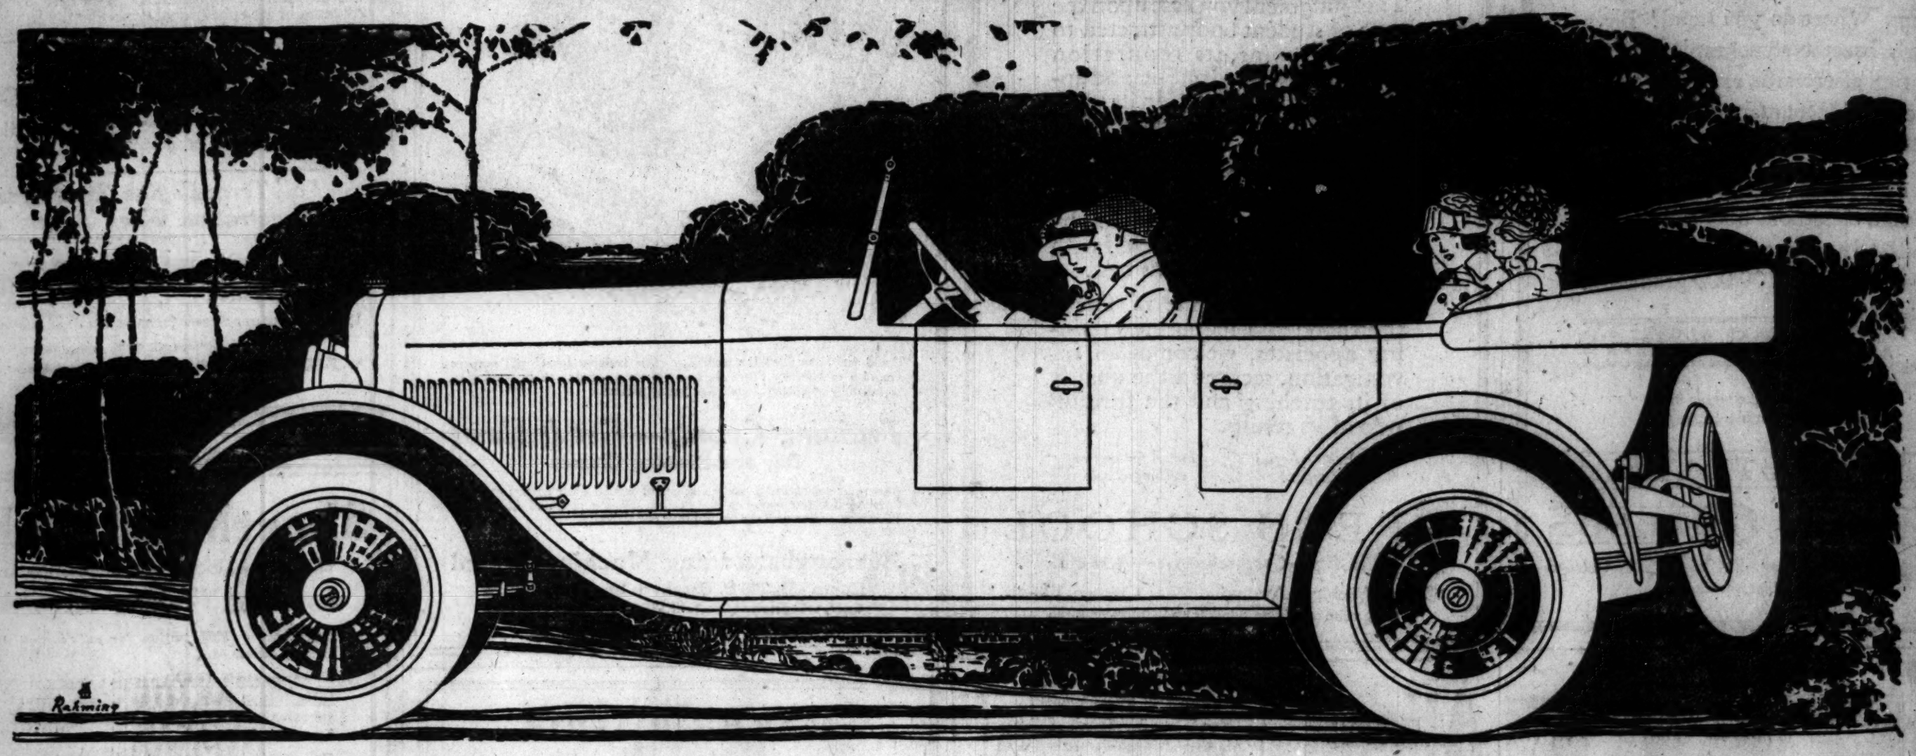
CHANDLER SIX



Demand for this Closely Priced Fine Car is Greatest in Chandler History

YOU who want to invest your money wisely in an automobile must be interested in the Chandler Six. Chandler price policy—price based upon production costs and a fair profit, and nothing else—has always attracted the attention of careful buyers. And now in 1920, with demand and production greater than ever before, this Chandler policy places the Chandler Six in a still more commanding position.

Today the Chandler is almost without competition in the field of medium-priced fine cars. Cars that were selling two years ago at within fifty or a hundred dollars of the Chandler, are listed today at hundreds more. A continuous demand beyond possible supply has never marked up a Chandler price.

And the Chandler Six is a big, handsome car. It pleases the most exacting, alike for the beauty and comfort of its fine bodies as for the proven excellence of its standard chassis construction.

The six body types are exceptionally graceful of line and highly finished, combining to a most happy degree, a sincere consideration for your comfort.

The seats are deep and restful, tilted to just the proper comfort-point, and offering a roominess well in excess of the stated passenger capacity. Upholstery is of genuine hand-buffed leather in the open models and of a high-grade silk-plush material in the closed models. The arrangement of gear shift, of brake and clutch, as of the instrument board fittings, extend an invitation to you to "take the wheel."

By constant development and refinement through a period of seven years, the one standard chassis, distinguished for its really marvelous motor, has been brought to a state of approximate perfection.

And in these years, many cars of many kinds and many motors loudly heralded, have come and gone or fallen back into their rightful rank.

In all, the Chandler offers you everything that any one could ask for, and at a price that recognizes no competition.

Executives and Managers.

SITUATION WTD—I HAVE OUTGROWN MY present connection; my employers will tell you so and heartily recommend me for bigger things.
College, university and law school education; 3 years' business experience abroad speaking and reading several languages; 10 years training and experience in this country in every branch of advertising and sales promotion with excellent record behind me. Also completely at home in export work.
I am just over 40, in splendid health, energetic and with a large capacity for hard work. Married and of American ancestry.
Am at present advertising and Sales Promotion Manager of a well known firm manufacturing electrical machinery. Free Oct. 1st. earlier if really necessary. I am looking for a big position having a big future, which will tax my resources and energies to the utmost. Salary I within reason, of course I am entirely subordinate to future prospects, but this future must be one that is not too far away and must depend solely upon my own ability to win it. Address E 373, Tribune.

SITUATION WTD—FOR THE LAST TEN years I have been connected with three very prominent advertising agencies, and in these connections I have been in daily contact with the executive of big representative institutions relating to their advertising and sales work.
I have sold the idea of national advertising and the service that my agency had to offer to manufacturers and then successfully worked out their selling and advertising plans.
After finishing school I had 2 years' banking experience, as secretary to the cashier; 2 years' manufacturing accounting; 2 years office management, so that I feel I have a well rounded out business training to offer any business institution.
I have a good position, but have concluded to get into a business where I can become an important part in the building up of that business. I would not object to leaving Chicago; neither have I any specific business in mind. Address D 494, Tribune.

SITUATION WTD—AN EXECUTIVE ASSISTANT.
If you are a high-powered, busy executive with a crowded day that demands the able, conscientious services of a assistant of more than ordinary ability to keep your department running at maximum efficiency you should investigate my qualifications. I can offer.
Fifteen years of banking, sales and managerial experience in positions of trust and responsibility with organizations of note. Good executive. Excellent presence and a hard worker. Age 36. Only a big man can afford to pay me what I will be worth to him. Are you that man? If so, address D 490, Tribune.

SITUATION WTD—SALES AND CORRespondence manager, has had exceptional training in the canned foods line, desires connection with house of unquestionable standing and financial strength.
Am married, 37 years old, good education, irreproachable character and habits; have point of vantage and adaptable to any conditions and methods; can furnish credentials as to character and qualifications; finally, a position where personal advancement is determined by one's ability more essential than initial salary; only those who can furnish a permanent proposition need answer. Address D 89, Tribune.

WHY IS A CROW?

Cause

The cause of the acute shortage of homes and the continuous increase of your rent is due to the fact that very few homes were built during the war, and even less since the armistice. But the population of Chicago has greatly increased, and will no doubt continue increasing. These facts alone prove that there can be no reduction of rents as long as the shortage exists, and it is up to you and a great many others to figure on building your own home.

We have a very liberal plan that enables you to get Your Own Home at a monthly basis no greater than the rent you are now paying. The neighborhood is all that you could ask for. The transportation—L and surface lines—stores, schools, churches, and shows close by.

It's a Regular Place

A RENT PROFITEER

Is much to be despised, BUT is he as much to blame as the person who fails to take advantage of an opportunity to secure his own home? Look back over your past life and answer the question yourself. Then answer this notice. A nominal payment down and the rest like rent. We will build for you and save you from $1,000 to $2,000. Near L station and surface car service. Close to business section. In beautiful Albany Park. Schols, theaters, churches, etc. Fill out our coupon and receive further particulars.

STOP!

This is not the time to build a home; wait a year. We know that building material is coming down, and a little time will mean a saving to you of $2,000 to $3,000. Now is the proper time to select a home site. We have choice spots on the Northwest Side, in the Ravenswood section. Property is near schools, theaters, parks, all kinds, and also the finest transportation. Next year we will build you a bungalow or a 2 flat house and you will have time and pay for it on a monthly installment plan, just as you pay for rent in a flat. Some of these home sites are $10 per month. For further information address A Y 517, Tribune.

FOR SALE—NOTICE, RENTERS.
Let us build you a home in Chicago's most beautiful Northwest Side subdivision; partial payment plan as rent; twenty minutes to the loop; three lines of transportation; fifty new buildings just completed; ten under construction; this is a high class, highly restricted proposition; only people of character who can give best references need answer. Address D Y 37, Tribune.

FOR SALE—AT WAUKEGAN, AN OLD RESidential section of 170 ft. west frontage on Sheridan-rd., with a depth of over 1,100 ft., with beautiful shade trees, grape vines, and some virgin timber; also a 10 rm. attrac. res. and large barn or garage, both of which need extensive repairs, but the house would be livable with little expense, although if thoroughly modernized it would be a very attractive home.
This place with its extra large lot and choice loc. on Sheridan-rd. should appeal to some one wanting an old fashioned place with ample room for garden, flowers, pasture for a cow, room for chickens, etc. Land alone should be worth the price of $15,000.

FOR SALE—80 ACRES OF SKOKIE MEAdow land, including about 15 acres of beautiful timber and adjoining the new Northshore Golf club at Ravinia, having a 1,700 age on both the county line and Clavey-rd.
The Forest Preserve, Golf Clubs and Park
Districts are taking things away from the Shore acres out of the market for practically all time. This land of mine is within walk-in distances of both golf clubs and stations.
Has deep rich black soil and when the Skokie is properly drained will have a consuming value. Worthy of your considera-

100,000 TIRES Standard Make

MUST BE SOLD AT ONCE.

65% OFF COST
SEND NO MONEY.

Our tremendous summer stock of tires must be sold at this big sacrifice in prices. These standard make tires are practically new, only slightly used on demonstration cars. Not to be compared with double treads or seconds. Thousands of motorists use our tires exclusively because they get up to 8,000 miles out of them. Take advantage of this exceptional offering, and stock up a whole year's supply.
